

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

The seal of the Harvard Divinity School is a circular emblem. It features a central shield with a vertical line down the middle. On the left side of the shield is a book with the word 'VERI' on it, and on the right side is another book with the word 'TAS' on it. Above the shield, the word 'ET' is written. The shield is surrounded by a circular border containing the text 'HARVARDIANA' at the top, 'IN NOV-ANG' at the bottom, and 'ACADEMIA' on the left and 'CHRISTO ECCLESIAE' on the right. A small cross is located at the bottom center of the border.

FROM

R. Peters, Jun.

3 2044 097 077

Digitized by Google

CHASE AND STUART'S CLASSICAL SERIES.

M. TULLII CICERONIS

CATO MAJOR DE SENECTUTE,

LAELIUS DE AMICITIA.

With Explanatory Notes.

BY

E. P. CROWELL,

MOORE PROFESSOR OF LATIN,

AND

H. B. RICHARDSON,

INSTRUCTOR IN LATIN,
IN AMHERST COLLEGE.

PHILADELPHIA:
ELDREDGE & BROTHER,
17 North Seventh Street.
1872.

LICIT
010
2.872

Harvard College Library

FROM

R. Peters, Jun.

CHASE AND STUART'S CLASSICAL SERIES.

M. TULLII CICERONIS

CATO MAJOR DE SENECTUTE,

LAELIUS DE AMICITIA.

With Explanatory Notes.

BY

E. P. CROWELL,

MOORE PROFESSOR OF LATIN,

AND

H. B. RICHARDSON,

INSTRUCTOR IN LATIN,
IN AMHERST COLLEGE.

PHILADELPHIA:
ELDREDGE & BROTHER,
17 North Seventh Street.
1872.

EdyeT 1010. 290. 872

R. Peters, jun

Entered, according to Act of Congress, in the year 1871, by ELDREDGE & BROTHER,
in the Office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington.

J. FAGAN & SON,
ELECTROTYPERS, PHILAD'A.

CAXTON PRESS OF SHERMAN & CO.

PREFACE.

THE text of this edition of the De Senectute and De Amicitia is that of Baiter, in the Tauchnitz series of Cicero's works edited by Baiter and Kayser, and published in 1864, the merits of which are well known. With this have been carefully compared the various readings given in the Annotatio Critica of that work, and the text of Orelli's edition revised since his death by Halm (Zurich, 1861). In only a very few instances, however, has the reading of Baiter been exchanged for any other; while in all cases in which there is any important difference, the readings of other critical authorities have been cited in the Notes.

In conformity with the general plan of this series of classical text-books, the chief design of the Notes is to furnish the pupil with such assistance in understanding the language and the thought of the author, as is actually needed at that stage of study at which these essays are usually read. In the work of preparing them, free use has been made of several German and English commentaries, as well as of other works, of which a full list is given on page 70, and to each of which credit is given in the Notes.

To suit the preferences of teachers for different grammars, parallel references to the five manuals in use i-different sections of the country have been inserted, so far as was found practicable. And wherever these have not contained a sufficient explanation of forms or constructions, the statements of Madvig and Zumpt have been quoted or referred to.

For the benefit of those students who do not have access to the larger classical dictionaries and historical works, the numerous biographical and historical allusions have been more fully explained than would otherwise have been deemed necessary. A brief introduction has also been prefixed to the Notes on each essay, to which has been added an outline of the course of thought.

As no American edition of the Cato Major and Laelius has appeared since that of Dillaway in 1837, and of Anthon in 1848, it is hoped that the one now submitted to the public may, in part at least, meet what has seemed to be a real demand on the part of classical instructors and students, even with the defects which teachers of riper scholarship and larger experience may detect in it.

AMHERST COLLEGE, July 31, 1871.

M. TULLII CICERONIS
C A T O M A J O R
DE SENECTUTE

AD T. POMPONIIUM ATTICUM.

I. O TITE, si quid te adjuero curamve levasso, Quae nunc te coquit et versat in pectore fixa, Ecquid erit praemi?

Licet enim mihi versibus iisdem affari te, Attice, quibus affatur Flaminium 5

Ille vir haud magna cum re, sed plenus fidei :
quamquam certo scio, non, ut Flaminium,

Sollicitari te, Tite, sic noctesque diesque ;

novi enim moderationem animi tui et aequitatem, teque non cognomen solum Athenis deportasse, sed 10 humanitatem et prudentiam intelligo. Et tamen te suspicio iisdem rebus, quibus me ipsum, interdum gravius commoveri ; quarum consolatio et major est et in aliud tempus differenda. Nunc autem visum est mihi de senectute aliquid ad te conscribere. Hoc 15 enim onére, quod mihi commune tecum est, aut jam urgentis aut certe adventantis senectutis et te et me ipsum levare volo : etsi te quidem id modice ac sapienter, sicut omnia, et ferre et laturum esse certo scio.
Sed mihi, quum de senectute vellem aliquid scribere, 20

tu occurrebas dignus eo munere, quo uterque nostrum communiter uteretur. Mihi quidem ita jucunda hujus libri confectio fuit, ut non modo omnes abstergerit senectutis molestias, sed effecerit mollem etiam
 5 et jucundam senectutem. Numquam igitur laudari satis digne philosophia poterit, cui qui pareat omne tempus aetatis sine molestia possit degere. Sed de ceteris et diximus multa et saepe dicemus: hunc librum ad te de senectute misimus. Omnem autem
 10 sermonem tribuimus non Tithono, ut Aristo Ceus, — parum enim esset auctoritatis in fabula, — sed M. Catoni seni, quo majorem auctoritatem haberet oratio: apud quem Laelium et Scipionem facimus admirantes, quod is tam facile senectutem ferat, iisque eum re-
 15 spondentem. Qui si eruditius videbitur disputare quam consuevit ipse in suis libris, attribuito litteris Graecis, quarum constat eum perstudiosum fuisse in senectute. Sed quid opus est plura? Jam enim ipsius Catonis sermo explicabit nostram omnem de 20 senectute sententiam.

II. SCIPIO. Saepenumero admirari soleo cum hoc C. Laelio quum ceterarum rerum tuam excellentem, M. Cato, perfectamque sapientiam, tum vel maxime quod numquam tibi senectutem gravem esse senserim, 25 quæ plerisque senibus sic odiosa est, ut onus se Aetna gravius dicant sustinere.

CATO. Rem haud sane, Scipio et Laeli, difficilem admirari videmini. Quibus enim nihil est in ipsis opis ad bene beateque vivendum, iis omnis aetas 30 gravis est; qui autem omnia bona a se ipsis petunt, iis nihil potest malum videri quod naturae necessitas afferat. Quo in genere est in primis senectus, quam ut adipiscantur omnes optant, eandem accusant adepti: tanta est stultitiae inconstantia atque perversitas. Ob-35 repere aiunt eam citius quam putavissent. Primum, quis coegit eos falsum putare? Qui enim citius adolescentiae senectus, quam pueritiae adolescentia obrepit? Deinde, qui minus gravis esset iis senectus, si octingentesimum annum agerent, quam si octogesi-mum? praeterita enim aetas quamvis longa quum effluxisset, nulla consolatio permulcere posset stultam senectutem. Quocirca si sapientiam meam admirari soletis, — quae utinam digna esset opinione vestra nostroque cognomine! — in hoc sumus sapientes, quod naturam optimam ducem tamquam deum sequimur eique paremus; a qua non veri simile est, quum ceterae partes aetatis bene discriptae sint, extremum actum tamquam ab inerti poeta esse neglectum. Sed tamen necesse fuit esse aliquid extremum et, tamquam in arborum bacis terraeque fructibus, maturitate tempestiva quasi vietum et caducum; quod ferendum est molliter sapienti. Quid est enim aliud gigantum modo bellare cum dis, nisi naturae repugnare? 5

LAELIUS. Atqui, Cato, gratissimum nobis, ut etiam pro Scipione pollicear, feceris, si, quoniam speramus, volumus quidem certe senes fieri, multo ante a te didicerimus, quibus facillime rationibus ingravescentem aetatem ferre possimus. 15

CATO. Faciam vero, Laeli, praesertim si utrique vestrum, ut dicis, gratum futurum est. 20

LAELIUS. Volumus sane, nisi molestum est, Cato, tamquam longam aliquam viam confeceris, quam nobis quoque ingrediundum sit, istuc, quo pervenisti, videre quale sit. 25

III. CATO. Faciam, ut potero, Laeli. Saepe enim interfui querelis aequalium meorum — pares autem vetere proverbio cum paribus facillime congregantur —, quae C. Salinator, quae Sp. Albinus, homines consulares, nostri fere aequales, deplorare solebant, tum quod voluptatibus carerent, sine quibus vitam nullam putarent, tum quod spernerentur ab iis, a quibus essent coli soliti. Qui mihi non id videbantur accusare, quod esset accusandum. Nam si id culpa senectutis accideret, eadem mihi usu venirent reliquisque omnibus maioribus natu, quorum ego multorum cognovi senectutem sine querela, qui se et libidinum vinculis laxatos esse non moleste ferrent, nec a suis despicerentur. Sed omnium istiusmodi 35 querelarum in moribus est culpa, non in aetate. Moderati enim et nec difficiles nec inhumani senes tolerabilem senectutem agunt; importunitas autem et inhumanitas omni aetati molesta est.

- 5 LAELIŪS. Est, ut dicis, Cato; sed fortasse dixerit quispiam tibi propter opes et copias et dignitatem tuam tolerabiliorem senectutem videri, id autem non posse multis contingere.

- 10 CATO. Est istud quidem, Laeli, aliquid, sed nequam in isto sunt omnia. Ut Themistocles fertur Seriphio cuidam in iurgio respondisse, quum ille dixisset non eum sua, sed patriae gloria splendorem assecutum: Nec hercule, inquit, si ego Seriphius essem, nec tu, si Atheniensis, clarus umquam fuisses. Quod 15 eodem modo de senectute dici potest. Nec enim in summa inopia levis esse senectus potest, ne sapienti quidem, nec insipienti etiam in summa copia non gravis. Aptissima omnino sunt, Scipio et Laeli, arma senectutis artes exercitationesque virtutum, 20 quae in omni aetate cultae, quum diu multumque vixeris, mirificos efferunt fructus, non solum quia numquam deserunt, ne extremo quidem tempore aetatis—quamquam id quidem maximum est—, verum etiam quia conscientia bene actae vitae multo-25 rumque bene factorum recordatio jucundissima est.

- IV. Ego Q. Maximum, [eum qui Tarentum recepit,] senem adolescens ita dilexi, ut aequalem. Erat enim in illo viro comitate condita gravitas, nec senectus mores mutaverat; quamquam eum colere 30 coepi non admodum grandem natu, sed tamen jam aetate provectum. Anno enim post consul primum fuerat quam ego natus sum, cumque eo quartum consule adolescentulus miles ad Capuam profectus sum, quintoque anno post ad Tarentum. Quaestor deinde 35 quadriennio post factus sum, quem magistratum gessi consulibus Tuditano et Cethego, quum quidem ille admodum senex suasor legis Cinciae de donis et muneribus fuit. Hic et bella gerebat ut adolescens, quum plane grandis esset, et Hannibalem juveniliter exsultantem patientia sua mollebat; de quo praeclare familiaris noster Ennius:

Unus homo nobis cunctando restituit rem;
Noenum rumores ponebat ante salutem:
Ergo postque magisque viri nunc gloria claret.

5

Tarentum vero qua vigilantia, quo consilio recepit! quum quidem me audiente Salinatori, qui amisso oppido fugerat in arcem, glorianti atque ita dicenti, Mea opera, Q. Fabi, Tarentum recepisti, Certe, inquit ridens, nam, nisi tu amisisses, numquam recepissem. 10 Nec vero in armis praestantior quam in toga; qui consul iterum, Sp. Carvilio collega quiescente, C. Flaminio tribuno plebis, quoad potuit, restitit agrum Picentem et Gallicum viritim contra senatus auctoritatem dividenti; augurque quum esset, dicere ausus 15 est optimis auspiciis ea geri, quae pro rei publicae salute gererentur; quae contra rem publicam ferrentur, contra auspicia ferri. Multa in eo viro praeclara cognovi, sed nihil admirabilius quam quo modo ille mortem filii tulit, clari viri et consularis. Est in 20 manibus laudatio; quam quum legimus, quem philosophum non contemnimus? Nec vero ille in luce modo atque in oculis civium magnus, sed intus domique praestantior. Qui sermo, quae praecepta! quanta notitia antiquitatis, scientia juris augurii! Multae 25 etiam, ut in homine Romano, litterae. Omnia memoria tenebat, non domestica solum, sed etiam externa bella. Cujus sermone ita tum cupide fruebar, quasi jam divinarem id, quod evenit, illo extincto, fore unde discerem neminem. 30

V. Quorsus igitur haec tam multa de Maximo? Quia profecto videtis nefas esse dictu, miseram fuisse talem senectutem. Nec tamen omnes possunt esse Scipiones aut Maximi, ut urbium expugnationes, ut pedestres navalesve pugnas, ut bella a se gesta, ut 35 triumphos recordentur. Est etiam quiete et pure atque eleganter actae aetatis placida ac lenis senectus, qualem accepimus Platonis, qui uno et octogesimo

- anno scribens est mortuus; qualem Isocratis, qui eum librum, qui Panathenaicus inscribitur, quarto et nonagesimo anno scripsisse se dicit vixitque quinquennium postea; cujus magister Leontinus Gorgias 5 centum et septem complevit annos neque umquam in suo studio atque opere cessavit; qui, quum ex eo quaereretur, cur tam diu vellet esse in vita, Nihil habeo, inquit, quod accusem senectutem. Praeclarum responsum et docto homine dignum. Sua enim vitia 10 insipientes et suam culpam in senectutem conferunt; quod non faciebat is, cujus modo mentionem feci, Ennius:

Sicut fortis equus, spatio qui saepe supremo
Vicit Olympia, nunc senio confectus quiescit.

- 15 Equi fortis et victoris senectuti comparat suam. Quem quidem probe meminisse potestis. Anno enim undevicesimo post ejus mortem hi consules, T. Flamininus et M'. Acilius, facti sunt; ille autem Caepione et Philippo iterum consulibus mortuus est, quum ego 20 quinque et sexaginta annos natus legem Voconiam magna voce et bonis lateribus suasissem. Annos septuaginta natus — tot enim vixit Ennius — ita ferebat duo quae maxima putantur onera, paupertatem et senectutem, ut iis paene delectari videretur. 25 Etenim, quum complector animo, quattuor reperio causas, cur senectus misera videatur: unam, quod avocet a rebus gerendis; alteram, quod corpus faciat infirmius; tertiam, quod privet omnibus fere voluptatibus; quartam, quod haud procul absit a morte. 30 Earum, si placet, causarum quanta quamque sit justa unaquaque videamus.

- VI. A rebus gerendis senectus abstrahit. Quibus? An iis, quae juventute geruntur et viribus? Nullaene igitur res sunt seniles, quae vel infirmis corporibus 35 animo tamen administrentur? Nihil ergo agebat Q. Maximus, nihil L. Paulus, pater tuus, socer optimi viri, filii mei? Ceteri senes, Fabricii, Curii, Coruncanii, quum rem publicam consilio et auctoritate defendebant, nihil agebant? Ad Appii Claudii senectutem accedebat etiam, ut caecus esset; tamen is, quum sententia Senatus inclinaret ad pacem cum Pyrrho foedusque faciendum, non dubitavit dicere illa, quae versibus persecutus est Ennius:

5

Quo vobis mentes, rectae quae stare solebant
Antehac, dementes sese flexere viai?

ceteraque gravissime: notum enim vobis carmen est; etiam ipsius Appii exstat oratio. Atque haec ille egit septimo decimo anno post alterum consulatum, quum 10 inter duos consulatus anni decem interfuissent, censorque ante superiorem consulatum fuisset; ex quo intelligitur, Pyrrhi bello grandem sane fuisse: et tamen sic a patribus accepimus. Nihil igitur afferunt, qui in re gerenda versari senectutem negant, [simi- 15 lesque sunt] ut si qui gubernatorem in navigando nihil agere dicant, quum alii malos scandant, alii per foros cursent, alii sentinam exhaustiant, ille clavum tenens quietus sedeat in puppi. Non facit ea, quae juvenes; at vero majora et meliora facit. Non viri- 20 bus aut velocitate aut celeritate corporum res magnae geruntur, sed consilio, auctoritate, sententia; quibus non modo non orhari, sed etiam augeri senectus solet. Nisi forte ego vobis, qui et miles et tribunus et legatus et consul versatus sum in vario genere bellorum, ces- 25 sare nunc videor, quum bella non gero. At senatui, quae sint gerenda, praescribo, et quomodo; Karthagini male jam diu cogitanti bellum multo ante denuntio, de qua vereri non ante desinam, quam illam excisam esse cognovero. Quam palmam utinam di 30 immortales, Scipio, tibi reservent, ut avi reliquias persequare! cujus a morte sextus hic et tricesimus annus est; sed memoriam illius viri omnes excipient anni consequentes. Anno ante me censorem mortuus est, novem annis post meum consulatum, quum consul 35 iterum me consule creatus esset. Num igitur, si ad centesimum annum vixisset, senectutis eum suae paeniteret? Nec enim excursione nec saltu nec eminus hastis aut comminus gladiis uteretur, sed consilio, ratione, sententia: quae nisi essent in senibus, non summum consilium majores nostri appellassent senatum. Apud Lacedaemonios quidem ii, qui amplissimum magistratum gerunt, ut sunt, sic etiam nominantur senes. Quod si legere aut audire voletis externa, maximas res publicas ab adolescentibus labefactatas, a senibus sustentatas et restitutas reperietis.

10 Cedo, qui vestram rem publicam tantam amisistis tam cito?

Sic enim percontantur, ut est in Naevii poetae Ludo. Respondentur et alia et hoc in primis:

Proveniebant oratores novi, stulti adolescentuli.

Temeritas est videlicet florentis aetatis, prudentia 15 senescentis.

VII. At memoria minuitur. Credo, nisi eam exerceas aut etiam si sis natura tardior. Themistocles omnium civium perceperat nomina. Num igitur censetis eum, quum aetate processisset, qui 20 Aristides esset, Lysimachum salutare solitum? Equidem non modo eos novi, qui sunt, sed eorum patres etiam et avos; nec sepulcra legens vereor, quod aiunt, ne memoriam perdam; his enim ipsis legendis in memoriam redeo mortuorum. Nec vero quemquam
25 senem audiivi oblitum, quo loco thesaurum obruisset. Omnia quae curant meminerunt, vadimonia constituta, qui sibi, cui ipsi debeant. Quid jurisconsulti, quid pontifices, quid augures, quid philosophi senes? quam multa meminerunt! Manent ingenia senibus, 30 modo permaneat studium et industria, neque ea solum in claris et honoratis viris, sed in vita etiam privata et quieta. Sophocles ad summam senectutem tragoedias fecit; quod propter studium quum rem negligere familiarem videretur, a filiis in iudicium vocatus est, 35 ut, quemadmodum nostro more male rem gerentibus patribus bonis interdici solet, sic illum quasi desipien-

tem a re familiari removerent iudices. Tum senex dicitur eam fabulam, quam in manibus habebat et proxime scripserat, Oedipum Coloneum, recitasse iudicibus quaesisseque, num illud carmen desipientis videretur. Quo recitato sententiis iudicum est liberatus. Num igitur hunc, num Homerum, num Hesiodum, Simonidem, Stesichorum, num quos ante dixi, Isocraten, Gorgian, num philosophorum principes, Pythagoram, Democritum, num Platonem, num Xenocraten, num postea Zenonem, Cleanthem, aut¹⁰ eum, quem vos etiam vidistis Romae, Diogenem Stoicum, coegit in suis studiis obmutescere senectus? an in omnibus his studiorum agitatio vitae aequalis fuit? Age, ut ista divina studia omittamus, possum nominare ex agro Sabino rusticos Romanos, vicinos¹⁵ et familiares meos, quibus absentibus numquam fere ulla in agro maiora opera fiunt, non serendis, non percipiendis, non condendis fructibus. Quamquam in his minus hoc mirum est; nemo enim est tam senex, qui se annum non putet posse vivere; sed²⁰ iidem in iis elaborant, quae sciunt nihil ad se omnino pertinere:

Serit arbores, quae alteri saeculo prosint, ut ait Statius noster in Synephebis. Nec vero dubitat agricola, quamvis sit senex, quaerenti, cui serat,²⁵ respondere: Dis immortalibus, qui me non accipere modo haec a maioribus voluerunt, sed etiam posteris prodere.

VIII. Et melius Caecilius de sene alteri saeculo prospiciente, quam illud idem: 30

Edepol, senectus, si nil quidquam aliud viti
Apportes tecum, quum advenis, unum id sat est,
Quod diu vivendo multa, quae non volt, videt.

Et multa fortasse, quae volt; atque in ea, quae non volt, saepe etiam adolescentia incurrit. Illud vero³⁵ idem Caecilius vitiosius:

Tum equidem in senecta hoc deputo miserrimum,
Sentire ea aetate ipsum esse odiosum alteri.

- Jucundum potius quam odiosum ! Ut enim adolescentibus bona indole praeditis sapientes senes delectantur, leviorque fit senectus eorum, qui a juventute coluntur et diliguntur, sic adolescentes senum praeceptis gaudent, quibus ad virtutum studia ducuntur. Nec minus intelligo me vobis quam mihi vos esse jucundos. Sed videtis, ut senectus non modo languida atque iners non sit, verum etiam sit operosa et semper agens aliquid et moliens, tale scilicet, quale cujusque studium in superiore vita fuit. Quid, qui etiam addiscunt aliquid? ut et Solonem versibus gloriantem videmus, qui se quotidie aliquid addiscentem dicit senem fieri, et ego feci, qui litteras Graecas senex didici; quas quidem sic avidè arripui, quasi diuturnam sitim explere cupiens, ut ea ipsa mihi nota essent, quibus me nunc exemplis uti videtis. Quod quum fecisse Socratem in fidibus audirem, vellem equidem etiam illud — discebant enim fidibus antiqui —, sed in litteris certe elaboravi.
- 20 IX. Nec nunc quidem vires desidero adolescentis — is enim erat locus alter de vitiis senectutis —, non plus, quam adolescens tauri aut elephantì desiderabam. Quod est, eo decet uti et, quidquid agas, agere pro viribus. Quae enim vox potest esse contemptior
- 25 quam Milonis Crotoniatae? qui, quum jam senex esset, athletasque se exercentes in curriculo videret, aspexisse lacertos suos dicitur illacrimansque dixisse: At hi quidem mortui jam sunt. Non vero tam isti quam tu ipse, nugator; neque enim ex te umquam es
- 30 nobilitatus, sed ex lateribus et lacertis tuis. Nihil Sex. Aelius tale, nihil multis annis ante Ti. Coruncanius, nihil modo P. Crassus, a quibus jura civibus praescribebantur, quorum usque ad extremum spiritum est provecta prudentia. Orator metuo ne lan-
- 35 guescat senectute; est enim munus ejus non ingenii solum, sed laterum etiam et virium. Omnino canorum illud in voce splendescit etiam nescio quo pacto in senectute, quod equidem adhuc non amisi, et videtis annos. Sed tamen est decorus senis sermo quietus et remissus, facitque persaepe ipsa sibi audientiam disertis senis composita et mitis oratio. Quam si ipse exsequi nequeas, possis tamen Scipioni praecipere et Laelio. Quid enim est jucundius senectute stipata studiis juventutis? An ne eas quidem vires senectuti relinquimus, ut adolescentes doceat, instituat, ad omne officii munus instruat? quo quidem opere quid potest esse praeclarius? Mihi vero et Cn. et P. Scipiones et avi tui duo, L. Aemilius et P. Africanus, comitatu nobilium juvenum fortunati videbantur; nec ulli bonarum artium magistri non beati putandi, quamvis consenuerint vires atque defecerint. Etsi ipsa ista defectio virium adolescentiae vitium efficitur saepius quam senectutis; libidinosa enim et intemperans adolescentia effetum corpus tradit senectuti. Cyrus quidem apud Xenophontem eo sermone quem moriens habuit, quum admodum senex esset, negat se umquam sensisse senectutem suam imbecilliolem factam quam adolescentia fuisset. Ego L. Metellum memini puer, qui, quum quadriennio post alterum consulatum pontifex maximus factus esset, viginti duos annos ei sacerdotio praefuit, ita bonis esse viribus extremo tempore aetatis, ut adolescentiam non requireret. Nihil necesse est mihi de me ipso dicere; quamquam est id quidem senile aetatique nostrae conceditur.

X. Videtisne ut apud Homerum saepissime Nestor de virtutibus suis praedicet? Tertiam enim jam aetatem hominum vivebat, nec erat ei verendum, ne vera praedicans de se nimis videretur aut insolens aut loquax. Etenim, ut ait Homerus, ex ejus lingua melle dulcior fluebat oratio. Quam ad suavitatem nullis egebat corporis viribus. Et tamen dux ille Graeciae nusquam optat, ut Ajacis similes habeat decem, sed ut Nestoris; quod si sibi acciderit, non dubitat quin brevi sit Troja peritura. Sed redeo ad me. Quartum ago annum et octogesimum; vellem equidem idem possem gloriari, quod Cyrus; sed tamen hoc quoque dicere, non me quidem iis esse viribus, quibus aut miles bello Punico aut quaestor eodem bello aut consul in Hispania fuerim aut quadriennio post, quum tribunus militaris depugnavi apud Thermopylas, M'. Glabrione consule; sed tamen, ut vos

5 videtis, non plane me enervavit, non afflixit senectus; non curia vires meas desiderat, non rostra, non amici, non clientes, non hospites. Nec enim umquam sum assensus veteri illi laudatoque proverbio, quod monet, mature fieri senem, si diu velis senex esse. Ego vero
10 me minus diu senem esse malletm, quam esse senem ante quam essem. Itaque nemo adhuc convenire me voluit, cui fuerim occupatus. At minus habeo virium, quam vestrum utervis. Ne vos quidem T. Pontii centurionis vires habetis: num idcirco est ille prae-
15 stantior? Moderatio modo virium adsit, et tantum, quantum potest quisque, nitatur; ne ille non magno desiderio tenebitur virium. Olympiae per stadium ingressus esse Milo dicitur, quum humeris sustineret bovem. Utrum igitur has corporis an Pythagorae
20 tibi malis vires ingenii dari? Denique isto bono utare, dum adsit; quum absit, ne requiras; nisi forte adolescentes pueritiam, paulum aetate progressi adolescentiam debent requirere. Cursus est certus aetatis et una via naturae eaque simplex, suaeque cuique
25 parti aetatis tempestivitas est data, ut et infirmitas puerorum et ferocitas juvenum et gravitas jam constantis aetatis et senectutis maturitas naturale quiddam habeat, quod suo tempore percipi debeat. Audire te arbitror, Scipio, hospes tuus avitus Masinissa
30 quae faciat hodie, nonaginta natus annos; quum ingressus iter pedibus sit, in equum omnino non ascendere, quum autem equo, ex equo non descendere; nullo imbri, nullo frigore adduci, ut capite operto sit; summam esse in eo corporis siccitatem;
35 itaque omnia exsequi regis officia et munera. Potest igitur exercitatio et temperantia etiam in senectute conservare aliquid pristini roboris.

XI. Ne sint in senectute vires. Ne postulantur quidem vires a senectute. Ergo et legibus et insti-tutis vacat aetas nostra muneribus iis, quae non possunt sine viribus sustineri. Itaque non modo quod non possumus, sed ne quantum possumus quidem cogimur. At multi ita sunt imbecilli senes, ut nulum officii aut omnino vitae munus exsequi possint. 5 At id quidem non proprium senectutis vitium est, sed commune valetudinis. Quam fuit imbecillus P. Africani filius, is qui te adoptavit! quam tenui aut nulla potius valetudine! Quod ni ita fuisset, alterum illud exstitisset lumen civitatis; ad paternam enim 10 magnitudinem animi doctrina uberius accesserat. Quid mirum igitur in senibus, si infirmi sunt aliquando, quum id ne adolescentes quidem effugere possint? Resistendum, Laeli et Scipio, senectuti est, ejusque vitia diligentia compensanda sunt; pugnan- 15 dum tamquam contra morbum sic contra senectutem; habenda ratio valetudinis; utendum exercitationibus modicis; tantum cibi et potionis adhibendum, ut reficiantur vires, non opprimantur. Nec vero corpori solum subveniendum est, sed menti atque animo multo 20 magis; nam haec quoque, nisi tamquam lumini oleum instilles, extinguuntur senectute. Et corpora quidem exercitationum defatigatione ingravescent, animi autem exercitandis levantur. Nam quos ait Caecilius . 25

— comicos stultos senes,

hoc significat credulos, obliviosos, dissolutos; quae vitia sunt non senectutis, sed inertis, ignavae, somniculosae senectutis. Ut petulantia, ut libido magis 30 adolescentium quam senum, nec tamen omnium adolescentium, sed non proborum, sic ista senilis stultitia, quae deliratio appellari solet, senum levium est, non omnium. Quattuor robustos filios, quinque filias, tantam domum, tantas clientelas Appius regebat et caecus et senex; intentum enim animum tam- 35 quam arcum habebat, nec languescens succumbebat senectuti. Tenebat non modo auctoritatem, sed etiam imperium in suos; metuebant servi, verebantur liberi carum omnes habebant; vigeat in illa domo mos patrius et disciplina. Ita enim senectus honesta est si se ipsa defendit, si jus suum retinet, si nemini mancipata est, si usque ad ultimum spiritum domi-

5 natur in suos. Ut enim adolescentem, in quo est senile aliquid, sic senem, in quo est aliquid adolescentis, probō; quod qui sequitur, corpore senex esse poterit, animo numquam erit. Septimus mihi liber Originum est in manibus; omnia antiquitatis monumenta colligo; causarum illustrium, quascumque
10 defendi, nunc quum maxime conficio orationes; jus augurium, pontificium, civile tracto; multum etiam Graecis litteris utor, Pythagoreorumque more exercendae memoriae gratia, quid quoque die dixerim, 15 audierim, egerim, commemoro vesperi. Hae sunt exercitationes ingenii, haec curricula mentis; in his desudans atque elaborans corporis vires non magno opere desidero. Adsum amicis; venio in senatum frequens, ultroque afferō res multum et diu cogita-
20 tas, easque tueor animi, non corporis viribus. Quas si exsequi nequirem, tamen me lectulus meus oblectaret ea ipsa cogitantem, quae jam agere non possem; sed ut possim facit acta vita. Semper enim in his studiis laboribusque viventi non intelligitur, quando
25 obrepat senectus. Ita sensim sine sensu aetas senescit, nec subito frangitur, sed diuturnitate exstinguitur.

XII. Sequitur tertia vituperatio senectutis, quod eam carere dicunt voluptatibus. O praeclarum munus aetatis, si quidem id aufert a nobis, quod est in adolescentia vitiosissimum! Accipite enim, optimi ad-
30 lescentes, veterem orationem Archytae Tarentini, magni in primis et praeclari viri, quae mihi tradita est, quum essem adolescens Tarenti cum Q. Maximo. Nullam capitaliorem pestem quam voluptatem corporis hominibus dicebat a natura datam, cujus voluptatis avidae libidines temere et effrenate ad potiendum incitarentur; hinc patriae proditiones, hinc rerum 35 publicarum eversiones, hinc cum hostibus clandestina colloquia nasci; nullum denique scelus, nullum ma-

lum facinus esse, ad quod suscipiendum non libido voluptatis impelleret; stupra vero et adulteria et omne tale flagitium nullis excitari aliis illecebris nisi voluptatis; quumque homini sive natura sive quis deus nihil mente praestabilius dedisset, huic divino muneri ac dono nihil tam esse inimicum quam voluptatem; nec enim libidine dominante temperantiae locum esse, neque omnino in voluptatis regno virtutem posse consistere. Quod quo magis intelligi posset, fingere animo jubebat tanta incitatum aliquem voluptate corporis, quanta percipi posset maxinia: nemini censebat fore dubium quin tam diu, dum ita gauderet, nihil agitare mente, nihil ratione, nihil cogitatione consequi posset; quocirca nihil esse tam detestabile tamque pestiferum quam voluptatem, siquidem ea, quum major esset atque longior, omne animi lumen exstingueret. Haec cum C. Pontio Samnite, patre ejus, a quo Caudino proelio Sp. Postumius, T. Veturius consules superati sunt, locutum Archytam Nearchus Tarentinus, hospes noster, qui in amicitia populi Romani permanserat, se a majoribus natu accepisse dicebat, quum quidem ei sermoni interfuisset Plato Atheniensis, quem Tarentum venisse L. Camillo Ap. Claudio consulibus reperio. Quorsum haec? Ut intelligeretis, si voluptatem aspernari ratione et sapientia non possemus, magnam esse habendam senectuti gratiam, quae efficeret, ut id non liberet, quod non oporteret. Impedit enim consilium voluptas, rationi inimica est, mentis, ut ita dicam, praestringit oculos, nec habet ullum cum virtute commercium. Invitus feci, ut fortissimi viri T. Flaminini fratrem L. Flaminium e senatu ejicerem, septem annis post quam consul fuisset; sed notandam putavi libidinem. Ille enim, quum esset consul in Gallia, exoratus in convivio a scorto est, ut securi feriret aliquem eorum, qui in vinculis essent damnati rei capitalis. Hic Tito fratre suo censore, qui proximus ante me fuerat, elapsus est; mihi vero et Flacco neutiquam probari potuit tam flagitiosa et tam perdita libido, quae cum probro privato conjungeret imperii dedecus.

- XIII. Saepe audiivi ex majoribus natu, qui se porro pueros a senibus audisse dicebant, mirari solitum C. Fabricium, quod, quum apud regem Pyrrhum legatus esset, audisset a Thessalo Cineas esse quendam
- 5 Athenis, qui se sapientem profiteretur, eumque dicere omnia, quae faceremus, ad voluptatem esse referenda; quod ex eo audientes M'. Curium et Ti. Coruncanium optare solitos ut id Samnitibus ipsique Pyrrho persuaderetur, quo facilius vinci possent, quum se voluptatibus dedissent. Vixerat M'. Curius cum P. Decio,
- 10 qui quinquennio ante eum consulem se pro re publica quarto consulatu devoverat. Norat eundem Fabricius, norat Coruncanius; qui quum ex sua vita, tum ex ejus quem dico Decii facto judicabant, esse profecto
- 15 aliquid natura pulchrum atque praeclarum, quod sua sponte peteretur, quodque sprete et contempta voluptate optimus quisque sequeretur. Quorsum igitur tam multa de voluptate? Quia non modo vituperatio nulla, sed etiam summa laus senectutis est, quod ea
- 20 voluptates nullas magno opere desiderat. caret epulis exstructisque mensis et frequentibus poculis: caret ergo etiam vinulentia et cruditare et insomniis. Sed si aliquid dandum est voluptati, quoniam ejus blanditiis non facile obsistimus — divine enim Plato
- 25 escam malorum appellat voluptatem, quod ea videlicet homines capiantur ut pisces, — quamquam immoderatis epulis caret senectus, modicis tamen conviviis delectari potest. C. Duellium, Marci filium, qui Poenos classe primus devicerat, redeuntem a cena
- 30 senem saepe videbam puer; delectabatur crebro funali et tibicine, quae sibi nullo exemplo privatus sumpserat: tantum licentiae dabat gloria. Sed quid ego alios? Ad me ipsum jam revertar. Primum habui semper sodales. Sodalitates autem me quaestore
- 35 constitutae sunt, sacris Idaeis Magnae Matris acceptis. Epulabar igitur cum sodalibus omnino modice, sed erat quidam fervor aetatis, qua progrediente omnia fiunt in dies mitiora. Neque enim ipsorum convivorum delectationem voluptatibus corporis magis quam coetu amicorum et sermonibus metiebar. Bene enim majores accubitionem epularem, amicorum, quia vitae conjunctionem haberet, convivium nominaverunt; melius quam Graeci, qui hoc idem tum compotationem, tum concenationem vocant, ut, 5 quod in eo genere minimum est, id maxime probare videantur.

XIV. Ego vero propter sermonis delectationem tempestivis quoque conviviis delector, nec cum aequalibus solum, qui pauci admodum restant, sed 10 cum vestra etiam aetate atque vobiscum; habeoque senectuti magnam gratiam, quae mihi sermonis aviditatem auxit, potionis et cibi sustulit. Quod si quem etiam ista delectant — ne omnino bellum indixisse videar voluptati, cujus est fortasse quidam naturalis 15 modus, — non intelligo ne in istis quidem ipsis voluptatibus carere sensu senectutem. Me vero et magisteria delectant a majoribus instituta, et is sermo, qui more majorum a summo adhibetur in poculo, et pocula, sicut in Symposio Xenophontis est, minuta 20 atque rorantia, et refrigeratio aestate et vicissim aut sol aut ignis hibernus. Quae quidem etiam in Sabinis persequi soleo, conviviumque vicinorum quotidie compleo, quod ad multam noctem quam maxime possumus vario sermone producimus. At non est voluptatum tanta quasi titillatio in senibus. Credo; sed ne desideratur quidem. Nihil autem est molestum, quod non desideres. Bene Sophocles, quum ex eo quidam jam affecto aetate quaereret, utereturne rebus venereis, Di meliora! inquit, ego vero istinc sicut 30 a domino agresti ac furioso profugi. Cupidis enim rerum talium odiosum fortasse et molestum est carere, satiatis vero et expletis jucundius est carere quam frui. Quamquam non caret is, qui non desiderat; ergo non desiderare dico esse jucundius. 35 Quod si istis ipsis voluptatibus bona aetas fruitur libentius, primum parvulis fruitur rebus, ut diximus, deinde iis, quibus senectus, etiam si non abunde potitur, non omnino caret. Ut Turpione Ambivio magis delectatur qui in prima cavea spectat, delectatur tamen etiam qui in ultima, sic adolescentia voluptates propter intuens magis fortasse laetatur, sed delectatur etiam senectus procul eas spectans tantum, quantum

5 sat est. At illa quanti sunt, animum tamquam emeritis stipendiis libidinis, ambitionis, contentionum, inimicitiarum, cupiditatum omnium secum esse secumque, ut dicitur, vivere! Si vero habet aliquod tamquam pabulum studii atque doctrinae, 10 nihil est otiosa senectute jucundius. Videbamus in studio dimetiendi paene caeli atque terrae C. Galum, familiarem patris tui, Scipio. Quotiens illum lux noctu aliquid describere ingressum, quotiens nox oppressit, quum mane coepisset! Quam delectabat
15 eum defectiones solis et lunae multo ante nobis praedicere! Quid in levioribus studiis, sed tamen acutis? Quam gaudebat bello suo Punico Naevius! quam Truculento Plautus! quam Pseudolo! Vidi etiam senem Livium, qui, quum sex annis ante quam ego
20 natus sum fabulam docuisset Centone Tuditanoque consulibus, usque ad adolescentiam meam processit aetate. Quid de P. Licinii Crassi et pontificii et civilis juris studio loquar? aut de hujus P. Scipionis, qui his paucis diebus pontifex maximus factus est?
25 Atqui eos omnes, quos commemoravi, his studiis flagrant senes vidimus. M. vero Cethegum, quem recte Suadae medullam dixit Ennius, quanto studio exerceri in dicendo videbamus etiam senem! Quae sunt igitur epularum aut ludorum aut scortorum 30 voluptates cum his voluptatibus comparandae? Atque haec quidem studia doctrinae; quae quidem prudentibus et bene institutis pariter cum aetate crescunt, ut honestum illud Solonis sit, quod ait versiculo quodam, ut ante dixi, senescere se multa in 35 dies addiscentem; qua voluptate animi nulla certe potest esse major.

XV. Venio nunc ad voluptates agricolarum, quibus ego incredibiliter delector; quae nec ulla impediuntur senectute et mihi ad sapientis vitam proxime videntur accedere. Habent enim rationem cum terra, quae numquam recusat imperium nec cuiquam sine usura reddit quod accepit, sed alias minore, plerumque majore cum faenore. Quamquam me quidem non fructus modo, sed etiam ipsius terrae vis ac natura delectat: quae quum gremio mollito ac subacto sparsum semen excepit, primum id occaecatum cohibet, ex quo occatio, quae hoc efficit, nominata est; deinde tepefactum vapore et compressu suo diffundit et elicit herbescentem ex eo viriditatem, quae nixa fibris stirpium sensim adolescit, culmoque erecta geniculato vaginis jam quasi pubescens includitur; e quibus quum emerit, fundit frugem spici ordine structam, et contra avium minorum morsus munitur vallo aristarum. Quid ego vitium ortus, satus, incrementa commemorem? Satiari delectatione non possum, ut meae senectutis requietem oblectamentumque noscatis. Omitto enim vim ipsam omnium, quae generantur e terra, quae ex fici tantulo grano aut ex acini vinaceo aut ex ceterarum frugum aut stirpium minutissimis seminibus tantos truncos ramosque procreet: malleoli, plantae, sarmenta, viviradices, propagines nonne efficiunt, ut quemvis cum admiratione delectent? Vitis quidem, quae natura caduca est et, nisi fulta est, fertur ad terram, eadem, ut se erigat, claviculis suis quasi manibus quidquid est nacta complectitur; quam serpentem multiplici lapsu et erratico ferro amputans coercet ars agricularum, ne silvescat sarmentis et in omnes partes nimia fundatur. Itaque ineunte vere in iis, quae relicta sunt, existit tamquam ad articulos sarmentorum ea, quae gemma dicitur, a qua oriens uva se ostendit, quae et suco terrae et calore solis augescens primo est peracerba gustatu, deinde maturata dulcescit, vestitaque pampinis nec modico tepore caret et nimios solis defendit ardores. Qua quid potest esse quum fructu laetius tum aspectu pulchrius? Cujus quidem non utilitas me solum, ut ante dixi, sed etiam cultura et natura ipsa delectat: adminiculorum ordines, capitum jugatio, religatio et propagatio vitium, sarmentorum ea; quam dixi, aliorum amputatio, aliorum immissio. Quid ego irrigationes, quid fossiones agri repastinationesque proferam, quibus fit

 5 multo terra fecundior? Quid de utilitate loquar stercorandi? Dixi in eo libro quem de rebus rusticis scripsi; de qua doctus Hesiodus ne verbum quidem fecit, quum de cultura agri scriberet; at Homerus, qui multis, ut mihi videtur, ante saeculis fuit, Laertam
 10 lenientem desiderium, quod capiebat e filio, colentem agrum et eum stercorantem facit. Nec vero segetibus solum et pratis et vineis et arbustis res rusticae laetae sunt, sed hortis etiam et pomariis, tum pecudum pastu, apium, examinibus, florum omnium varietate.
 15 Nec consitiones modo delectant, sed etiam insitiones, quibus nihil invenit agri cultura sollertius.

XVI. Possum persequi permulta oblectamenta rerum rusticarum, sed ea ipsa, quae dixi, sentio fuisse longiora. Ignoscetis autem; nam et studio rerum 20 rusticarum provectus sum, et senectus est natura loquacior, ne ab omnibus eam vitiis videar vindicare. Ergo in hac vita M'. Curius, quum de Samnitibus, de Sabinis, de Pyrrho triumphavisset, consumpsit extremum tempus aetatis. Cujus quidem ego villam
 25 contemplans — abest enim non longe a me — admirari satis non possum vel hominis ipsius continentiam vel temporum disciplinam. Curio ad focum sedenti magnum auri pondus Samnites quum attulissent, repudiati sunt; non enim aurum habere praeclarum sibi videri dixit, sed iis, qui haberent aurum, 30 imperare. Poteratne tantus animus efficere non jucundam senectutem? Sed venio ad agricolas, ne a me ipso recedam. In agris erant tum senatores, id est senes; siquidem aranti L. Quinctio Cincinnato
 35 nuntiatum est eum dictatorem esse factum; cujus dictatoris jussu magister equitum C. Servilius Ahala Sp. Maelium, regnum appetentem, occupatum interemit. A villa in senatum arcessebatur et Curius et ceteri senes; ex quo qui eos arcessebant viatores

nominati sunt. Num igitur horum senectus miserabilis fuit, qui se agri cultione oblectabant? Mea quidem sententia haud scio an nulla beatior possit esse, neque solum officio, quod hominum generi universo cultura agrorum est salutaris, sed et delectatione, quam dixi, et saturitate copiaque rerum omnium, quae ad victum hominum, ad cultum etiam deorum pertinent, ut, quoniam haec quidam desiderant, in gratiam jam cum voluptate redeamus. Semper enim boni assiduique domini referta cella vinaria, olearia, etiam penaria est, villaque tota locuples est; abundat porco, haedo, agno, gallina, lacte, caseo, melle. Jam hortum ipsi agricolae succidiam alteram appellant. Conditiora facit haec supervacaneis etiam operis aucupium atque venatio. Quid de pratorum viriditate aut arborum ordinibus aut vinearum olivetorumve specie plura dicam? Brevi praecidam: agro bene culto nihil potest esse nec usu uberius nec specie ornatius, ad quem fruendum non modo non retardat, verum etiam invitat atque allecat senectus. Ubi enim potest illa aetas aut calescere vel apricatione melius vel igni, aut vicissim umbris aquisve refrigerari salubrius? Sibi igitur habeant arma, sibi equos, sibi hastas, sibi clavam et pilam, sibi natationes atque cursus: nobis senibus ex lusionibus multis talos relinquant et tesseras; id ipsum utrum libebit, quoniam sine iis beata esse senectus potest.

XVII. Multas ad res perutiles Xenophontis libri sunt, quos legite, quaeso, studiose, ut facitis. Quam copiose ab eo agri cultura laudatur in eo libro, qui est de tuenda re familiari, qui Oeconomicus inscribitur! Atque ut intelligatis nihil ei tam regale videri quam studium agri colendi, Socrates in eo libro loquitur cum Critobulo, Cyrum minorem, Persarum regem, praestantem ingenio atque imperii gloria, quum Lysander Lacedaemonius, vir summae virtutis, venisset ad eum Sardis eique dona a sociis attulisset, et ceteris in rebus comem erga Lysandrum atque humanum fuisse et ei quendam consaeptum agrum diligenter consitum ostendisse; quum autem admiraretur Lysander et proceritates arborum et directos in quincuncem ordines et humum subactam atque puram et suavitatem odorum, qui afflarentur ex floribus, tum 5 eum dixisse mirari se non modo diligentiam, sed etiam sollertiam ejus, a quo essent illa dimensa atque discripta, et ei Cyrum respondisse: Atqui ego ista sum omnia dimensus; mei sunt ordines, mea discriptio; multae etiam istarum arborum mea manu sunt satuae;

 10 tum Lysandrum intuentem purpuram ejus et nitorem corporis ornatumque Persicum multo auro multisque gemmis dixisse: Recte vero te, Cyre, beatum ferunt, quoniam virtuti tuae fortuna conjuncta est. Hac igitur fortuna frui licet senibus, nec aetas impedit,
 15 quò minus et ceterarum rerum et in primis agri colendi studia teneamus usque ad ultimum tempus senectutis. M. quidem Valerium Corvinum accepimus ad centesimum annum perduxisse, quum esset acta jam aetate in agris eosque coleret; cujus inter
 20 primum et sextum consulatum sex et quadraginta anni interfuerunt. Ita quantum spatium aetatis majores ad senectutis initium esse voluerunt, tantus illi cursus honorum fuit; atque hujus extrema aetas hoc beatior quam media, quod auctoritatis habebat
 25 plus, laboris minus: apex est autem senectutis, auctoritas. Quanta fuit in L. Caecilio Metello! quanta in Atilio Calatino! in quem illud elogium: Unum hunc plurimae consentiunt gentes populi primum fuisse virum. Notum est carmen incisum in sepulcro.
 30 Jure igitur gravis, cujus de laudibus omnium esset fama consentiens. Quem virum nuper P. Crassum, pontificem maximum, quem postea M. Lepidum, eodem sacerdotio praeditum, vidimus! Quid de Paulo aut Africano loquar, aut, ut jam ante, de 35 Maximo? quorum non in sententia solum, sed etiam in nutu residebat auctoritas. Habet senectus, honorata praesertim, tantam auctoritatem, ut ea pluris sit quam omnes adolescentiae voluptates.

XVIII. Sed in omni oratione mementote eam me

senectutem laudare, quae fundamentis adolescentiae constituta sit; ex quo efficitur id, quod ego magno quondam cum assensu omnium dixi, miseram esse senectutem, quae se oratione defenderet. Non cani nec rugae repente auctoritatem arripere possunt; sed honeste acta superior aetas fructus capit auctoritatis extremos. Haec enim ipsa sunt honorabilia, quae videntur levia atque communia, salutari, appeti, decedi, assurgere, deduci, reduci, consuli; quae et apud nos et in aliis civitatibus, ut quaeque optime morata est, ita diligentissime observantur. Lysandrum Lacedaemonium, cujus modo feci mentionem, dicere aiunt solitum, Lacedaemonem esse honestissimum domicilium senectutis; nusquam enim tantum tribuitur aetati, nusquam est senectus honoratior. Quin etiam memoriae proditum est, quum Athenis ludis quidam in theatrum grandis natu venisset, magno consessu locum nusquam ei datum a suis civibus; quum autem ad Lacedaemonios accessisset, qui, legati quum essent, certo in loco consederant, consurrexisse omnes illi dicuntur et senem sessum recepisse. Quibus quum a cuncto consessu plausus esset multiplex datus, dixisse ex iis quendam, Athenienses scire quae recta essent, sed facere nolle. Multa in nostro collegio praeclara, sed hoc, de quo agimus, in primis, quod, ut quisque aetate antecedit, ita sententiae principatum tenet, neque solum honore antecedentibus, sed iis etiam, qui cum imperio sunt, majores natu augures anteponuntur. Quae sunt igitur voluptates corporis cum auctoritatis praemiis comparandae? quibus qui splendide uti sunt, ii mihi videntur fabulam aetatis peregissee nec tamquam inexercitati histiones in extremo actu corruisse.

At sunt morosi et anxii et iracundi et difficiles senes. Si quaerimus, etiam avari; sed haec morum vitia sunt, non senectutis. Ac morositas tamen et ea vitia, quae dixi, habent aliquid excusationis, non illius quidem justae, sed quae probari posse videatur: contemni se putant, despici, illudi: praeterea in fragili corpore odiosa omnis offensio est. Quae tamen omnia dulciora fiunt et moribus bonis et artibus; idque quum in vita tum in scena intelligi potest ex iis fratribus, qui in Adelphis sunt. Quanta in altero

 5 diritas, in altero comitas! Sic se res habet; ut enim non omne vinum, sic non omnis natura vetustate coacescit. Severitatem in senectute probo, sed eam, sicut alia, modicam; acerbitem nullo modo. Avaritia vero senilis quid sibi velit, non intelligo.
 10 Potest enim quidquam esse absurdius quam, quo viae minus restet, eo plus viatici quaerere?

XIX. Quarta restat causa, quae maxime angere atque sollicitam habere nostram aetatem videtur, appropinquatio mortis, quae certe a senectute non 15 potest esse longe. O miserum senem, qui mortem contemnendam esse in tam longa aetate non viderit! quae aut plane negligenda est, si omnino exstinguit animum, aut etiam optanda, si aliquo eum deducit, ubi sit futurus aeternus. Atqui tertium certe nihil
 20 inveniri potest. Quid igitur timeam, si aut non miser post mortem aut beatus etiam futurus sum? Quamquam quis est tam stultus, quamvis sit adolescens, cui sit exploratum se ad vesperum esse victurum? Quin etiam aetas illa multo plures quam
 25 nostra casus mortis habet: facilius in morbos incidunt adolescentes, gravius aegrotant, tristius curantur. Itaque pauci veniunt ad senectutem; quod ni ita accideret, melius et prudentius viveretur: mens enim et ratio et consilium in senibus est; qui si nulli fuissent, nullae omnino civitates fuissent. Sed redeo ad
 30 mortem impendentem. Quod est istud crimen senectutis, quum id ei videatis cum adolescentia esse commune? Sensi ego in optimo filio, tu in exspectatis ad amplissimam dignitatem fratribus, Scipio, mortem 35 omni aetati esse communem. At sperat adolescens diu se victurum, quod sperare idem senex non potest. Insipienter sperat; quid enim stultius quam incerta pro certis habere, falsa pro veris? At senex ne quod speret quidem habet. At est eo meliore conditione

quam adolescens, quum id, quod ille sperat, hic consecutus est. Ille vult diu vivere, hic diu vixit. Quamquam, o di boni! quid est in hominis vita diu? Da enim supremum tempus, expectemus Tartessorum regis aetatem; fuit enim, ut scriptum 5 video, Arganthonius quidam Gadibus, qui octoginta regnaverat annos, centum viginti vixerat; sed mihi ne diuturnum quidem quidquam videtur, in quo est aliquid extremum. Quum enim id advenit, tum illud, quod praeteriit, effluxit; tantum remanet, quod 10 virtute et recte factis consecutus sis. Horae quidem cedunt et dies et menses et anni, nec praeteritum tempus umquam revertitur, nec quid sequatur sciri potest. Quod cuique temporis ad vivendum datur, eo debet esse contentus; neque enim histrioni, ut 15 placeat, peragenda fabula est, modo in quocumque fuerit actu probetur, neque sapienti usque ad Plaudite veniendum est. Breve enim tempus aetatis satis longum est ad bene honesteque vivendum; sin processerit longius, non magis dolendum est, quam agri- 20 colae dolent, praeterita verni temporis suavitate aetatem autumnumque venisse. Ver enim tamquam adolescentiam significat ostenditque fructus futuros; reliqua autem tempora demetendis fructibus et percipiendis accommodata sunt. Fructus autem senec- 25 tutis est, ut saepe dixi, ante partorum bonorum memoria et copia. Omnia autem, quae secundum naturam fiunt, sunt habenda in bonis. Quid est autem tam secundum naturam quam senibus emori? quod idem contingit adolescentibus adversante et 30 repugnante natura. Itaque adolescentes mihi mori sic videntur, ut quum aquae multitudine flammae vis opprimitur; senes autem sic, ut quum sua sponte, nulla adhibita vi, consumptus ignis exstinguitur: et quasi poma ex arboribus, cruda si sunt, vix evellun- 35 tur, si matura et cocta, decidunt, sic vitam adolescentibus vis aufert, senibus maturitas; quae quidem mihi tam jucunda est, ut, quo propius ad mortem accedam, quasi terram videre videar aliquandoque in portum ex longa navigatione esse venturus. Google 4'

XX. Senectutis autem nullus est certus terminus, recteque in ea vivitur, quoad munus officii exsequi et tueri possis [mortemque contemnere]; ex quo fit, ut animosior etiam senectus sit quam adolescentia et
5 fortior. Hoc illud est, quod Pisistrato tyranno a Solone responsum est, quum illi quaerenti, qua tandem re fretus sibi tam audaciter obsisteret, respondisse dicitur Senectute. Sed vivendi est finis optimus, quum integra mente certisque sensibus
10 opus ipsa suum eadem, quae coagmentavit, natura dissolvit. Ut navem, ut aedificium idem destruit facillime, qui construxit, sic hominem eadem optime, quae conglutinavit, natura dissolvit. Jam omnis conglutinatio recens aegre, inveterata facile divel-
15 litur. Ita fit ut illud breve vitae reliquum nec avidè appetendum senibus nec sinè causa deserendum sit; vetatque Pythagoras injussu imperatoris, id est dei, de praesidio et statione vitae decedere. Solonis quidem sapientis est elogium, quo se negat velle suam 20 mortem dolore amicorum et lamentis vacare. Vult, credo, se esse carum suis; sed haud scio an melius Ennius:

Nemo me lacrumis decoret, neque funera fletu Faxit.

25 Non censet lugendam esse mortem, quam immortalitas consequatur. Jam sensus moriendi aliquis esse potest, isque ad exiguum tempus, praesertim seni: post mortem quidem sensus aut optandus aut nullus est. Sed hoc meditatam ab adolescentia debet esse, 30 mortem ut negligamus, sine qua meditatione tranquillo animo esse nemo potest; moriendum enim certe est, et incertum an hoc ipso die. Mortem igitur omnibus horis impendentem timens qui poterit animo consistere? De qua non ita longa disputatione opus
35 esse videtur, quum recorder non L. Brutum, qui in liberanda patria est interfectus, non duos Decios, qui ad voluntariam mortem cursum equorum incitaverunt, non M. Atilium, qui ad supplicium est pro-

fectus, ut fidem hosti datam conservaret, non duos Scipiones, qui iter Poenis vel corporibus suis obstruere voluerunt, non avum tuum L. Paulum, qui morte luit collegae in Cannensi ignominia temeritatem, non M. Marcellum, cujus interitum ne crudelissimus quidem hostis honore sepulturae carere passus est, sed legiones nostras, quod scripsi in Originibus, in eum locum saepe profectas alacri animo et erecto, unde se redituras numquam arbitrarentur. Quod igitur adolescentes et ii quidem non solum indocti, sed etiam rustici, contemnunt, id docti senes extimescent? Omnino, ut mihi quidem videtur, rerum omnium satietas vitae facit satietatem. Sunt pueritiae studia certa: num igitur ea desiderant adolescentes? Sunt ineuntis adolescentiae: num ea constans jam requirit aetas, quae media dicitur? Sunt etiam ejus aetatis; nè ea quidem quaeruntur in senectute. Sunt extrema quaedam studia senectutis; ergo, ut superiorum aetatum studia occidunt, sic occidunt etiam senectutis; quod quum evenit, satietas vitae tempus maturum mortis affert.

XXI. Non enim video cur, quid ipse sentiam de morte, non audeam vobis dicere, quod eo cernere mihi melius videor, quo ab ea propius absum. Ego vestros patres, tu, Scipio, tuque, Laeli, viros clarissimos mihiq̃ue amicissimos, vivere arbitror, et eam quidem vitam, quae est sola vita nominanda. Nam, dum sumus inclusi in his compagibus corporis, munere quodam necessitatis et gravi opere perfungimur; est enim animus caelestis ex altissimo domicilio depressus et quasi demersus in terram, locum divinae naturae aeternitatisque contrarium. Sed credo deos immortales sparsisse animos in corpora humana, ut essent, qui terras tuerentur, quique caelestium ordinem contemplantes imitarentur eum vitae modo atque constantia. Nec me solum ratio ac disputatio impulit, ut ita crederem, sed nobilitas etiam summorum philosophorum et auctoritas. Audiebam Pythagoram Pythagoreosque, incolas paene nostros, qui essent Italici philosophi quondam nominati, numquam dubitasse, quin ex universa mente divina delibatos animos haberemus. Demonstrabantur mihi praeterea, quae Socrates supremo vitae die de immortalitate animorum disseruisset, is qui esset omnium sapientissimus

 5 Apollinis oraculo judicatus. Quid multa? Sic mihi persuasi, sic sentio, quum tanta celeritas animorum sit, tanta memoria praeteritorum futurorumque prudentia, tot artes [tanta scientiae], tot inventa, non posse eam naturam, quae res eas contineat, esse mortalem;
 10 quumque semper agitetur animus nec principium motus habeat, quia se ipse moveat, ne finem quidem habiturum esse motus, quia numquam se ipse sit relicturus; et quum simplex animi natura esset neque haberet in se quidquam admixtum dispar sui
 15 atque dissimile, non posse eum dividi; quod si non possit, non posse interire; magnoque esse argumento homines scire pleraque ante quam nati sint, quod jam pueri, quum artes difficiles discant, ita celeriter res innumerabiles arripiant, ut eas non tum primum
 20 accipere videantur, sed reminisci et recordari. Haec Platonis fere.

XXII. Apud Xenophontem autem moriens Cyrus major haec dicit: Nolite arbitrari, o mei carissimi filii, me, quum a vobis discessero, nusquam aut nullum 25 fore; nec enim, dum eram vobiscum, animum meum videbatis, sed eum esse in hoc corpore ex iis rebus, quas gerebam, intelligebatis. Eundem igitur esse creditote, etiam si nullum videbitis. Nec vero clarorum virorum post mortem honores permanerent, si nihil eorum ipso-
 30 rum animi efficerent, quo diutius memoriam sui teneremus. Mihi quidem persuaderi numquam potuit animos, dum in corporibus essent mortalibus, vivere, quum excessissent ex iis, emori; nec vero tum animum esse insipientem, quum ex insipienti corpore evasisset;
 35 sed, quum omni admixtione corporis liberatus purus et integer esse coepisset, tum esse sapientem. Atque etiam, quum hominis natura morte dissolvitur, ceterarum rerum perspicuum est quo quaeque discedat; abeunt enim illuc omnia, unde orta sunt; animus autem solus
 40 nec quum adest nec quum discedit apparet. Jam vero

videtis nihil esse morti tam simile quam somnum. Atqui dormientium animi maxime declarant divinitatem suam; multa enim, quum remissi et liberi sunt, futura prospiciunt. Ex quo intelligitur quales futuri sint, quum se plane corporis vinculis relaxaverint. 5 Quare, si haec ita sunt, sic me colitote, inquit, ut deum; sin una est interiturus animus cum corpore, vos tamen deos verentes, qui hanc omnem pulchritudinem tuentur et regunt, memoriam nostri pie inviolateque servabitis.

XXIII. Cyrus quidem haec moriens. Nos, si 10 placet, nostra videamus. Nemo umquam mihi, Scipio, persuadebit aut patrem tuum Paulum, aut duos avos Paulum et Africanum, aut Africani patrem aut patruum, aut multos praestantes viros, quos enumerare non est necesse, tanta esse conatos, quae 15 ad posteritatis memoriam pertinerent, nisi animo cernerent posteritatem ad se pertinere. An censes, ut de me ipso aliquid more senum glorie, me tantos labores diurnos nocturnosque domi militiaeque suscepturum fuisse, si iisdem finibus gloriam meam, 20 quibus vitam, essem terminaturus? Nonne melius multo fuisset otiosam aetatem et quietam sine ullo labore et contentione traducere? Sed nescio quomodo, animus erigens se posteritatem ita semper prospiciebat, quasi, quum excessisset e vita, tum 25 denique victurus esset. Quod quidem ni ita se haberet, ut animi immortales essent, haud optimi cujusque animus maxime ad immortalitatis gloriam niteretur. Quid, quod sapientissimus quisque aequissimo animo moritur, stultissimus iniquissimo? Nonne 30 vobis videtur is animus, qui plus cernat et longius, videre se ad meliora proficisci; ille autem, cui obtusior sit acies, non videre? Equidem efferor studio patres vestros, quos colui et dilexi, videndi; neque vero eos solum convenire aveo, quos ipse 35 cognovi, sed illos etiam, de quibus audiavi et legi et ipse conscripsi. Quo quidem me proficiscentem haud sane quis facile retraxerit, nec tamquam Peliam recoxerit; et si quis deus mihi largiatur, ut ex hac aetate repuerascam et in cunis vagiam, valde recusem, nec vero velim, quasi decurso spatio, ad carceres a calce revocari. Quid enim habet vita commodi? quid non potius laboris? Sed habeat sane; habet

5 certe tamen aut satietatem aut modum. Non libet enim mihi deplorare vitam, quod multi et ii docti saepe fecerunt; neque me vixisse paenitet, quoniam ita vixi, ut non frustra me natum existimem; et ex vita ita discedo tamquam ex hospitio, non tamquam
10 e domo. Commorandi enim natura devorsorium nobis, non habitandi dedit. O praeclarum diem, quum in illud divinum animorum concilium coetumque proficiscar, quumque ex hac turba et colluvione discedam! Proficiscar enim non ad eos solum viros, 15 de quibus ante dixi, verum etiam ad Catonem meum, quo nemo vir melior natus est, nemo pietate praestantior; cujus a me corpus est crematum — quod contra decuit ab illo meum, — animus vero non me deserens, sed respectans, in ea profecto loca discessit,
20 quo mihi ipsi cernebat esse veniendum. Quem ego meum casum fortiter ferre visus sum, non quo aequo animo ferrem, sed me ipse consolabar existimans non longinquum inter nos digressum et discessum fore. His mihi rebus, Scipio, — id enim te cum Laelio
25 admirari solere dixisti — levis est senectus, nec solum non molesta, sed etiam jucunda. Quod si in hoc erro, qui animos hominum immortales esse credam, libenter erro, nec mihi hunc errorem, quo delector, dum vivo, extorqueri volo; sin mortuus, ut quidam
30 minuti philosophi censent, nihil sentiam, non vereor, ne hunc errorem meum philosophi mortui irrideant. Quod si non sumus immortales futuri, tamen extinguere homini suo tempore optabile est. Nam habet natura ut aliarum rerum omnium sic vivendi modum; senec-35 tus autem aetatis est peractio tamquam fabulae, cujus defatigationem fugere debemus, praesertim adjuncta satietate.

Haec habui de senectute quae dicerem, ad quam utinam perveniatis, ut ea, quae ex me audistis, re 40 experti probare possitis.

M. TULLII CICERONIS
LAELIUS DE AMICITIA

AD T. POMPONIUM ATTICUM.

I. Q. MUCIUS augur multa narrare de C. Laelio socero suo memoriter et jucunde solebat nec dubitare illum in omni sermone appellare sapientem. Ego autem a patre ita eram deductus ad Scaevolam sumpta virili toga, ut, quoad possem et liceret, a senis latere numquam discederem. Itaque multa ab eo prudenter disputata, multa etiam breviter et commode dicta memoriae mandabam, fierique studebam ejus prudentia doctior. Quo mortuo me ad pontificem Scaevolam contuli, quem unum nostrae civitatis et ingenio et justitia praestantissimum audeo dicere. Sed de hoc alias; nunc redeo ad augurem. Quum saepe multa, tum memini domi in hemicyclio sedentem, ut solebat, quum et ego essem una et pauci admodum familiares, in eum sermonem illum incidere, qui tum fere multis erat in ore. Meministi enim profecto, Attice, et eo magis, quod P. Sulpicio utebare multum, quum is tribunus plebis capitali odio a Q. Pompeio, qui tum erat consul, dissideret, quocum conjunctissime et amantissime vixerat, quanta esset hominum vel admiratio vel querela. Itaque tum Scaevola, quum in eam ipsam mentionem incidisset, exposuit nobis sermonem Laelii de amicitia habitum ab illo secum et cum altero genero, C. Fannio, Marci filio,

- paucis diebus post mortem Africani. Ejus disputationis sententias memoriae mandavi, quas hoc libro exposui arbitrato meo; quasi enim ipsos induxi loquentes, ne inquam et inquit saepius interponeretur, 5 atque ut tamquam a praesentibus coram haberi sermo videretur. Quum enim saepe mecum ageres, ut de amicitia scriberem aliquid, digna mihi res quum omnium cognitione tum nostra familiaritate visa est. Itaque feci non invitus ut prodessem multis rogatu 10 tuo. Sed ut in Catone Majore, qui est scriptus ad te de senectute, Catonem induxi senem disputantem, quia nulla videbatur aptior persona, quae de illa aetate loqueretur, quam ejus qui et diutissime senex fuisset et in ipsa senectute praeter ceteros floruisset; 15 sic, quum accepissemus a patribus maxime memorabilem C. Laelii et P. Scipionis familiaritatem fuisse, idonea mihi Laelii persona visa est, quae de amicitia ea ipsa dissereret, quae disputata ab eo meminisset Scaevola. Genus autem hoc sermonum positum in 20 hominum veterum auctoritate et eorum illustrium plus nescio quo pacto videtur habere gravitatis. Itaque ipse mea legens sic afficior interdum, ut Catonem, non me loqui existimem. Sed ut tum ad senem senex de senectute, sic hoc libro ad amicum 25 amicissimus scripsi de amicitia. Tum est Cato locutus, quo erat nemo fere senior temporibus illis, nemo prudentior: nunc Laelius et sapiens — sic enim est habitus — et amicitiae gloria excellens de amicitia loquetur. Tu velim a me animum parumper avertas, 30 Laelium loqui ipsum putes. C. Fannius et Q. Mucius ad socerum veniunt post mortem Africani: ab his sermo oritur, respondet Laelius, cujus tota disputatio est de amicitia, quam legens te ipsum cognosces.

- II. FANNIUS. Sunt ista, Laeli. Nec enim melior 35 vir fuit Africano quisquam nec clarior. Sed existimare debes omnium oculos in te esse coniectos unum; te sapientem et appellant et existimant. Tribuebatur hoc modo M. Catoni, scimus L. Acilium apud patres nostros appellatum esse sapientem, sed uterque alio quodam modo; Acilius, quia prudens esse in jure civili putabatur, Cato, quia multarum rerum usum habebat: multa ejus et in senatu et in foro vel provisa prudenter vel acta constanter vel responsa acute ferebantur; propterea quasi cognomen jam habebat in senectute sapientis. Te autem alio quodam modo, non solum natura et moribus, verum etiam studio et doctrina esse sapientem, nec sicut vulgus, sed ut eruditi solent appellare sapientem, qualem in reliqua Graecia neminem — nam qui septem appellantur, eos, qui ista subtilius, quaerunt, in numero sapientium non habent, — Athenis unum accepimus et eum quidem etiam Apollinis oraculo sapientissimum judicatum; hanc esse in te sapientiam existimant, ut omnia tua in te posita esse ducas humanosque casus virtute inferiores putes. Itaque ex me quaerunt, credo ex hoc item Scaevola, quonam pacto mortem Africani feras, eoque magis, quod proximis Nonis, quum in hortos D. Bruti auguris commentandi causa, ut assolet, venissemus, tu non affuisti, qui diligentissime semper illum diem et illud munus solitus esses obire.

SCAEVOLA. Quaerunt quidem, C. Laeli, multi, ut est a Fannio dictum; sed ego id respondeo, quod animum adverti, te dolorem, quem acceperis quum summi viri tum amicissimi morte, ferre moderate, nec potuisse non commoveri nec fuisse id humanitatis tuae; quod autem Nonis in collegio nostro non affuisses valetudinem respondeo causam, non maestitiam fuisse.

LAELIUS. Recte tu quidem, Scaevola, et vere: nec enim ab isto officio, quod semper usurpavi, quum valem, abduci incommodo meo debui, nec ullo casu arbitrator hoc constanti homini posse contingere, ut ulla intermissio fiat officii. Tu autem, Fanni, quod mihi tantum tribui dicis, quantum ego nec agnosco nec postulo, facis amice; sed, ut mihi videris, non recte judicas de Catone. Aut enim nemo, quod quidem magis credo, aut, si quisquam, ille sapiens fuit. Quomodo, ut alia omit-tam, mortem filii tulit! Memineram Paulum, videram Galum; sed hi in pueris, Cato in perfecto et spectato viro. Quamobrem cave Catoni anteponas ne istum quidem ipsum, quem Apollo, ut ais, sapientissimum judicavit; hujus enim facta, illius dicta laudantur. De me autem, ut jam cum utroque loquar, sic habetote.

III. Ego si Scipionis desiderio me moveri negem, quam id recte faciam viderint sapientes, sed certe mentiar. Moveor enim tali amico orbatus, qualis, ut
10 arbitror, nemo umquam erit, ut confirmare possum, nemo certe fuit. Sed non egeo medicina: me ipse consolor et maxime illo solatio, quod eo errore careo, quo amicorum decessu plerique angi solent. Nihil mali accidisse Scipioni puto; mihi accidit, si quid 15 accidit; suis autem incommodis graviter angi non amicum, sed se ipsum amantis est. Cum illo vero quis neget actum esse praeclare? Nisi enim, quod ille minime putabat, immortalitatem optare vellet, quid non adeptus est, quod homini fas esset optare?
20 qui summam spem civium, quam de eo jam puero habuerant, continuo adolescens incredibili virtute superavit; qui consulatum petivit numquam, factus [consul] est bis, primum ante tempus, iterum sibi suo tempore, rei publicae paene sero; qui duabus
25 urbibus eversis inimicissimis huic imperio non modo praesentia, verum etiam futura bella delevit. Quid dicam de moribus facillimis, de pietate in matrem, liberalitate in sorores, bonitate in suos, justitia in omnes? Nota sunt vobis. Quam autem civitati
30 carus fuerit, maerore funeris indicatum est. Quid igitur hunc paucorum annorum accessio juvare potuisset? senectus enim quamvis non sit gravis, ut memini Catonem anno ante quam est mortuus mecum et cum Scipione disserere, tamen aufert eam viriditatem, in qua etiam nunc erat Scipio. Quamobrem
35 vita quidem talis fuit vel fortuna vel gloria, ut nihil posset accedere; moriendi autem sensum celeritas abstulit. Quo de genere mortis difficile dictu est; quid homines suspicentur videtis. Hoc vere tamen

licet dicere, P. Scipioni ex multis diebus, quos in vita celeberrimos laetissimosque viderit, illum diem clarissimum fuisse, quum senatu dimisso domum reductus ad vesperum est a patribus conscriptis, populo Romano, sociis et Latinis, pridie quam excessit e 5 vita; ut ex tam alto dignitatis gradu ad superos videatur deos potius quam ad inferos pervenisse.

IV. Neque enim assentior iis, qui haec nuper disserere coeperunt, cum corporibus simul animos interire atque omnia morte deleri. Plus apud me 10 antiquorum auctoritas valet, vel nostrorum majorum, qui mortuis tam religiosa jura tribuerunt, quod non fecissent profecto, si nihil ad eos pertinere arbitrantur; vel eorum, qui in hac terra fuerunt magnamque Graeciam, — quae nunc quidem deleta est, 15 tum florebat, — institutis et praeceptis suis erudierunt; vel ejus, qui Apollinis oraculo sapientissimus est judicatus, cui non tum hoc, tum illud, uti plerisque, sed idem semper, animos hominum esse divinos, iisque, quum ex corpore excessissent, reditum in 20 caelum patere, optimoque et justissimo cuique expeditissimum. Quod idem Scipioni videbatur, qui quidem, quasi praesagiret, perpaucis ante mortem diebus, quum et Philus et Manilius adessent et alii plures, tuque etiam, Scaevola, mecum venisses, triduum 25 disseruit de re publica, cujus disputationis fuit extremum fere de immortalitate animorum, quae se in quiete per visum ex Africano audisse dicebat. Id si ita est, ut optimi cujusque animus in morte facillime evolet tamquam e custodia vinclisque corporis, cui 30 censemur cursum ad deos faciliorem fuisse quam Scipioni? Quocirca maerere hoc ejus eventu vereor, ne invidi magis quam amici sit. Sin autem illa veriora, ut idem interitus sit animorum et corporum nec ullus sensus maneat, ut nihil boni est in morte, 35 sic certe nihil mali. Sensu enim amisso fit idem, quasi natus non esset omnino, quem tamen esse natum et nos gaudemus et haec civitas, dum erit, laetabitur. Quamobrem cum illo quidem, ut supra dixi, actum optime est, mecum incommodius, quem fuerat aequius, ut prius introieram, sic prius exire de vita. Sed tamen recordatione nostrae amicitiae sic fruor, ut beate vixisse videar, quia cum Scipione vixerim, 5 quocum mihi conjuncta cura de publica re et de privata fuit, quocum et domus fuit et militia communis et id, in quo est omnis vis amicitiae, voluntatum, studiorum, sententiarum summa consensus. Itaque non tam ista me sapientiae, quam modo Fannius commemoravit, fama delectat, falsa praesertim, 10 quam quod amicitiae nostrae memoriam spero sempiternam fore; idque eo mihi magis est cordi, quod ex omnibus saeculis vix tria aut quattuor nominantur paria amicorum, quo in genere sperare videor Scipionis et Laelii amicitiam notam posteritati fore. 15

FANNIUS. Istuc quidem, Laeli, ita necesse est. Sed, quoniam amicitiae mentionem fecisti et sumus otiosi, pergratum mihi feceris, — spero item Scaevolae, — si, quemadmodum soles de ceteris rebus, 20 quum ex te quaeritur, sic de amicitia disputaris quid sentias, qualem existimes, quae praecepta des.

SCAEVOLA. Mihi vero; atque id ipsum quum tecum agere conarer, Fannius antevertit. Quamobrem utrique nostrum gratum admodum feceris.

25 V. LAELIUS. Ego vero non gravarer, si mihi ipse confiderem; nam et praeclara res est, et sumus, ut dixit Fannius, otiosi. Sed quis ego sum aut quae est in me facultas? Doctorum est ista consuetudo, eaque Graecorum, ut iis ponatur de quo disputent quamvis 30 subito. Magnum opus est egetque exercitatione non parva. Quamobrem quae disputari de amicitia possunt, ab iis censeo petatis, qui ista profitentur. Ego vos hortari tantum possum, ut amicitiam omnibus rebus humanis anteponatis; nihil est enim tam 35 naturae aptum, tam conveniens ad res vel secundas vel adversas. Sed hoc primum sentio, nisi in bonis amicitiam esse non posse; neque id ad vivum reseco, ut illi, qui haec subtilius disserunt, fortasse vere sed ad communem utilitatem parum; negant enim quemquam esse virum bonum nisi sapientem. Sit ita sane ;

sed eam sapientiam interpretantur, quam adhuc mortalis nemo est consecutus ; nos autem ea, quae sunt in usu vitaeque communi, non ea, quae finguntur aut optantur, spectare debemus. Numquam ego dicam 5
C. Fabricium, M'. Curium, Ti. Coruncanium, quos sapientes nostri majores judicabant, ad istorum normam fuisse sapientes. Quare sibi habeant sapientiae nomen et invidiosum et obscurum, concedant ut boni viri fuerint. Ne id quidem facient : negabunt 10 id nisi sapienti posse concedi. Agamus igitur pingui, ut aiunt, Minerva. Qui ita se gerunt, ita vivunt, ut eorum probetur fides, integritas, aequitas, liberalitas, nec sit in iis ulla cupiditas, libido, audacia, sintque magna constantia, ut ii fuerunt, modo quos nominavi, 15 hos viros bonos, ut habiti sunt, sic etiam appellandos putemus, quia sequantur, quantum homines possunt, naturam optimam bene vivendi ducem. Sic enim mihi perspicere videor, ita natos esse nos, ut inter omnes esset societas quaedam, major autem, ut quis- 20 que proxime accederet. Itaque cives potiores quam peregrini, propinqui quam alieni ; cum his enim ami-citiam natura ipsa peperit, sed ea non satis habet firmitatis. Namque hoc praestat amicitia propin-quitati, quod ex propinquitate benevolentia tolli 25 potest, ex amicitia non potest ; sublata enim benevolentia amicitiae nomen tollitur, propinquitatis manet.
Quanta autem vis amicitiae sit, ex hoc intelligi maxime potest, quod ex infinita societate generis humani, quam conciliavit ipsa natura, ita contracta 30 res est et adducta in angustum, ut omnis caritas aut inter duos aut inter paucos jungeretur.

VI. Est enim amicitia nihil aliud nisi omnium divinarum humanarumque rerum cum benevolentia et caritate consensio ; qua quidem haud scio an ex- 35 cepta sapientia nihil melius homini sit a dis immor-talibus datum. Divitias alii praeponunt, bonam alii valetudinem, alii potentiam, alii honores, multi etiam voluptates. Beluarum hoc quidem extremum, illa autem superiora caduca et incerta, posita non tam in consiliis nostris quam in fortunae temeritate. Qui autem in virtute summum bonum ponunt, praeclare illi quidem; sed haec ipsa virtus amicitiam et gignit 5 et continet, nec sine virtute amicitia esse ullo pacto potest. Jam virtutem ex consuetudine vitae sermonisque nostri interpretemur nec eam, ut quidam docti, verborum magnificentia metiamur virosque bonos eos, qui habentur, numeremus, Paulos, Catones,

10 Galos, Scipiones, Philos: his communis vita contenta est, eos autem omittamus, qui omnino nusquam reperiuntur. Tales igitur inter viros amicitia tantas opportunitates habet, quantas vix queo dicere. Principio, qui potest esse vita vitalis, ut ait Ennius, quae
15 non in amici mutua benevolentia conquiescit? Quid dulcius quam habere quicum omnia audeas sic loqui ut tecum? Qui esset tantus fructus in prosperis rebus, nisi haberes qui illis aequae ac tu ipse gauderet? Adversas vero ferre difficile esset sine eo, qui illas
20 gravius etiam quam tu ferret. Denique ceterae res, quae expetuntur, opportunaesunt singulae rebus fere singulis: divitiae, ut utare; opes, ut colare; honores, ut laudare; voluptates, ut gaudeas; valetudo, ut dolore careas et muneribus fungare corporis: amicitia
25 res plurimas continet; quoquo te verteris praesto est, nullo loco excluditur, numquam intempestiva, numquam molesta est; itaque non aqua, non igni, ut aiunt, locis pluribus utimur quam amicitia. Neque ego nunc de vulgari aut de mediocri, quae tamen 30 ipsa et delectat et prodest, sed de vera et perfecta loquor, qualis eorum, qui pauci nominantur, fuit. Nam et secundas res splendidiore facit amicitia, et adversas, partiens communicansque, leviores.

VII. Quumque plurimas et maximas commoditates 35 amicitia contineat, tum illa nimirum praestat omnibus, quod bonam spem praelucet in posterum nec debilitari animos aut cadere patitur. Verum enim amicum qui intuetur, tamquam exemplar aliquod intuetur sui. Quocirca et absentes adsunt et egentes abundant et imbecilli valent, et, quod difficilius dictu est, mortui vivunt: tantus eos honos, memoria, desiderium prosequitur amicorum. Ex quo illorum beata mors videtur, horum vita laudabilis. Quod si exemeris ex rerum natura benevolentiae conjunctionem, nec domus ulla nec urbs stare poterit, ne agri quidem cultus permanebit. Id si minus intelligitur, quanta vis amicitiae concordiaeque sit, ex dissensionibus atque ex discordiis perspicitur; quae enim domus tam stabilis, quae tam firma civitas est, quae non odiis et discidiis funditus possit everti? Ex quo quantum boni sit in amicitia judicari potest. Agrigentinum quidem doctum quandam virum carminibus Graecis vaticinatum ferunt, quae in rerum natura totoque mundo constarent quaeque moverentur, ea contrahere amicitiam, dissipare discordiam. Atque hoc quidem omnes mortales et intelligunt et re probant. Itaque, si quando aliquod officium existit amici in periculis aut adeundis aut communicandis, quis est, qui id non maximis efferat laudibus? Qui clamores tota cavea nuper in hospitis et amici mei M. Pacuvii nova fabula! quum, ignorante rege uter Orestes esset, Pylades Orestem se esse diceret, ut pro illo necaretur; Orestes autem, ita ut erat, Orestem se esse perseveraret. Stantes plaudebant in re ficta: quid arbitramur in vera facturos fuisse? Facile indicabat ipsa natura vim suam, quum homines, quod facere ipsi non possent, id recte fieri in altero judicarent. Hactenus mihi videor, de amicitia quid sentirem, potuisse dicere: siqua praeterea sunt, — credo autem esse multa, — ab iis, si videbitur, qui ista disputant, quaeritote.

FANNIUS. Nos vero a te potius: quamquam etiam ab istis saepe quaesivi et audiivi non invitus equidem; sed aliud quoddam filum orationis tuae.

SCAEVOLA. Tum magis id diceres, Fanni, si nuper in hortis Scipionis, quum est de re publica disputatum, affuisses. Qualis tum patronus iustitiae fuit contra accuratam orationem Philii!

FANNIUS. Facile id quidem fuit justitiam justissimo viro defendere.

SCAEVOLA. Quid amicitiam? Nonne facile ei, qui ob eam summa fide, constantia justitiaque servatam 15 maximam gloriam ceperit?

VIII. LAELIUS. Vim hoc quidem est afferre; quid enim refert qua me ratione cogatis? Cogitis certe; studiis enim generorum, praesertim in re bona, quum difficile est tum ne aequum quidem obsistere. Saepis-
10 sime igitur mihi de amicitia cogitanti maxime illud considerandum videri solet, utrum propter imbecillitatem atque inopiam desiderata sit amicitia, ut dandis recipiendisque meritis, quod quisque minus per se ipse posset, id acciperet ab alio vicissimque redderet;
15 an esset hoc quidem proprium amicitiae, sed antiquior et pulchrior et magis a natura ipsa profecta alia causa. Amor enim, ex quo amicitia nominata est, princeps est ad benevolentiam conjungendam. Nam utilitates quidem etiam ab iis percipiuntur saepe, qui
20 simulatione amicitiae coluntur et observantur temporis causa; in amicitia autem nihil fictum est, nihil simulatum, et, quidquid est, id est verum et voluntarium. Quapropter a natura mihi videtur potius quam ab indigentia orta amicitia, applicatione magis
25 animi cum quodam sensu amandi quam cogitatione quantum illa res utilitatis esset habitura. Quod quidem quale sit etiam in bestiis quibusdam animadverti potest, quae ex se natos ita amant ad quoddam tempus et ab iis ita amantur, ut facile earum sensus
30 appareat. Quod in homine multo est evidentius: primum, ex ea caritate, quae est inter natos et parentes, quae dirimi nisi detestabili scelere non potest: deinde, quum similis sensus exstitit amoris, si aliquem nacti sumus, cujus cum moribus et natura congruamus, quod in eo quasi lumen aliquod probitatis et 35 virtutis perspicere videamur. Nihil est enim virtute amabilius, nihil quod magis alliciat ad diligendum; quippe quum propter virtutem et probitatem etiam eos, quos numquam vidimus, quodam modo diliga-

mus. Quis est qui C. Fabricii, M'. Curii non cum caritate aliqua benevola memoriam usurpet, quos numquam viderit? Quis autem est qui Tarquinium Superbum, qui Sp. Cassium, Sp. Maelium non oderit? Cum duobus ducibus de imperio in Italia est decertatum, Pyrrho et Hannibale: ab altero propter probitatem ejus non nimis alienos animos habemus, alterum propter crudelitatem semper haec civitas oderit. 5

IX. Quod si tanta vis probitatis est, ut eam vel in iis, quos numquam vidimus, vel, quod majus est, in hoste etiam diligamus, quid mirum est, si animi hominum moveantur, quum eorum, quibuscum usu conjuncti esse possunt, virtutem et bonitatem perspicere videantur? Quamquam confirmatur amor et beneficio accepto et studio perspecto et consuetudine adjuncta; quibus rebus ad illum primum motum animi et amoris adhibitis admirabilis quaedam exardescit benevolentiae magnitudo. Quam si qui putant ab imbecillitate proficisci, ut sit, per quem assequatur quod quisque desideret, humilem sane relinquunt et minime generosum, ut ita dicam, ortum amicitiae, quam ex inopia atque indigentia natam volunt. Quod si ita esset, ut quisque minimum esse in se arbitraretur, ita ad amicitiam esset aptissimus; quod longe secus est. Ut enim quisque sibi plurimum confidit et ut quisque maxime virtute et sapientia sic munitus est, ut nullo egeat suaeque omnia in se ipso posita judicet, ita in amicitiiis expetendis colendisque maxime excellit. Quid enim? Africanus indigens mei? Minime hercle! ac ne ego quidem illius: sed ego admiratione quadam virtutis ejus, ille vicissim opinione fortasse nonnulla, quam de meis moribus habebat, me dilexit; auxit benevolentiam consuetudo. Sed quamquam utilitates multae et magnae consecutae sunt, non sunt tamen ab earum spe causae diligendi profectae. Ut enim benefici liberalesque sumus, non ut exigamus gratiam, — neque enim beneficium faenramur, sed natura propensi ad liberalitatem sumus, — 35

- sic amicitiam non spe mercedis adducti, sed quod omnis ejus fructus in ipso amore inest, expetendam putamus. Ab his, qui pecudum ritu ad voluptatem omnia referunt, longe dissentiunt: nec mirum; nihil enim altum, nihil magnificum ac divinum suspicere possunt, qui suas omnes cogitationes abjecerunt in rem tam humilem tanque contemptam. Quamobrem hos quidem ab hoc sermone removeamus; ipsi autem intelligamus natura gigni sensum diligendi et benevolentiae caritatem, facta significatione probitatis: quam qui appetiverunt, applicant se et propius admovent, ut et usu ejus, quem diligere coeperunt, fruantur et moribus; suntque pares in amore et aequales, propensioresque ad bene merendum quam ad reposcendum; atque haec inter eos est honesta certatio. Sic et utilitates ex amicitia maximae capientur, et erit ejus ortus a natura quam ab imbecillitate gravior et verior: nam si utilitas amicitias conglutina-20 ret, eadem commutata dissolveret; sed quia natura mutari non potest, idcirco verae amicitiae sempiternae sunt. Ortum quidem amicitiae videtis, nisi quid ad haec forte vultis.

FANNIUS. Tu vero perge, Laeli; pro hoc enim, qui minor est natu, meo jure respondeo.

- 25 SCAEVOLA. Recte tu quidem: quamobrem audiamus.

- X. LAELIUS. Audite vero, optimi viri, ea, quae saepissime inter me et Scipionem de amicitia disserebantur: quamquam ille quidem nihil difficilius esse 30 dicebat quam amicitiam usque ad extremum vitae diem permanere; nam vel ut non idem expediret incidere saepe, vel ut de re publica non idem sentiretur; mutari etiam mores hominum saepe dicebat, alias adversis rebus, alias aetate ingravescente.
 35 Atque earum rerum exemplum ex similitudine capiebat ineuntis aetatis, quod summi puerorum amores saepe una cum praetexta toga ponerentur; sin autem ad adolescentiam perduxissent, dirimi tamen interdum contentione vel uxoriae conditionis, vel commodi alicujus, quod idem adipisci uterque non posset: quod si qui longius in amicitia provecessent, tamen saepe labefactari, si in honoris conten-tionem incidissent; pestem enim nullam majorem esse amicitiiis quam in plerisque pecuniae cupiditatem, 5 in optimis quibusque honoris certamen et gloriae, ex quo inimicitias maximas saepe inter amicissimos exstitisse: magna etiam discidia et plerumque justa nasci, quum aliquid ab amicis, quod rectum non esset, postularetur, ut aut libidinis ministri aut adju- 10 tores essent ad injuriam. Quod qui recusarent, quamvis honeste id facerent, jus tamen amicitiae deserere arguerentur ab iis, quibus obsequi nollent; illos autem, qui quidvis ab amico auderent postulare, postulatione ipsa profiteri omnia se amici causa 15

 esse facturos; eorum querela inveterata non modo familiaritates exstingui solere, sed odia etiam gigni sempiterna: haec ita multa quasi fata impendere amicitiiis, ut omnia subterfugere non modo sapientiae, sed etiam felicitatis diceret sibi videri. 20

XI. Quamobrem id primum videamus, si placet, quatenus amor in amicitia progredi debeat. Numne, si Coriolanus habuit amicos, ferre contra patriam arma illi cum Coriolano debuerunt? Num Viscel-linum amici regnum appetentem, num Maclium 25 debuerunt juvare? Ti. quidem Gracchum rem publicam vexantem a Q. Tuberone aequalibusque amicis derelictum videbamus. At C. Blossius Cumanus, hospes familiae vestrae, Scaevola, quum ad me, quod aderam Laenati et Rupilio consulibus in con- 30
 silio, deprecatum venisset, hanc ut sibi ignoscerem causam afferebat, quod tanti Ti. Gracchum fecisset, ut quidquid ille vellet sibi faciendum putaret. Tum ego, Etiamne, inquam, si te in Capitolium faces ferre vellet? Numquam, inquit, voluisset id quidem; sed, si 35 voluisset, paruissem. Videtis quam nefaria vox! Et hercule ita fecit, vel plus etiam quam dixit; non enim paruit ille Ti. Gracchi temeritati, sed praefuit, nec se comitem illius furoris, sed ducem praebuit.

Itaque hac amentia, quaestione nova perterritus, in Asiam profugit, ad hostes se contulit, poenas rei publicae graves justasque persolvit. Nulla est igitur excusatio peccati, si amici causa peccaveris; nam, 5 quum conciliatrix amicitiae virtutis opinio fuerit, difficile est amicitiam manere, si a virtute defeceris.
 Quod si rectum statuerimus vel concedere amicis quidquid velint vel impetrare ab iis quidquid velimus, perfecta quidem sapientia si simus, nihil habeat 10 res vitii; sed loquimur de iis amicis, qui ante oculos sunt, quos vidimus aut de quibus memoriam accepimus, quos novit vita communis. Ex hoc numero nobis exempla sumenda sunt, et eorum quidem maxime, qui ad sapientiam proxime accedunt. Vide-15 mus Aemilium Luscino familiarem fuisse—sic a patribus accepimus—bis una consules, collegas in censura; tum et cum iis et inter se conjunctissimos fuisse M'. Curium, Ti. Coruncanium memoriae proditum est. Igitur ne suspicari quidem possumus quem-20 quam horum ab amico quidpiam contendisse, quod contra fidem, contra jusjurandum, contra rem publicam esset. Nam hoc quidem in talibus viris quid attinet dicere, si contendisset, impetraturum non fuisse, quum illi sanctissimi viri fuerint, aequae autem 25 nefas sit tale aliquid et facere rogatum et rogare?
 At vero Ti. Gracchum sequebantur C. Carbo, C.
 Cato, et minime tum quidem Caius frater, nunc idem acerrimus.

XII. Haec igitur lex in amicitia sanciat, ut 30 neque rogemus res turpes nec faciamus rogati, turpis enim excusatio est et minime accipienda quum in ceteris peccatis; tum si quis contra rem publicam se amici causa fecisse fateatur. Etenim eo loco, Fanni et Scaevola, locati sumus, ut nos longe prospicere 35 oporteat futuros casus rei publicae. Deflexit jam aliquantulum de spatio curriculoque consuetudo majorum. Ti. Gracchus regnum occupare conatus est, vel regnavit is quidem paucos menses. Num quid simile populus Romanus audierat aut viderat?

Hunc etiam post mortem secuti amici et propinqui quid in P. Scipione effecerint sine lacrimis non queo dicere. Nam Carbonem, quocumque modo potuimus, propter recentem poenam Ti. Gracchi sustinuimus. De C. Gracchi autem tribunatu quid exspectem non 5 libet augurari. Serpit deinde res, quae proclivius ad perniciem, quum semel coepit, labitur. Videtis in tabella jam ante quanta sit facta labes, primo Gabinia lege, biennio autem post Cassia. Videre jam videor populum a senatu disjunctum, multitudinis arbitrio 10 res maximas agi. Plures enim discent quemadmodum haec fiant, quam quemadmodum his resistatur. Quorsum haec? Quia sine sociis nemo quidquam tale conatur. Praeciendum est igitur bonis ut, si in ejusmodi amicitias ignari casu aliquo inciderint, 15 ne existiment ita se alligatos, ut ab amicis in magna aliqua re peccantibus non discedant; improbis autem poena statuenda est, nec vero minor iis, qui secuti erunt alterum, quam iis, qui ipsi fuerint impietatis duces. Quis clarior in Graecia Themistocle? quis 20 potentior? qui, quum imperator bello Persico servitute Graeciam liberavisset, propterque invidiam in exsilium expulsus esset, ingratae patriae injuriam, non tulit, quam ferre debuit. Fecit idem quod viginti annis ante apud nos fecerat Coriolanus. His 25 adjutor contra patriam inventus est nemo; itaque mortem sibi uterque conscivit. Quare talis improborum consensio non modo excusatione amicitiae tegenda non est, sed potius supplicio omni vindicanda est, ut ne quis concessum putet amicum vel bellum 30 patriae inferentem sequi. Quod quidem, ut res ire coepit, haud scio an aliquando futurum sit. Mihi autem non minori curae est, qualis res publica post mortem meam futura, quam qualis hodie sit.

XIII. Haec igitur prima lex amicitiae sancitur, ut 35 ab amicis honesta petamus, amicorum causa honesta faciamus; ne exspectemus quidem, dum rogemur, studium semper adsit, cunctatio absit: consilium vero dare audeamus libere, plurimum in amicitia

- amicorum bene suadentium valeat auctoritas, eaque et adhibeatur ad monendum non modo aperte, sed etiam acriter, si res postulabit, et adhibitae pareatur. Nam quibusdam, quos audio sapientes habitos in
- 5 Graecia, placuisse opinor mirabilia quaedam — sed nihil est, quod illi non persequantur argutiis: — partim fugiendas esse nimias amicitias, ne necesse sit unum sollicitum esse pro pluribus; satis superque esse sibi suarum cuique rerum, alienis nimis implicari
- 10 molestum esse; commodissimum esse quam laxissimas habenas habere amicitiae, quas vel adducas quum velis vel remittas; caput enim esse ad beate vivendum securitatem, qua frui non possit animus, si tamquam parturiat unus pro pluribus. Alios autem
- 15 dicere aiunt multo etiam inhumanius — quem locum breviter paulo ante perstrinxi — praesidii adiumentique causa, non benevolentiae neque caritatis, amicitias esse expetendas; itaque, ut quisque minimum firmitatis haberet minimumque virium, ita
- 20 amicitias appetere maxime; ex eo fieri ut mulierculae magis amicitiarum praesidia quaerant quam viri, et inopes quam opulenti, et calamitosi quam ii, qui putantur beati. O praeclaram sapientiam! Solem enim e mundo tollere videntur qui amicitiam e vita
- 25 tollunt, qua nihil a dis immortalibus melius habemus, nihil jucundius. Quae est enim ista securitas? Specie quidem blanda, sed reapse multis locis repudianda. Neque enim est consentaneum ullam honestam rem actionemve, ne sollicitus sis, aut non
- 30 suscipere aut susceptam deponere. Quod si curam fugimus, virtus fugienda est, quae necesse est cum aliqua cura res sibi contrarias aspernetur atque oderit, ut bonitas malitiam, temperantia libidinem, ignaviam fortitudo. Itaque videas rebus injustis
- 35 justos maxime dolere, imbellibus fortes, flagitiosis modestos. Ergo hoc proprium est animi bene constituti, et laetari bonis rebus et dolere contrariis. Quamobrem, si cadit in sapientem animi dolor, qui profecto cadit, nisi ex ejus animo extirpatam humanitatem arbitramur, quae causa est cur amicitiam funditus tollamus e vita, ne aliquas propter eam suscipiamus molestias? Quid enim interest motu animi sublato, non dico inter pecudem et hominem, sed inter hominem et truncum aut saxum aut quidvis generis ejusdem? Neque enim sunt isti audiendi, qui virtutem duram et quasi férream esse quandam volunt; quae quidem est quum multis in rebus tum in amicitia tenera atque tractabilis, ut et bonis amici quasi diffundatur et incommodis contrahatur. Quamobrem angor iste, qui pro amico saepe capiendus est, non tantum valet, ut tollat e vita amicitiam, non plus quam ut virtutes, quia nonnullas curas et molestias afferunt, repudientur.

XIV. Quum autem contrahat amicitiam, ut supra dixi, si qua significatio virtutis eluceat, ad quam se similis animus applicet et adjungat, id quum contigit, amor exoriatur necesse est. Quid enim tam absurdum quam delectari multis inanibus rebus, ut honore, ut gloria, ut aedificio, ut vestitu cultuque corporis, animo autem virtute praedito, eo qui vel amare vel, ut ita dicam, redamare possit, non admodum delectari? Nihil est enim remuneratione benevolentiae, nihil vicissitudine studiorum officiorumque jucundius. Quid? si illud etiam addimus, quod recte addi potest, nihil essè quod ad se rem ullam tam illiciat et attrahat quam ad amicitiam similitudo, concedetur profecto verum esse, ut bonos boni diligant adsciscantque sibi quasi propinquitate conjunctos atque natura. Nihil est enim appetentius similium sui, nec rapacius, quam natura. Quamobrem hoc quidem, Fanni et Scaevola, constet, ut opinor, bonis inter bonos quasi necessariam benevolentiam, qui est amicitiae fons a natura constitutus. Sed eadem bonitas etiam ad multitudinem pertinet; non enim est inhumana virtus neque immunis neque superba, quae etiam populos universos tueri iisque optime consulere soleat, quod non faceret profecto, si a caritate vulgi abhorreret. Atque etiam mihi quidem videntur, qui utilitatis

- causa fingunt amicitias, amabilissimum nodum amicitiae tollere; non enim tam utilitas parta per amicum quam amici amor ipse delectat, tumque illud fit, quod ab amico est profectum, jucundum, si cum studio
5 est profectum; tantumque abest ut amicitiae propter indigentiam colantur, ut ii, qui opibus et copiis maximeque virtute, in qua plurimum est praesidii, minime alterius indigent, liberalissimi sint et beneficentissimi. Atque haud sciam an ne opus sit quidem
10 nihil unquam omnino deesse amicis. Ubi enim studia nostra viguissent, si numquam consilio, numquam opera nostra nec domi nec militiae Scipio eguisset? Non igitur utilitatem amicitia, sed utilitas amicitiam secuta est.
- 15 XV. Non ergo erunt homines deliciis diffuentes audiendi, si quando de amicitia, quam nec usu nec ratione habent cognitam, disputabunt. Nam quis est, proh deorum fidem atque hominum, qui velit, ut neque diligat quemquam nec ipse ab ullo diligatur, 20 circumfluere omnibus copiis atque in omnium rerum abundantia vivere? Haec enim est tyrannorum vita, nimirum in qua nulla fides, nulla caritas, nulla stabilis benevolentiae potest esse fiducia; omnia semper suspecta atque sollicita, nullus locus amicitiae; quis
25 enim aut eum diligat, quem metuat, aut eum, a quo se metui putet? Coluntur tamen simulatione dumtaxat ad tempus. Quod si forte, ut fit plerumque, ceciderunt, tum intelligitur quam fuerint inopes amicorum. Quod Tarquinius dixisse ferunt, tum 30 exulantem se intellexisse, quos fidos amicos habuisset, quos infidos, quum jam neutris gratiam referre posset. Quamquam miror, illa superbia et importunitate, si quemquam amicum habere potuit. Atque ut hujus, quem dixi, mores veros amicos parare non 35 potuerunt, sic multorum opes praepotentium excludunt amicitias fideles. Non enim solum ipsa Fortuna caeca est, sed eos etiam plerumque efficit caecos, quos complexa est. Itaque efferuntur fere fastidio et contumacia, neque quidquam insipiente fortunato intolerabilius fieri potest. Atque hoc quidem videre licet, eos, qui antea commodis fuerint moribus, imperio, potestate, prosperis rebus immutari, sperni ab iis veteres amicitias, indulgeri novis. Quid autem stultius quam, quum plurimum copiis, facultatibus, opibus possint, cetera parare, quae parantur pecunia, equos, famulos, vestem egregiam, vasa pretiosa; amicos non parare, optimam et pulcherrimam vitae, ut ita dicam, supellectilem? Etenim cetera quum parant, cui parent nesciunt nec cujus causa laborent; ejus enim est istorum quidque, qui vincit viribus: amicitiarum sua cuique permanet stabilis et certa possessio, ut, etiam si illa maneant, quae sunt quasi dona Fortunae, tamen vita inculta et deserta ab amicis non possit esse jucunda. Sed haec hac tenus. 5 10 15

XVI. Constituendi autem sunt, qui sint in amicitia fines et quasi termini diligendi; de quibus tres video sententias ferri, quarum nullam probo: unam, ut eodem modo erga amicum affecti simus quo erga nosmet ipsos; alteram, ut nostra in amicos benevolentia illorum erga nos benevolentiae pariter aequaliterque respondeat; tertiam, ut, quanti quisque se ipse faciat, tanti fiat ab amicis. Harum trium sententiarum nulli prorsus assentior. Nec enim illa prima vera est, ut, quemadmodum in se quisque, sic in amicum sit animatus; quam multa enim, quae nostra causa numquam faceremus, facimus [causa] amicorum! precari ab indigno, supplicare, tum acerbius in aliquem invehi, insectarique vehementius, quae in nostris rebus non satis honeste, in amicorum fiunt honestissime; multaeque res sunt, in quibus de suis commodis viri boni multa detrahunt detrahique patiuntur, ut iis amici potius quam ipsi fruantur. Altera sententia est, quae definit amicitiam paribus officiis ac voluntatibus. Hoc quidem est nimis exigue et exiliter ad calculos vocare amicitiam, ut par sit ratio acceptorum et datorum. Divitior mihi et affluentior videtur esse vera amicitia nec observare 20 25 30 35

restricte, ne plus reddat quam acceperit. Neque enim verendum est ne quid excidat, aut ne quid in terram defluat, aut ne plus aequo quid in amicitiam congeratur. Tertius vero ille finis deterrimus, ut, 5 quanti quisque se ipse faciat, tanti fiat ab amicis; saepe enim in quibusdam aut animus abjectior est aut spes amplificandae fortunae fractior. Non est igitur amici talem esse in eum, qualis ille in se est, sed potius eniti et efficere, ut amici jacentem animum
10 excitet inducatque in spem cogitationemque meliorem. Alius igitur finis verae amicitiae constituendus est, si prius, quid maxime reprehendere Scipio solitus sit, dixerō. Negabat ullam vocem inimiciorem amicitiae potuisse reperiri quam ejus, qui dixisset ita amare
15 oportere, ut si aliquando esset osurus; nec vero se adduci posse, ut hoc, quemadmodum putaretur, a Biante dictum esse crederet, qui sapiens habitus esset unus e septem; impuri cujusdam aut ambitiosi aut omnia ad suam potentiam revocantis esse sententiam.
20 Quonam enim modo quisquam amicus esse poterit ei, cui se putabit inimicum esse posse? Quin etiam necesse erit cupere et optare, ut quam saepissime peccet amicus, quo plures det sibi tamquam ansas ad reprehendendum; rursus autem recte factis commo-
25 disque amicorum necesse erit angi, dolere, invidere. Quare hoc quidem praëceptum, cujuscumque est, ad tollendam amicitiam valet. Illud potius praecipendum fuit, ut eam diligentiam adhiberemus in amicitiiis comparandis, ut ne quando amare inciperemus
30 eum, quem aliquando odisse possemus. Quin etiam si minus felices in deligendo fuissemus, ferendum id Scipio potius quam inimicitiarum tempus cogitandum putabat.

XVII. His igitur finibus utendum arbitror, ut, 35 quum emendati mores amicorum sint, tum sit inter eos omnium rerum, consiliorum, voluntatum sine ulla exceptione communitas, ut etiam, si qua fortuna acciderit ut minus justae amicorum voluntates adjuvandae sint, in quibus eorum aut caput agatur aut fama, declinandum de via sit, modo ne summa turpitudine sequatur; est enim quatenus amicitiae dari venia possit. Nec vero negligenda est fama, nec mediocre telum ad res gerendas existimare oportet benevolentiam civium, quam blanditiis et assentando colligere turpe est; virtus, quam sequitur caritas, minime repudianda est. Sed — saepe enim redeo ad Scipionem, 5 cujus omnis sermo erat de amicitia — querebatur, quod omnibus in rebus homines diligentiores essent: capras et oves quot quisque haberet dicere posse, amicos quot 10 haberet non posse dicere; et in illis quidem parandis adhibere curam, in amicis deligendis negligentes esse nec habere quasi signa quaedam et notas, quibus eos, qui ad amicitiam essent idonei, judicarent. Sunt igitur firmi et stabiles et constantes eligendi, cujus 15 generis est magna penuria, et judicare difficile est sane nisi expertum; experiundum autem est in ipsa amicitia; ita praecurrit amicitia iudicium tollitque experiendi potestatem. Est igitur prudentis sustinere ut cursum, sic impetum benevolentiae, quo utamur 20 quasi equis temptatis, sic amicitia, aliqua parte periclitatis moribus amicorum. Quidam saepe in parva pecunia perspiciuntur quam sint leves, quidam autem, quos parva movere non potuit, cognoscuntur in magna. Sin vero erunt aliqui reperti, qui pecuniam praeferre 25 amicitiae sordidum existiment, ubi eos inveniemus, qui honores, magistratus, imperia, potestates, opes amicitiae non anteponant, ut, quum ex altera parte proposita haec sint, ex altera jus amicitiae, non multo illa malint? Imbecilla enim est natura ad contem- 30 nendam potentiam; quam etiamsi neglecta amicitia consecuti sint, obscuratum iri arbitrantur, quia non sine magna causa sit neglecta amicitia. Itaque verae amicitiae difficillime reperiuntur in iis, qui in honoribus reque publica versantur. Ubi enim istum 35 invenias, qui honorem amici anteponat suo? Quid? haec ut omittam, quam graves, quam difficiles plerisque videntur calamitatum societates! ad quas non est facile inventu qui descendant. Quamquam Ennius recte:

Amicus certus in re incerta cernitur;

tamen haec duo levitatis et infirmitatis plerosque con-
5 vincunt, aut si in bonis rebus contemnunt, aut in malis deserunt. Qui igitur utraque in re gravem, constantem, stabilem se in amicitia praestiterit, hunc ex maxime raro genere hominum judicare debemus et paene divino.

- 10 XVIII. Firmamentum autem stabilitatis constantiaeque est ejus, quam in amicitia quaerimus, fides; nihil est enim stabile, quod infidum est. Simplicem praeterea et communem et consentientem, id est qui rebus iisdem moveatur, eligi par est; quae
15 omnia pertinent ad fidelitatem. Neque enim fidum potest esse multiplex ingenium et tortuosum; neque vero, qui non iisdem rebus movetur naturaque consentit, aut fidus aut stabilis potest esse. Addendum eodem est, ut ne criminibus aut inferendis delectetur
20 aut credat oblatis, quae pertinent omnia ad eam, quam jamdudum tracto, constantiam. Ita fit verum illud, quod initio dixi, amicitiam nisi inter bonos esse non posse; est enim boni viri, quem eundem sapientem licet dicere, haec duo tenere in amicitia: primum, ne
25 quid fictum sit neve simulatum; aperte enim vel odisse magis ingenui est quam fronte occultare sententiam: deinde, non solum ab aliquo allatas criminationes repellere, sed ne ipsum quidem esse suspiciosum, semper aliquid existimantem ab amico esse
30 violatum. Accedat huc suavitas quaedam oportet sermonum atque morum, haudquaquam mediocre condimentum amicitiae. Tristitia autem et in omni re severitas habet illa quidem gravitatem, sed amicitia remissior esse debet et liberior et dulcior et ad 35 omnem comitatem facilitatemque proclivior.

XIX. Exsistit autem hoc loco quaedam quaestio subdifficilis, num quando amici novi, digni amicitia, veteribus sint anteponendi, ut equis vetulis teneros anteponere solemus. Indigna homine dubitatio! Nop enim debent esse amicitiarum, sicut aliarum rerum, satietates: veterrima quaeque, ut ea vina, quae vetustatem ferunt, esse debet suavissima, verumque illud est, quod dicitur, multos modios salis simul edendos esse, ut amicitiae munus expletum sit. 5 Novitates autem, si spem afferunt ut tamquam in herbis non fallacibus fructus appareat, non sunt illae quidem repudiandae, vetustas tamen suo loco conservanda; maxima est enim vis vetustatis et consuetudinis. 10 Quin ipso equo, cujus modo mentionem feci, si nulla res impediatur, nemo est quin eo, quo consuevit, libentius utatur quam intractato et novo; nec vero in hoc, quod est animal, sed in iis etiam quae sunt inanima, consuetudo valet, quum 15 locis ipsis delectemur, montuosis etiam et silvestribus, in quibus diutius commorati sumus. Sed maximum est in amicitia parem esse inferiori; saepe enim excellentiae quaedam sunt, qualis erat Scipionis in nostro, ut ita dicam, grege. Numquam se ille Philo, 20 numquam Rupilio, numquam Mummio anteposuit, numquam inferioris ordinis amicis; Q. vero Maximum fratrem, egregium virum omnino, sibi nequaquam parem, quod is anteibat aetate, tamquam superiorem colebat suosque omnes per se esse ampliores volebat. 25 Quod faciendum imitandumque est omnibus, ut, si quam praestantiam virtutis, ingenii, fortunae consecuti sint, impertiant ea suis communicentque cum proximis; ut, si parentibus nati sint humilibus, si propinquos habeant imbecilliores vel animo vel fortuna, eorum augeant opes iisque honori sint et dignitati; ut in fabulis, qui aliquamdiu propter ignorantem stirpis et generis in famulatu fuerunt, quum cogniti sunt et aut deorum aut regum filii inventi, retinent tamen caritatem in pastores, quos patres 35 multos annos esse duxerunt. Quod est multo profecto magis in veris patribus certisque faciendum; fructus enim ingenii et virtutis omnisque praestantiae tum maximus capitur, quum in proximum quemque confertur.

XX. Ut igitur ii, qui sunt in amicitiae conjunctionisque necessitudine superiores, exaequare se cum inferioribus debent, sic inferiores non dolere se a suis aut ingenio aut fortuna aut dignitate superari; 5 quorum plerique aut queruntur semper aliquid aut etiam exprobrant, eoque magis, si habere se putant quod officiose et amice et cum labore aliquo suo factum queant dicere: odiosum sane genus hominum officia exprobrantium, quae meminisse debet is, in 10 quem collata sunt, non commemorare qui contulit. Quamobrem, ut ii, qui superiores sunt, submittere se debent in amicitia, sic quodam modo inferiores extollere. Sunt enim quidam, qui molestas amicitias faciunt, quum ipsi se contemni putant; quod non 15 fere contingit nisi iis, qui etiam contemnendos se arbitrantur, qui hac opinione non modo verbis sed etiam opere levandi sunt. Tantum autem cuique tribuendum, primum, quantum ipse efficere possis, deinde etiam, quantum ille, quem diligas atque ad- 20 juves, sustinere; non enim neque tu possis, quamvis excellas, omnes tuos ad honores amplissimos perducere, ut Scipio P. Rupilius potuit consulem efficere, fratrem ejus Lucium non potuit. Quod si etiam possis quidvis deferre ad alterum, videndum est tamen quid 25 ille possit sustinere. Omnino amicitiae corroboratis jam confirmatisque et ingeniis et aetatibus judicandae sunt, nec, si qui ineunte aetate venandi aut pilae studiosi fuerunt, eos habere necessarios, quos tum eodem studio praeditos dilexerunt. Isto enim modo nutrices 30 et paedagogi jure vetustatis plurimum benevolentiae postulabunt: qui negligendi quidem non sunt, sed alio quodam modo aestimandi. Aliter amicitiae stabiles permanere non possunt. Disparis enim mores disparia studia sequuntur, quorum dissimilitudo dissociat amicitias; nec ob aliam causam ullam 35 boni improbi, improbi bonis amici esse non possunt, nisi quod tanta est inter eos, quanta maxima potest esse, morum studiorumque distantia. Recte etiam praecipi potest in amicitiiis, ne intemperata quaedam benevolentia, quod persaepe fit, impediatur magnas utilitates amicorum. Nec enim, ut ad fabulas redeam, Trojam Neoptolemus capere potuisset, si Lycomedem, apud quem erat educatus, multis cum lacrimis iter suum impediens audire voluisset. Et saepe incidunt magnae res, ut discedendum sit ab amicis; quas qui impedire vult, quod desiderium non facile ferat, is et infirmus est mollisque natura et ob eam ipsam causam in amicitia parum justus. Atque in omni re considerandum est, et quid postules ab amico et quid patiari a te impetrari. 5 10

XXI. Est etiam quaedam calamitas in amicitiiis dimittendis nonnumquam necessaria; jam enim a sapientium familiaritatibus ad vulgares amicitias oratio nostra delabatur. Erumpunt saepe vitia amicorum tum in ipsos amicos, tum in alienos, quorum tamen ad amicos redundet infamia. Tales igitur amicitiae sunt remissione usus eluendae et, ut Catonem dicere audivi, dissuendae magis quam discindendae, nisi quaedam admodum intolerabilis injuria exarserit, ut neque rectum neque honestum sit nec fieri possit ut non statim alienatio disjunctioque facienda sit. Sin autem aut morum aut studiorum commutatio quaedam, ut fieri solet, facta erit aut in rei publicae partibus dissensio intercesserit — loquor enim jam, ut paulo ante dixi, non de sapientium, sed de communibus amicitiiis, — cavendum erit ne non solum amicitiae depositae, sed etiam inimicitiae susceptae videantur; nihil enim est turpius quam cum eo bellum gerere, quocum familiariter vixeris. Ab amicitia Q. Pompeii meo nomine se removerat, ut scitis, Scipio; propter dissensionem autem, quae erat in re publica, alienatus est a collega nostro Metello: utrumque egit graviter, auctoritate et offensione animi non acerba. Quamobrem primum danda opera est, nequa amicorum discidia fiant; sin tale aliquid evenierit, ut extinctae potius amicitiae quam oppressae videantur. Cavendum vero ne etiam in graves inimicitias convertant se amicitiae, ex quibus jurgia, male-

- dicta, contumeliae gignuntur: quae tamen si tolerabiles erunt, ferendae sunt et hic honos veteri amicitiae tribuendus, ut is in culpa sit, qui faciat, non is, qui patiatur injuriam. Omnino omnium horum
5 vitiorum atque incommodorum una cautio est atque una provisio, ut ne nimis cito diligere incipiant neve non dignos. Digni autem sunt amicitia, quibus in ipsis inest causa cur diligantur. Rarum genus! et quidem omnia praeclara rara, nec quidquam difficilius
10 quam reperire quod sit omni ex parte in suo genere perfectum. Sed plerique neque in rebus humanis quidquam bonum norunt nisi quod fructuosum sit, et amicos tamquam pecudes eos potissimum diligunt, ex quibus sperant se maximum fructum esse capturos.
15 Ita pulcherrima illa et maxime naturali carent amicitia per se et propter se expetita, nec ipsi sibi exemplo sunt, haec vis amicitiae et qualis et quanta sit; ipse enim se quisque diligit, non ut aliquam a se ipse mercedem exigit caritatis suae, sed quod per se
20 quisque sibi carus est. Quod nisi idem in amicitiam transferetur, verus amicus numquam reperietur; est enim is qui est tamquam alter idem. Quod si hoc apparet in bestiis, volucris, nantibus, agrestibus, cicuribus, feris, primum, ut se ipsae diligant, — id
25 enim pariter cum omni animante nascitur, — deinde, ut requirant atque appetant, ad quas se applicent ejusdem generis animantes, idque faciunt cum desiderio et cum quadam similitudine amoris humani, quanto id magis in homine fit natura, qui et se ipse 30 diligit et alterum anquirit cujus animum ita cum suo misceat, ut efficiat paene unum ex duobus?

XXII. Sed plerique perverse, ne dicam impudenter, habere talem amicum volunt, quales ipsi esse non possunt, quaeque ipsi non tribuunt amicis, haec
35 ab iis desiderant. Par est autem primum ipsum esse virum bonum, tum alterum similem sui quaerere. In talibus ea, quam jamdudum tractamus, stabilitas amicitiae confirmari potest, quum homines benevolentia conjuncti primum cupiditatibus iis, quibus ceteri serviunt, imperabunt, deinde aequitate justitiaeque gaudebunt, omniaque alter pro altero suscipiet, neque quidquam umquam nisi honestum et rectum alter ab altero postulabit, neque solum colent inter se ac diligent, sed etiam verebuntur. Nam 5 maximum ornamentum amicitiae tollit, qui ex ea tollit verecundiam. Itaque in iis perniciosus est error, qui existimant libidinum peccatorumque omnium patere in amicitia licentiam. Virtutum amicitia adjutrix a natura data est, non vitiorum comes, 10 ut, quoniam solitaria non posset virtus ad ea, quae summa sunt, pervenire, conjuncta et consociata cum altera perveniret; quae si quos inter societas aut est aut fuit aut futura est, eorum est habendus ad summum naturae bonum optimus beatissimusque comitatus. Haec est, inquam, societas, in qua omnia 15 insunt, quae putant homines expetenda, honestas, gloria, tranquillitas animi atque jucunditas, ut et quum haec adsint beata vita sit et sine his esse non possit. Quod quum optimum maximumque sit, si 20 id volumus adipisci, virtuti opera danda est, sine qua nec amicitiam neque ullam rem expetendam consequi possumus; ea vero neglecta, qui se amicos habere arbitrantur, tum se denique errasse sentiunt, quum eos gravis aliquis casus experiri cogit. Quo- 25 circa — dicendum est enim saepius — quum judicaris, diligere oportet, non, quum dilexeris, judicare. Sed quum multis in rebus negligentia plectimur, tum maxime in amicis et deligendis et colendis; praeposteris enim utimur consiliis et acta agimus, quod veterum 30 vetere proverbio. Nam, implicati ultro et citro vel usu diuturno vel etiam officiis, repente in medio cursu amicitias exorta aliqua offensione dirumpimus.

XXIII. Quo etiam magis vituperanda est rei maxime necessariae tanta incuria; una est enim amicitia in rebus humanis, de cujus utilitate omnes uno ore consentiunt. A multis virtus ipsa contemnitur et venditatio quaedam atque ostentatio esse dicitur. Multi divitias despiciunt, quos parvo contentos tenuis

victus cultusque delectat; honores vero, quorum cupiditate quidam inflammantur, quam multi ita contemnunt, ut nihil inanius, nihil esse levius existiment; itemque cetera, quae quibusdam admirabilia
5 videntur, permulti sunt qui pro nihilo putent: de amicitia omnes ad unum idem sentiunt, et ii, qui ad rem publicam se contulerunt, et ii, qui rerum cognitione doctrinaque delectantur, et ii, qui suum negotium gerunt otiosi, postremo ii, qui se totos
10 tradiderunt voluptatibus, sine amicitia vitam esse nullam, si modo velint aliqua ex parte liberaliter vivere. Serpit enim nescio quomodo per omnium vitas amicitia nec ullam aetatis degendae rationem patitur esse expertem sui. Quin etiam si quis
15 asperitate ea est et immanitate naturae, congressus ut hominum fugiat atque oderit, qualem fuisse Athenis Timonem nescio quem accepimus, tamen is pati non possit, ut non anquirat aliquem, apud quem evomat virus acerbitalis suae. Atque hoc maxime
20 judicaretur, si quid tale posset contingere, ut aliquis nos deus ex hac hominum frequentia tolleretur et in solitudine uspiam collocaret atque ibi suppedians omnium rerum, quas natura desiderat, abundantiam et copiam hominis omnino aspiciendi potestatem
25 eriperet. Quis tam esset ferreus, qui eam vitam ferre posset, cuique non auferret fructum voluptatum omnium solitudo? Verum ergo illud est, quod a Tarentino Archyta, ut opinor, dici solitum nostros senes commemorare audiavi ab aliis senibus auditum;
30 si quis in caelum ascendisset naturamque mundi et pulchritudinem siderum perspexisset, insuavem illam admirationem ei fore, quae jucundissima fuisset, si aliquem cui narraret habuisset. Sic natura solitarium nihil amat semperque ad aliquod tamquam 35 adminiculum annititur, quod in amicissimo quoque dulcissimum est.

XXIV. Sed quum tot signis eadem natura declararet quid velit, anquirat, desideret, tamen obsurdescimus nescio quomodo nec ea, quae ab ea monemur audimus. Est enim varius et multiplex usus amicitiae, multaeque causae suspicionum offensionumque dantur, quas tum evitare, tum elevare, tum ferre sapientis est. Una illa subeunda est offensio, ut et utilitas in amicitia et fides retineatur; nam et monendi amici saepe sunt et objurgandi, et haec accipienda amice, quum benevole fiunt. Sed nescio quomodo verum est, quod in Andria familiaris meus dicit:

Obsequium amicos, veritas odium parit.

Molesta veritas, si quidem ex ea nascitur odium, quod est venenum amicitiae; sed obsequium multo molestius, quod peccatis indulgens praecipitem ami-cum ferri sinit; maxima autem culpa in eo, qui et veritatem aspernatur et in fraudem obsequio impellitur. Omni igitur hac in re habenda ratio et diligentia est, primum, ut monitio acerbitate, deinde, ut objurgatio contumelia careat; in obsequio autem, quoniam Terentiano verbo libenter utimur, comitas adsit, assentatio, vitiorum adiutrix, procul amoveatur, quae non modo amico, sed ne libero quidem digna est; aliter enim cum tyranno, aliter cum amico vivitur. Cujus autem aures, clausae veritati sunt, ut ab amico verum audire nequeat, hujus salus de-speranda est. Scitum est enim illud Catonis, ut multa; melius de quibusdam acerbos inimicos mereri quam eos amicos, qui dulces videantur; illos verum saepe dicere, hos numquam. Atque illud absurdum, quod ii, qui monentur, eam molestiam, quam debent capere, non capiunt, eam capiunt, qua debent vacare.
Peccasse enim se non anguntur; objurgari moleste ferunt: quod contra oportebat delicto dolere, cor-rectione gaudere.

XXV. Ut igitur et monere et moneri proprium est verae amicitiae, et alterum libere facere, non aspere, alterum patienter accipere, non repugnanter, sic habendum est nullam in amicitiiis pestem esse majorem quam adulationem, blanditiam, assentationem; quamvis enim multis nominibus est hoc vitium notandum levium hominum atque fallacium, ad voluntatem loquentium omnia, nihil ad veritatem.

Quum autem ompium rerum simulatio vitiosa est —

- 5 tollit enim iudicium veri idque adulterat, — tum amicitiae repugnat maxime; delet enim veritatem, sine qua nomen amicitiae valere non potest. Nam quum amicitiae vis sit in eo, ut unus quasi animus fiat ex pluribus, qui id fieri poterit, si ne in uno 10 quidem quoque unus animus erit idemque semper, sed varius, commutabilis, multiplex? Quid enim potest esse tam flexibile, tam devium, quam animus ejus, qui ad alterius non modo sensum ac voluntatem, sed etiam vultum atque nutum convertitur?

- 15 Negat quis, nego: ait, aio: postremo imperavi egomet mihi Omnia assentari, ut ait idem Terentius, sed ille in Gnathonis persona; quod amici genus adhibere omnino levitatis est. Multi autem Gnathonum similes quum sint loco, for-

- 20 tuna, fama superiores, horum est assentatio molesta, quum ad vanitatem accessit auctoritas. Secerni autem blandus amicus a vero et internosci tam potest adhibita diligentia quam omnia fucata et simulata a sinceris atque veris. Contio, quae ex imperitissimis 25 constat, tamen judicare solet, quid intersit inter popularem, id est, assentatorem et levem civem, et inter constantem et severum et gravem. Quibus blanditiis C. Papirius nuper influebat in aures contionis, quum ferret legem de tribunis plebis reficiendis! Dissua-
30 simus nos; sed nihil de me, de Scipione dicam libentius. Quanta illi, di immortales! fuit gravitas, quanta in oratione majestas! ut facile ducem populi Romani, non comitem diceres. Sed affuistis, et est in manibus oratio. Itaque lex popularis suffragiis ad populi beneficium transferebatur. Atque is primus instituit in forum versus agere cum populo; tamen illius vendibilem orationem religio deorum immortalium nobis defendentibus facile vincebat. Atque id actum est praetore me, quinquennio ante 5 quam consul sum factus. Ita re magis quam summa auctoritate causa illa defensa est.
35 populi repudiata est. Atque, ut ad me redeam, meministis, Q. Maximo fratre Scipionis et L. Mancino consulibus, quam popularis lex de sacerdotiis C. Licinii Crassi videbatur! cooptatio enim collegiorum

XXVI. Quod si in scaena, id est in contione, in qua rebus fictis et adumbratis loci plurimum est, tamen verum valet, si modo id patefactum et illustratum est, quid in amicitia fieri oportet, quae tota veritate perpenditur? in qua nisi, ut dicitur, apertum pectus videas tuumque ostendas, nihil fidum, nihil exploratum habeas; ne amare quidem aut amari, quum id quam vere fiat ignores. Quamquam ista 15 assentatio, quamvis perniciosa sit, nocere tamen nemini potest nisi ei, qui eam recipit atque ea delectatur. Ita fit ut is assentatoribus patefaciat aures suas maxime, qui ipse sibi assentetur et se maxime ipse delectet. Omnino est amans sui virtus; optime 20 enim se ipsa novit quamque amabilis sit intelligit; ego autem non de virtute nunc loquor, sed de virtutis opinione: virtute enim ipsa non tam multi praediti esse quam videri volunt. Hos delectat assentatio, his fictus ad ipsorum voluntatem sermo quum ad- 25 hibetur, orationem illam vanam testimonium esse laudum suarum putant. Nulla est igitur haec amicitia, quum alter verum audire non vult, alter ad mentiendum paratus est. Nec parasitorum in comoediis assentatio faceta nobis videretur, nisi 30 essent milites gloriosi.

Magnas vero agere gratias Thais mihi?

Satis erat respondere: Magnas. Ingentes, inquit. Semper auget assentator id, quod is, cujus ad voluntatem dicitur, vult esse magnum. Quamobrem, 35 quamquam blanda ista vanitas apud eos valet, qui ipsi illam allectant et invitant, tamen etiam graviore constantioresque admonendi sunt, ut animadvertant ne callida assentatione capiantur. Aperte enim adulantem nemo non videt, nisi qui admodum est excors: callidus ille et occultus ne se insinuet studioso cavendum est. Nec enim facillime agnoscitur, quippe qui 5 etiam adversando saepe assentetur et litigare se simulans blandiatur atque ad extremum det manus vincique se patiatur, ut is, qui illusus sit, plus vidisse videatur. Quid autem turpius quam illudi? Quod ut ne accadat magis cavendum est:

- 10 Ut me hodie ante omnes comicos stultos senes
 Versaris atque illusseris lautissime.

Haec enim etiam in fabulis stultissima persona est improvidorum et credulorum senum. Sed nescio quo pacto ab amicitiiis perfectorum hominum, id est 15 sapientium — de hac dico sapientia, quae videtur in hominem cadere posse, — ad leves amicitias defluxit oratio. Quamobrem ad illa prima redeamus eaque ipsa concludamus aliquando.

- XXVII. Virtus, virtus, inquam, C. Fanni et tu
 20 Q. Muci, et conciliat amicitias et conservat; in ea est enim convenientia rerum, in ea stabilitas, in ea constantia: quae quum se extulit et ostendit suum lumen et idem adspexit agnovitque in alio, ad id se admovent vicissimque accipit illud, quod in altero est,
 25 ex quo exardescit sive amor sive amicitia. Utrumque enim ductum est ab amando; amare autem nihil est aliud nisi eum ipsum diligere quem ames, nulla indigentia, nulla utilitate quaesita; quae tamen ipsa efflorescit ex amicitia, etiamsi tu eam minus secutus 30 sis. Hac nos adolescentes benevolentia senes illos L. Paulum, M. Catonem, C. Galum, P. Nasicam, Ti. Gracchum, Scipionis nostri socerum, dileximus; haec etiam magis elucet inter aequales, ut inter me et Scipionem, L. Furium, P. Rupilium, Sp. Mummium;
 35 vicissim autem senes in adolescentium caritate acquiescimus, ut in vestra, ut in Q. Tuberonis; equidem etiam admodum adolescentis P. Rutilii, A. Verginii familiaritate delector. Quoniamque ita ratio comparata est vitae naturaeque nostrae, ut alia [ex alia] aetas oriatur, maxime quidem optandum est ut cum aequalibus possis, quibuscum tamquam e carceribus 5 emissus sis, cum iisdem ad calcem, ut dicitur, pervenire. Sed quoniam res humanae fragiles caducaeque sunt, semper aliqui anquirendi sunt, quos diligamus et a quibus diligamur; caritate enim benevolentiaque sublata omnis est e vita sublata jucunditas. Mihi 10 quidem Scipio, quamquam est subito ereptus, vivit tamen semperque vivet; virtutem enim amavi illius viri, quae extincta non est. Nec mihi soli versatur ante oculos, qui illam semper in manibus habui, sed etiam posteris erit clara et insignis. Nemo umquam 15 animo aut spe majora suscipiet, qui sibi non illius memoriam atque imaginem proponendam putet. Equidem ex omnibus rebus, quas mihi aut fortuna aut natura tribuit, nihil habeo, quod cum amicitia Scipionis possim comparare. In hac mihi de re 20 publica consensus, in hac rerum privatarum consilium, in eadem requies plena oblectationis fuit. Numquam illum ne minima quidem re offendi, quod quidem senserim; nihil audiivi ex eo ipse, quod nollem; una domus erat, idem victus isque communis; neque solum militia, sed etiam peregrinationes rusticationesque communes. Nam quid ego de studiis dicam cognoscendi semper aliquid atque discendi, in quibus remoti ab oculis populi omne otiosum tempus contrivimus? Quarum rerum recordatio et memoria 30 si una cum illo occidisset, desiderium conjunctissimi atque amantissimi viri ferre nullo modo possem. Sed nec illa extincta sunt alunturque potius et augentur cogitatione et memoria mea; et, si illis plane orbatus essem, magnum tamen afferret mihi aetas ipsa solatium, diutius enim jam in hoc desiderio esse non possum; omnia autem breviter tolerabilia esse debent, etiam si magna sunt. 35

Haec habui de amicitia quae dicerem : vos autem hortor ut ita virtutem locetis, sine qua amicitia esse non potest, ut ea excepta nihil amicitia praestabilius putetis.

NOTES.

REFERENCES AND ABBREVIATIONS.

Grammars.	Editors and Commentators.
A., . . . Allen's.	Br., . . . Baister.
A. & S., . Andrews & Stoddard's.	Lr., . . . Luhmeyer.
B., . . . Bullions & Morris's.	L., . . . Long.
G., . . . Gildersleeve's.	Mg., . . . Madvig.
H., . . . Harkness's.	N., . . . Nauck.
M., . . . Madvig's.	O., . . . Orelli, edited by Halm.
Z., . . . Zumpt's.	St., . . . Seyffert.
	Sh., . . . W. B. Smith.
	Som., . . . Sommerbrodt.

- Arn., — Arnold's Introduction to Latin Prose Composition, Part II.
 Dict. Antiqq., — Smith's Dictionary of Greek and Roman Antiquities.
 Dict. Biog., — Smith's Dictionary of Greek and Roman Biography and Mythology.
 D., — Doederlein's Latin Synonymes.
 Lex., — Andrews's Freund's Latin Lexicon.
 Mom., — Mommsen's History of Rome.
 R., — Rich's Companion to the Latin Dictionary and Greek Lexicon.
-

Other abbreviations the same as in the other works of this series.

NOTES

TO THE

DE SENECTUTE.

INTRODUCTION.

NEARLY all the philosophical essays of Cicero were written in the years 45 and 44 B. C., — within the period in which he was excluded from public affairs in consequence of the supremacy of Caesar. The occasion and the object of their composition are stated in the introduction to the second book of the De Divinatione — in part as follows: “The calamity of the State was the cause of my writing upon philosophy, prevented, as I was, by the civil wars from serving my country in my profession, and unable to be inactive. . . . When the republic had fallen into the power of one man, deprived of my former occupation, I resumed these philosophical studies, that by this means, especially, I might relieve my mind of its troubles, and might benefit my fellow-citizens in whatever way I could.”

In the same connection (De Div. II. 1), in a list of his works already published, he mentions that book upon old age, which we sent to our Atticus, as then recently composed, either, as the context indicates, in the interval between the De Natura Deorum, written shortly before the death of Caesar, March 15, B. C. 44 (I. 4), and the De Divinatione, written after that event (II. 2), or in that between the first and second books of the latter treatise; while in a letter from Cicero of the 11th of May following it is referred to as already in the hands of Atticus.

TITUS POMPONIUS ATTICUS, to whom this essay as well as the De Amicitia is dedicated, was a native of Rome, of an equestrian family, was of about the same age with Cicero, and a school-mate in boyhood. Under the pretext of continuing his studies he withdrew to Athens, B. C. 85, soon after the breaking out of the civil war, and remained there twenty years, devoting himself both to literary pursuits, and to business by which he greatly increased the large fortune he had inherited. Yet, though so long absent from Rome and entirely neutral in politics, he had the acquaintance and the confidence of public men of all parties. With Cicero his literary tastes brought him into close intimacy. Atticus was a lover of philosophy, and an accomplished scholar in Greek literature as well as in that of his own country. The author of several works, among them an epitome of Roman history and a sketch of Cicero's consulship in Greek, he was more distinguished for his taste and judgment in criticism, and to his revision many of his acquaintances, and particularly Cicero, were accustomed to submit their productions. The friendship which sprang up between these two men must have been constantly strengthened by the amiability, the moral worth, and the fidelity of Atticus. It found expression in a frequent correspondence, which began in the year 68 and lasted through all the vicissitudes of Cicero's fortunes until his death, and which furnishes abundant proof of the assertion that Atticus "was the only man among his contemporaries to whom the great orator gave his whole heart." This esteem Cicero avows as the motive for addressing to him both of these treatises. In the first of them he writes: You occurred to me as worthy of that gift which each of us might use in common; and in the other: The subject seemed especially worthy of our intimacy. In this book with the heartiest affection I have written to a friend upon friendship — ad amicum amicissimus de amicitia. Atticus survived his friend eleven years, and died B. C. 32, at the age of seventy-seven.

For the peculiar form into which both the Cato Major and the Laelius are cast — a discussion of the subject by an historical character of eminence, in the presence of a few friends — Cicero himself also gives the reason in the opening chapter of the latter: This kind of discourse resting upon the authority of ancient and illustrious men seems to have the greater weight. In the Cato Major, I introduced Cato, the old man, speaking, because no personage seemed better fitted to talk concerning old age, than he who had been an old man a very long time, and in old age itself had flourished beyond others. And respecting the Laelius itself a similar statement is made.

Of the appropriateness of this selection of a speaker even a brief outline of the chief incidents in the life of MARCUS PORCIUS CATO CENSORIUS furnishes the means of judging. Born at Tuscu-

lum the same year with Scipio Africanus Major, B. C. 234, of a plebeian family, he entered the army at the age of seventeen, and gained experience in war by service during the whole contest with Hannibal, from the battle of Trasimenus to the final victory at Zama, under the ablest of the Roman generals in that eventful struggle — Fabius, Marcellus, Nero, and Scipio. The military abilities he then developed were more conspicuously exhibited in a campaign in Spain during his consulship, B. C. 195, in which the consummate skill of his plans of battle, his brilliant manœuvres, his indefatigable energy, boldness, and rapidity of movement have given him among modern judges the reputation of "military genius of a very high order." Later, when tribune under Glabrio in the war against King Antiochus, his daring and difficult march over the heights to the rear of the enemy won the decisive battle of Thermopylae.

Before this career was fully ended, his official labors in civil affairs had already begun in his praetorship in Sardinia, B. C. 198, and his administration of the province of Spain. His most valuable and characteristic services to his country, however, were rendered during his censorship, which began in the year 184, and which the condition of the times made the more memorable. The golden age of the Republic was already drawing to a close. Its foreign wars, which were breaking down the four other great powers of the world, were also opening the way for the luxuries and vices of the East, were fostering political corruption and stimulating the passion for conquest. By nature and by training Cato was a statesman of the old school, and therefore an antagonist of the new nobility of wealth. Frugal and plain in his habits of living, thoroughly honest, and loyal to the State, a sworn enemy of luxury and villainy of every kind, the character of the ancient Roman was the ideal he sought to reproduce in his own life. His determination to wield the whole power of the censorship for the removal of public and private offences, by the avowal of which he had won that office, he carried out to the letter without fear or favor. Efficient in the discharge of its other duties — the taking of the census, and the superintendence of public buildings and works — he was especially zealous in that regulation of the morals of his fellow-citizens, which was the almost despotic prerogative of his office. Though he was vigilant and uncompromising in the exercise of all its powers, and fearless and relentless in degrading unworthy senators and knights in the face of the bitter hostility of the aristocracy, there was yet no evidence of any injustice or favoritism on his part, and he was honored at the close of his term with a public statue, and an inscription testifying that "by his good discipline and ordinances he had reclaimed the commonwealth, when it was sinking into vice."

After that time Cato's energies were chiefly devoted to public speaking, in the popular assembly, at the bar, and in the Senate. He had a powerful voice. His diction was unpolished and coarse, but his style was sententious and forcible, and he was vehement and impassioned in delivery. Cicero was acquainted with more than a hundred and fifty of his speeches, and asserts in his Brutus (ch. 17) that all the excellences of oratory were found in them. Mommsen regards him as the most influential pleader and political orator of his time, and the opinion of his biographer in Smith's Dictionary is that "if we may judge by the fragments of his speeches, he possessed the living fiery spirit and intense earnestness of Demosthenes."

Besides his activity in this profession, his versatile genius also turned itself to literary pursuits; and of the two parties into which there was already a division among scholars, Cato of course identified himself with the conservative or Italian. He contended for the culture of the language and the literature of his country independently, stoutly opposing all imitation of foreign models; and according to the testimony of Horace (Ars Poet. 56), himself aided in enlarging and enriching his native speech. The introduction of Greek philosophy he especially resisted. A contemporary of the earlier generation of Roman writers, a friend and patron of the poet Ennius, he was himself the author of the first prose work in the Latin tongue — the Origines, a history in seven books of the Roman kings, the origin of the Italian towns, the first two Punic wars and subsequent events — and of others of which the De Re Rustica alone is extant.

Cato's biography by Plutarch and the well-known passage in which Livy eulogizes him (xxxix. 40) illustrate the exalted, not to say extravagant opinion of his character as a whole, entertained by his countrymen in after times. Modern historians have, with more impartiality, also presented his faults — his avarice, his cruelty to his slaves, his bitter and revengeful spirit toward his enemies, his lack of generous sentiments, and his narrowness as a statesman, which led him to despise everything new. "Upright and honorable," says Mommsen, "but without a glimpse of any duty beyond the sphere of police discipline and of mercantile integrity; an enemy to all villainy and vulgarity as well as to all genius and refinement; he never made an attempt to stop evils at their source, but waged war throughout life against mere symptoms, and especially against persons."

That 'his eye was not dim nor his natural force abated' down to the very end of his life there is the clearest evidence. Though he learned the Greek language in youth, he did not begin the study of Greek literature until somewhat advanced in age. (See p. 14, line 13, and Nepos, Vit. Cat. 3.) In his eighty-first year, accused of some capital crime, it is recorded that he defended himself in person, with unfaltering voice and with no decay of memory. Three years later he was one of the most urgent advocates of the third war against Carthage. The writing of his Origines was continued to the year of his death; and only a few months before that event, according to Cicero (Brutus, ch. 20), he made a vigorous speech in the prosecution of Sulpicius Galba for the violation of his pledge to an enemy. What he is represented as saying of himself in various passages of this book (p. 11, line 24, etc., p. 16, line 4, etc., and p. 18, line 8, etc.), fully agrees with these facts, and together with them sufficiently indicates why Cicero selected him to be the representative of the old age of the Roman in the earlier and better days of the nation, and to be the exponent of his own views on the subject here discussed.

Cato's discourse is delivered in the presence of Scipio Africanus Minor, and his associate the younger Laelius (see Introduction to the notes to the De Amicitia) in the consulship of T. Quinctius Flamininus and M. Acilius Balbus (p. 10, line 17), in the eighty-fourth year of his age (p. 15, line 36), i. e. in B. C. 150, the year before his death.

Chapters ii.-v. contain the preliminary conversation. The young men express their wonder that old age has never seemed burdensome to Cato, request that he will show them how they can most easily bear the infirmities of that period of life, and inquire whether his enjoyment of it may not be owing to his wealth, political station and influence, to which most men cannot attain. In reply he declares that to those who seek all good from themselves nothing can seem an evil which the necessity of nature brings, that the evils of which many complain in old age are occasioned by faults of character, not by length of life, and that, except in the extremest poverty, wisdom and virtue cannot but render

of the aristocracy, there was yet no evidence of any injustice or favoritism on his part, and he was honored at the close of his term with a public statue, and an inscription testifying that "by his good discipline and ordinances he had reclaimed the commonwealth, when it was sinking into vice."

After that time Cato's energies were chiefly devoted to public speaking, in the popular assembly, at the bar, and in the Senate. He had a powerful voice. His diction was unpolished and coarse, but his style was sententious and forcible, and he was vehement and impassioned in delivery. Cicero was acquainted with more than a hundred and fifty of his speeches, and asserts in his Brutus (ch. 17) that all the excellences of oratory were found in them. Mommsen regards him as the most influential pleader and political orator of his time, and the opinion of his biographer in Smith's Dictionary is that "if we may judge by the fragments of his speeches, he possessed the living fiery spirit and intense earnestness of Demosthenes."

Besides his activity in this profession, his versatile genius also turned itself to literary pursuits; and of the two parties into which there was already a division among scholars, Cato of course identified himself with the conservative or Italian. He contended for the culture of the language and the literature of his country independently, stoutly opposing all imitation of foreign models; and according to the testimony of Horace (Ars Poet. 56), himself aided in enlarging and enriching his native speech. The introduction of Greek philosophy he especially resisted. A contemporary of the earlier generation of Roman writers, a friend and patron of the poet Ennius, he was himself the author of the first prose work in the Latin tongue — the Origines, a history in seven books of the Roman kings, the origin of the Italian towns, the first two Punic wars and subsequent events — and of others of which the De Re Rustica alone is extant.

Cato's biography by Plutarch and the well-known passage in which Livy eulogizes him (xxxix. 40) illustrate the exalted, not to say extravagant opinion of his character as a whole, entertained by his countrymen in after times. Modern historians have, with more impartiality, also presented his faults — his avarice, his cruelty to his slaves, his bitter and revengeful spirit toward his enemies, his lack of generous sentiments, and his narrowness as a statesman, which led him to despise everything new. "Upright and honor-

Mommsen, "but without a glimpse of any duty beyond

the sphere of police discipline and of mercantile integrity; an enemy to all villainy and vulgarity as well as to all genius and refinement; he never made an attempt to stop evils at their source, but waged war throughout life against mere symptoms, and especially against persons."

That 'his eye was not dim nor his natural force abated' down to the very end of his life there is the clearest evidence. Though he learned the Greek language in youth, he did not begin the study of Greek literature until somewhat advanced in age. (See p. 14, line 13, and Nepos, Vit. Cat. 3.) In his eighty-first year, accused of some capital crime, it is recorded that he defended himself in person, with unfaltering voice and with no decay of memory. Three years later he was one of the most urgent advocates of the third war against Carthage. The writing of his Origines was continued to the year of his death; and only a few months before that event, according to Cicero (Brutus, ch. 20), he made a vigorous speech in the prosecution of Sulpicius Galba for the violation of his pledge to an enemy. What he is represented as saying of himself in various passages of this book (p. 11, line 24, etc., p. 16, line 4, etc., and p. 18, line 8, etc.), fully agrees with these facts, and together with them sufficiently indicates why Cicero selected him to be the representative of the old age of the Roman in the earlier and better days of the nation, and to be the exponent of his own views on the subject here discussed.

Cato's discourse is delivered in the presence of Scipio Africanus Minor, and his associate the younger Laelius (see Introduction to the notes to the De Amicitia) in the consulship of T. Quinctius Flamininus and M'. Acilius Balbus (p. 10, line 17), in the eighty-fourth year of his age (p. 15, line 36), i. e. in B. C. 150, the year before his death.

Chapters ii.-v. contain the preliminary conversation. The young men express their wonder that old age has never seemed burdensome to Cato, request that he will show them how they can most easily bear the infirmities of that period of life, and inquire whether his enjoyment of it may not be owing to his wealth, political station and influence, to which most men cannot attain. In reply he declares that to those who seek all good from themselves nothing can seem an evil which the necessity of nature brings, that the evils of which many complain in old age are occasioned by faults of character, not by length of life, and that, except in the extremest poverty, wisdom and virtue cannot but decline of life happy. In compliance with their request, Cato then states four alleged causes of unhappiness to old age, the consideration of which occupies the remainder of the book, as follows :

I. Chh. vi. – viii. Old age withdraws men from active pursuits.

The reply is : 1st, there are employments in which old men can engage, and for which they are better fitted than youth ; 2d, the memory is not impaired by age if it be kept in exercise ; and 3d, many are able to continue employments requiring physical vigor to the very close of life.

II. Chh. ix. – xi. Old age impairs the strength of the body.

Cato maintains : 1st, that degree of strength, which youth has, is not needed by old age ; 2d, the failure of strength is generally caused by the vices of youth, in some cases by disease which is common to all periods of life ; 3d, bodily vigor can be so far retained by exercise, temperance, and intellectual pursuits that there shall not be any conscious want of strength.

III. Chh. xii. – xviii. Old age deprives of pleasures.

Cato contends : 1st, old age does relish innocent and healthful pleasures of the senses, and it is a positive gain to be freed from any desire for those which are pernicious in youth ; 2d, old age is not deprived of rational enjoyments, such as may be derived from agriculture, literature, and position and influence in the State ; 3d, the peevishness and moroseness of old men are faults inherent in the character, and are not caused by age.

IV. Chh. xix. – xxiii. Old age is not far from death.

The course of thought in reply is : This fact is no real cause of unhappiness, because, 1st, death will be followed either by annihilation or a happier life ; 2d, old age has already experienced the good of life, while youth only hopes for it and is equally liable to death ; 3d, a sufficient time is allotted for living well, and it is natural for the aged to die and nothing which is according to nature can be an evil ; 4th, probably the soul is immortal. The ground of this belief is (a) the faculties of the soul, its self-activity, its indivisibility, and its pre-existence ; (b) the opinion of such minds as Pythagoras, Plato, and Cyrus the Great (according to the representation of Xenophon) ; (c) the regard of many distinguished Romans for posthumous fame, the tranquillity with which the wisest men die, and the longing often felt, as in his own case, for companionship with those once known and loved but no longer living.

The arguments for the immortality of the soul so briefly stated here, are more fully presented in the First Book of the Tusculan Disputations, and the pupil is referred to the Introduction to Chase's edition of that work for a discussion of Cicero's real views on that subject.

Page

5

Chap. I. 1. O Tite, etc. Lines from the Annals of Ennius, an epic history of Rome in which for the first time the Greek hexameter was used instead of the national Saturnian verse. The person addressed in them was Titus Quinctius Flamininus, who conquered Philip V. of Macedonia at the battle of Cynoscephalae, B. C. 197, and thereby restored the independence of the Greek states. Quid. For the construction and use see H. 455, 2, and 380, 2; A. 21, III., and 52, IV.; A. & S. 138, 2, (b), and 231, Rem. 5; B. 1048, and 731; G. 129, 3. Adjuero, also the reading of O., Lr., & Som., instead of adjuvero in two of the best MSS., and adjuto in five others, neither of which readings is allowed by the metre. Some editions have adjuero, according to Z. 160, (a) in fin.; A. & S. 162, 7, (a), but juerint occurs in Catull. Carm. 66, 18 — the v omitted without contraction of the vowels, as in the form audiero. H. 234, 1; B. 317; A. & S. 162, 7, (b); A. 33, III., 1. Curam. Respecting the cause of this there have been various conjectures. The more probable is that which refers it to the position of Flamininus at the pass of Antigoneia in Epirus in his attempt to invade Macedonia, B. C. 198, when he waited forty days without finding a favorable opportunity to attack the enemy. Levasso. In place of the usual future another was formed in the older language by affixing to the stem the ending ssō (in the first and second conjugation). M. 115, f. See also H. 239, 4; B. 326; A. & S. 162, 9. 2. Versat. For the quantity of the final syllable, see H. 669, V. 1; B. 1, 519, 6; A. 80; Z. 828. Such syllables are sometimes found long even in the thesis of the foot, e. g. ponebat, (p. 9, line 4,) and perhaps were originally long by contraction. See Z. 148, foot-note; H. 245, 3. 3. Eoquid is here an interrogative indefinite pronoun, the particle en (ec before q) being merely the sign of interrogation; will there be any reward? See Z. 136, and 351, Note; B. 255; M. 90, 1. Praemi, the regular form for substantives in the earlier writers instead of praemii. M. 37, Obs. 1; H. 45, 5, 1); B. 64; A. & S. 52; A. 10, 4; G., page 15. 6. Ille vir, etc. Another line of Ennius referring as some suppose to the shepherd sent by Charops, an Epeirot chief, to guide a detachment

Page

- 5 of the Roman army over the heights to the rear of the Macedonians, and who was represented by the poet as addressing Flamininus in the words quoted in l. 1-3; or, as others think, taken from some other part of Ennius' works and here applied by Cicero to the poet himself. Haud is by the authors of the best age used only with adjectives and adverbs denoting a measure, by which combination something more is expressed than by the simple negation. Z. 277; not at all, or by no means. With verbs it does not occur in good prose except in the phrase haud scio an. M. 455. Re = re familiari. Plenus. In the earlier poets s final often forms no position with the following initial consonant. M. 22, Obs. 4. Fidei. For the quantity of the penult, see H. 612, Exc. 2; B. 1425, 2; A. & S. 283, I., Exc. 2, Note. 7. Quamquam in an independent clause introduces a remark by which the preceding statement is limited, softened, or corrected. M. 443; Z. 341, Note, in fin.; and yet. Certo, very rare in Cicero except with scio, (as here and in line 19,) and even in his works less frequent than certe scio, according to Z. 266, Note 1. Elsewhere it is found only in the comic poets. It always adds emphasis. Certe, which belongs to all periods and all species of composition, sometimes has the same force, but is chiefly used to limit an assertion; e. g. in line 17, and p. 7, line 17. According to Arn. it relates (generally) more to the persuasion of the speaker, i. e. is subjective; certe to the real state of the case, i. e. is objective. See also A. 41, II., 3; A. & S. 192, Note 1. 9. Aequitatem. For the meaning see Lex. sub voce, 3. 10. Cognomen, i. e. Atticus, probably given to him on account of his long residence at Athens and familiarity with Greek literature. 11. Humanitatem et prudentiam, liberal culture and practical wisdom. 12. Iisdem rebus, i. e. the political misfortunes of the State. Me ipsum, accus. to avoid the repetition of the verb, instead of the regular construction ego ipse commoveor. Notice the zeugma in suspitor. H. 704, I., 2; A. & S. 323, I, (2); B. 1378. 13. Quarum. H. 396, II.; A. 50, III.; A. & S. 211, Rem. 3; B. 746; G. 158. Major, i. e. requires a more extended treatise than the present. 16. Onere — senectutis. Cicero was at this time 62 years old, and Atticus 65; but the reference here, of course, is not to number of years but to the infirmities of old age. 2. Uteretur. H. 500, 2; A. 65, I.; A. & S. 264, 1, (a), Note; B. 1221, G. 425. 4. Mollem. H. 373, 3; A. & S. 280, Note 3; B. 715; G. 132. 6. Cui = quum ei. Hence possit, subjunctive in a relative causal clause, and pareat attracted by it into the same mood. H. 527; A. 66, II.; A. & S. 266, 1; B. 1291; G. 424. 6. Ceteris, other philosophical subjects. Diximus. Hitherto the writer has referred to himself personally, and therefore used the singular number. This and the following plurals exhibit him in close connection with other philosophers. Lr. See also M. 433; Z. 694. 9. Misimus includes the idea of scripsimus; hence the perfect as in the epistolary style. Som. See also H. 472, 1; A. & S. 259, Rem. 1 (2), (c); B. 1100; G. 47. 10. Tribuimus, ascribed to as the representative of old age: Tithono, the son of Laomedon, who in answer to the prayer of Eos obtained immortality but not eternal youth. Aristo, a philosopher of Ceos, who became the head of the Peripatetic school, B. C. 230. Ceus, from the Greek Κεῖος. In words thus transferred æ is expressed before vowels by either i or e. M. 5, b, Obs. 2; Z. 1, Note. 11. Esset. H. 510; A. 59, IV. 2; A. & S. 261, 1; B. 1267; G. 383. Fabula, myth, i. e. the character (Tithonus) exhibited in the myth. M. Catoni. See Introduction. 13. Admirantes, wondering. A present participle in apposition with the object follows verbs signifying to perceive or represent a person as doing a thing. M. 372, b, Obs. 5; Z. 636. 14. Ferat. Subjunctive because the sentiment of Laelius and Scipio, H. 520, II.; B. 1255; A. 63, I.; A. & S. 266, 3; G. 323. 15. Qui. The relative is often used to continue the discourse in a new proposition and at the same time to connect that proposition with the preceding, instead of a demonstrative with a conjunction, and often where no conjunction is used in English; but only when the pronoun is not emphatic. M. 448; Z. 803. 16. Suis, emphatic. 18. Plura, sc. dicere.

Chap. II. 22. Ceterarum rerum = ceteroqui. Lr. H. 396, II.; B. 746; A. 50, III.; G. 158, 2. 23. Vel intensifies the meaning of the superlative maxime by ellipsis of the positive. 24. Senserim, subjunctive, because the reason is stated not as a fact, but as a motive in the mind of the speaker. A. 63, I. See also M. 357, a, Obs. 2; B. 1257; A. & S. 266, 3, Rem. 25. Plerisque, the majority. Z. 109, Note. Aetna, under which lay buried the giants who had warred against Jupiter. 28. Quibus, made emphatic by position. M. 476, a, Obs. 2, in fin. 32. Afferat. H. 501, I. 1; A. 65, IV. 2; A. & S. 264, 7; B. 1227; G. 426. Quo in genere, i. e. of things which the necessity of nature brings. 33. Adipiscantur. For the mood after a verb of desiring see H. 492, 3, and 551, II, 2;

REFERENCES AND ABBREVIATIONS.

Grammars.	Editors and Commentators.
A., . . . Allen's.	Br., . . . Baister.
A. & S., . . Andrews & Stoddard's.	Lr., . . . Lahmeyer.
B., . . . Bullions & Morris's.	L., . . . Long.
G., . . . Gildersleeve's.	Mg., . . . Madvig.
H., . . . Harkness's.	N., . . . Nauck.
M., . . . Madvig's.	O., . . . Orelli, edited by Halm.
Z., . . . Zumpt's.	St., . . . Seyffert.
	Sh., . . . W. B. Smith.
	Som., . . Sommerbrodt.

- Arn., — Arnold's Introduction to Latin Prose Composition, Part II.
 Dict. Antiqq., — Smith's Dictionary of Greek and Roman Antiquities.
 Dict. Biog., — Smith's Dictionary of Greek and Roman Biography and Mythology.
 D., — Doederlein's Latin Synonymes.
 Lex., — Andrews's Freund's Latin Lexicon.
 Mom., — Mommsen's History of Rome.
 R., — Rich's Companion to the Latin Dictionary and Greek Lexicon.
-

Other abbreviations the same as in the other works of this series.

NOTES

TO THE

DE SENECA.

INTRODUCTION.

NEARLY all the philosophical essays of Cicero were written in the years 45 and 44 B. C., — within the period in which he was excluded from public affairs in consequence of the supremacy of Caesar. The occasion and the object of their composition are stated in the introduction to the second book of the De Divinatione — in part as follows: "The calamity of the State was the cause of my writing upon philosophy, prevented, as I was, by the civil wars from serving my country in my profession, and unable to be inactive. . . . When the republic had fallen into the power of one man, deprived of my former occupation, I resumed these philosophical studies, that by this means, especially, I might relieve my mind of its troubles, and might benefit my fellow-citizens in whatever way I could."

In the same connection (De Div. II. 1), in a list of his works already published, he mentions that book upon old age, which we sent to our Atticus, as then recently composed, either, as the context indicates, in the interval between the De Natura Deorum, written shortly before the death of Caesar, March 15, B. C. 44 (I. 4), and the De Divinatione, written after that event (II. 2), or in that between the first and second books of the latter treatise; while in a letter from Cicero of the 11th of May following it is referred to as already in the hands of Atticus.

TITUS POMPONIUS ATTICUS, to whom this essay as well as the De Amicitia is dedicated, was a native of Rome, of an equestrian family, was of about the same age with Cicero, and a school-mate in boyhood. Under the pretext of continuing his studies he withdrew to Athens, B. C. 85, soon after the breaking out of the civil war, and remained there twenty years, devoting himself both

to literary pursuits, and to business by which he greatly increased the large fortune he had inherited. Yet, though so long absent from Rome and entirely neutral in politics, he had the acquaintance and the confidence of public men of all parties. With Cicero his literary tastes brought him into close intimacy. Atticus was a lover of philosophy, and an accomplished scholar in Greek literature as well as in that of his own country. The author of several works, among them an epitome of Roman history and a sketch of Cicero's consulship in Greek, he was more distinguished for his taste and judgment in criticism, and to his revision many of his acquaintances, and particularly Cicero, were accustomed to submit their productions. The friendship which sprang up between these two men must have been constantly strengthened by the amiability, the moral worth, and the fidelity of Atticus. It found expression in a frequent correspondence, which began in the year 68 and lasted through all the vicissitudes of Cicero's fortunes until his death, and which furnishes abundant proof of the assertion that Atticus "was the only man among his contemporaries to whom the great orator gave his whole heart." This esteem Cicero avows as the motive for addressing to him both of these treatises. In the first of them he writes: You occurred to me as worthy of that gift which each of us might use in common; and in the other: The subject seemed especially worthy of our intimacy. In this book with the heartiest affection I have written to a friend upon friendship — ad amicum amicissimus de amicitia. Atticus survived his friend eleven years, and died B. C. 32, at the age of seventy-seven.

For the peculiar form into which both the Cato Major and the Laelius are cast — a discussion of the subject by an historical character of eminence, in the presence of a few friends — Cicero himself also gives the reason in the opening chapter of the latter: This kind of discourse resting upon the authority of ancient and illustrious men seems to have the greater weight. In the Cato Major, I introduced Cato, the old man, speaking, because no personage seemed better fitted to talk concerning old age, than he who had been an old man a very long time, and in old age itself had flourished beyond others. And respecting the Laelius itself a similar statement is made.

Of the appropriateness of this selection of a speaker even a brief outline of the chief incidents in the life of MARCUS PORCIUS CATO CENSORIUS furnishes the means of judging. Born at Tuscu-

lum the same year with Scipio Africanus Major, B. C. 234, of a plebeian family, he entered the army at the age of seventeen, and gained experience in war by service during the whole contest with Hannibal, from the battle of Trasimenus to the final victory at Zama, under the ablest of the Roman generals in that eventful struggle — Fabius, Marcellus, Nero, and Scipio. The military abilities he then developed were more conspicuously exhibited in a campaign in Spain during his consulship, B. C. 195, in which the consummate skill of his plans of battle, his brilliant manœuvres, his indefatigable energy, boldness, and rapidity of movement have given him among modern judges the reputation of “military genius of a very high order.” Later, when tribune under Glabrio in the war against King Antiochus, his daring and difficult march over the heights to the rear of the enemy won the decisive battle of Thermopylae.

Before this career was fully ended, his official labors in civil affairs had already begun in his praetorship in Sardinia, B. C. 198, and his administration of the province of Spain. His most valuable and characteristic services to his country, however, were rendered during his censorship, which began in the year 184, and which the condition of the times made the more memorable. The golden age of the Republic was already drawing to a close. Its foreign wars, which were breaking down the four other great powers of the world, were also opening the way for the luxuries and vices of the East, were fostering political corruption and stimulating the passion for conquest. By nature and by training Cato was a statesman of the old school, and therefore an antagonist of the new nobility of wealth. Frugal and plain in his habits of living, thoroughly honest, and loyal to the State, a sworn enemy of luxury and villainy of every kind, the character of the ancient Roman was the ideal he sought to reproduce in his own life. His determination to wield the whole power of the censorship for the removal of public and private offences, by the avowal of which he had won that office, he carried out to the letter without fear or favor. Efficient in the discharge of its other duties — the taking of the census, and the superintendence of public buildings and works — he was especially zealous in that regulation of the morals of his fellow-citizens, which was the almost despotic prerogative of his office. Though he was vigilant and uncompromising in the exercise of all its powers, and fearless and relentless in degrading unworthy senators and knights in the face of the bitter hostility

of the aristocracy, there was yet no evidence of any injustice or favoritism on his part, and he was honored at the close of his term with a public statue, and an inscription testifying that "by his good discipline and ordinances he had reclaimed the commonwealth, when it was sinking into vice."

After that time Cato's energies were chiefly devoted to public speaking, in the popular assembly, at the bar, and in the Senate. He had a powerful voice. His diction was unpolished and coarse, but his style was sententious and forcible, and he was vehement and impassioned in delivery. Cicero was acquainted with more than a hundred and fifty of his speeches, and asserts in his Brutus (ch. 17) that all the excellences of oratory were found in them. Mommsen regards him as the most influential pleader and political orator of his time, and the opinion of his biographer in Smith's Dictionary is that "if we may judge by the fragments of his speeches, he possessed the living fiery spirit and intense earnestness of Demosthenes."

Besides his activity in this profession, his versatile genius also turned itself to literary pursuits; and of the two parties into which there was already a division among scholars, Cato of course identified himself with the conservative or Italian. He contended for the culture of the language and the literature of his country independently, stoutly opposing all imitation of foreign models; and according to the testimony of Horace (Ars Poet. 56), himself aided in enlarging and enriching his native speech. The introduction of Greek philosophy he especially resisted. A contemporary of the earlier generation of Roman writers, a friend and patron of the poet Ennius, he was himself the author of the first prose work in the Latin tongue — the Origines, a history in seven books of the Roman kings, the origin of the Italian towns, the first two Punic wars and subsequent events — and of others of which the De Re Rustica alone is extant.

Cato's biography by Plutarch and the well-known passage in which Livy eulogizes him (xxxix. 40) illustrate the exalted, not to say extravagant opinion of his character as a whole, entertained by his countrymen in after times. Modern historians have, with more impartiality, also presented his faults — his avarice, his cruelty to his slaves, his bitter and revengeful spirit toward his enemies, his lack of generous sentiments, and his narrowness as a statesman, which led him to despise everything new. "Upright and honorable," says Mommsen, "but without a glimpse of any duty beyond the sphere of police discipline and of mercantile integrity; an enemy to all villainy and vulgarity as well as to all genius and refinement; he never made an attempt to stop evils at their source, but waged war throughout life against mere symptoms, and especially against persons."

That 'his eye was not dim nor his natural force abated' down to the very end of his life there is the clearest evidence. Though he learned the Greek language in youth, he did not begin the study of Greek literature until somewhat advanced in age. (See p. 14, line 13, and Nepos, Vit. Cat. 3.) In his eighty-first year, accused of some capital crime, it is recorded that he defended himself in person, with unfaltering voice and with no decay of memory. Three years later he was one of the most urgent advocates of the third war against Carthage. The writing of his Origines was continued to the year of his death; and only a few months before that event, according to Cicero (Brutus, ch. 20), he made a vigorous speech in the prosecution of Sulpicius Galba for the violation of his pledge to an enemy. What he is represented as saying of himself in various passages of this book (p. 11, line 24, etc., p. 16, line 4, etc., and p. 18, line 8, etc.), fully agrees with these facts, and together with them sufficiently indicates why Cicero selected him to be the representative of the old age of the Roman in the earlier and better days of the nation, and to be the exponent of his own views on the subject here discussed.

Cato's discourse is delivered in the presence of Scipio Africanus Minor, and his associate the younger Laelius (see Introduction to the notes to the De Amicitia) in the consulship of T. Quinctius Flamininus and M'. Acilius Balbus (p. 10, line 17), in the eighty-fourth year of his age (p. 15, line 36), i. e. in B. C. 150, the year before his death.

Chapters ii. - v. contain the preliminary conversation. The young men express their wonder that old age has never seemed burdensome to Cato, request that he will show them how they can most easily bear the infirmities of that period of life, and inquire whether his enjoyment of it may not be owing to his wealth, political station and influence, to which most men cannot attain. In reply he declares that to those who seek all good from themselves nothing can seem an evil which the necessity of nature brings, that the evils of which many complain in old age are occasioned by faults of character, not by length of life, and that, except in the extremest poverty, wisdom and virtue cannot but render the decline of life happy. In compliance with their request, Cato then states four alleged causes of unhappiness to old age, the consideration of which occupies the remainder of the book, as follows :

I. Chh. vi. – viii. Old age withdraws men from active pursuits.

The reply is : 1st, there are employments in which old men can engage, and for which they are better fitted than youth ; 2d, the memory is not impaired by age if it be kept in exercise ; and 3d, many are able to continue employments requiring physical vigor to the very close of life.

II. Chh. ix. – xi. Old age impairs the strength of the body.

Cato maintains : 1st, that degree of strength, which youth has, is not needed by old age ; 2d, the failure of strength is generally caused by the vices of youth, in some cases by disease which is common to all periods of life ; 3d, bodily vigor can be so far retained by exercise, temperance, and intellectual pursuits that there shall not be any conscious want of strength.

III. Chh. xii. – xviii. Old age deprives of pleasures.

Cato contends : 1st, old age does relish innocent and healthful pleasures of the senses, and it is a positive gain to be freed from any desire for those which are pernicious in youth ; 2d, old age is not deprived of rational enjoyments, such as may be derived from agriculture, literature, and position and influence in the State ; 3d, the peevishness and moroseness of old men are faults inherent in the character, and are not caused by age.

IV. Chh. xix. – xxiii. Old age is not far from death.

The course of thought in reply is : This fact is no real cause of unhappiness, because, 1st, death will be followed either by annihilation or a happier life ; 2d, old age has already experienced the good of life, while youth only hopes for it and is equally liable to death ; 3d, a sufficient time is allotted for living well, and it is natural for the aged to die and nothing which is according to nature can be an evil ; 4th, probably the soul is immortal. The ground of this belief is (a) the faculties of the soul, its self-activity, its indivisibility, and its pre-existence ; (b) the opinion of such minds as Pythagoras, Plato, and Cyrus the Great (according to the representation of Xenophon) ; (c) the regard of many distinguished Romans for posthumous fame, the tranquillity with which the wisest men die, and the longing often felt, as in his own case, for companionship with those once known and loved but no longer living.

The arguments for the immortality of the soul so briefly stated here, are more fully presented in the First Book of the Tusculan Disputations, and the pupil is referred to the Introduction to Chase's edition of that work for a discussion of Cicero's real views on that subject.

Page

5

Chap. I. 1. O Tite, etc. Lines from the Annals of Ennius, an epic history of Rome in which for the first time the Greek hexameter was used instead of the national Saturnian verse. The person addressed in them was Titus Quinctius Flaminius, who conquered Philip V. of Macedonia at the battle of Cynoscephalae, B. C. 197, and thereby restored the independence of the Greek states. Quid. For the construction and use see H. 455, 2, and 380, 2; A. 21, III., and 52, IV.; A. & S. 138, 2, (b), and 231, Rem. 5; B. 1048, and 731; G. 129, 3. Adjuero, also the reading of O., Lr., & Som., instead of adjuvero in two of the best MSS., and adjuto in five others, neither of which readings is allowed by the metre. Some editions have adjuro, according to Z. 160, (a) in fin.; A. & S. 162, 7, (a), but juerint occurs in Catull. Carm. 68, 18 — the v omitted without contraction of the vowels, as in the form audiero. H. 234, 1; B. 317; A. & S. 162, 7, (b); A. 33, III., 1. Curam. Respecting the cause of this there have been various conjectures. The more probable is that which refers it to the position of Flaminius at the pass of Antigoneia in Epirus in his attempt to invade Macedonia, B. C. 198, when he waited forty days without finding a favorable opportunity to attack the enemy. Levasso. In place of the usual future another was formed in the older language by affixing to the stem the ending ssō (in the first and second conjugation). M. 115, f. See also H. 239, 4; B. 326; A. & S. 162, 9. 2. Versat. For the quantity of the final syllable, see H. 669, V. 1; B. 1, 519, 6; A. 80; Z. 828. Such syllables are sometimes found long even in the thesis of the foot, e. g. ponebat, (p. 9, line 4.) and perhaps were originally long by contraction. See Z. 148, foot-note; H. 245, 3. 3. Eoquid is here an interrogative indefinite pronoun, the particle en (ec before q) being merely the sign of interrogation; will there be any reward? See Z. 136, and 351, Note; B. 255; M. 90, 1. Praemi, the regular form for substantives in the earlier writers instead of praemii. M. 37, Obs. 1; H. 45, 5, 1); B. 64; A. & S. 52; A. 10, 4; G., page 15. 6. Ille vir, etc. Another line of Ennius referring as some suppose to the shepherd sent by Charops, an Epeirot chief, to guide a detachment

Page

- 5 of the Roman army over the heights to the rear of the Macedonians, and who was represented by the poet as addressing Flamininus in the words quoted in l. 1-3; or, as others think, taken from some other part of Ennius' works and here applied by Cicero to the poet himself. Haud is by the authors of the best age used only with adjectives and adverbs denoting a measure, by which combination something more is expressed than by the simple negation. Z. 277; not at all, or by no means. With verbs it does not occur in good prose except in the phrase haud scio an. M. 455. Re = re familiari. Plenus. In the earlier poets s final often forms no position with the following initial consonant. M. 22, Obs. 4. Fidei. For the quantity of the penult, see H. 612, Exc. 2; B. 1425, 2; A. & S. 283, I., Exc. 2, Note. 7. Quamquam in an independent clause introduces a remark by which the preceding statement is limited, softened, or corrected. M. 443; Z. 341, Note, in fin.; and yet. Certo, very rare in Cicero except with scio, (as here and in line 19,) and even in his works less frequent than certe scio, according to Z. 266, Note 1. Elsewhere it is found only in the comic poets. It always adds emphasis. Certe, which belongs to all periods and all species of composition, sometimes has the same force, but is chiefly used to limit an assertion; e. g. in line 17, and p. 7, line 17. According to Arn. it relates (generally) more to the persuasion of the speaker, i. e. is subjective; certe to the real state of the case, i. e. is objective. See also A. 41, II., 3; A. & S. 192, Note 1. 9. Aequitatem. For the meaning see Lex. sub voce, 3. 10. Cognomen, i. e. Atticus, probably given to him on account of his long residence at Athens and familiarity with Greek literature. 11. Humanitatem et prudentiam, liberal culture and practical wisdom. 12. Iisdem rebus, i. e. the political misfortunes of the State. Me ipsum, accus. to avoid the repetition of the verb, instead of the regular construction ego ipse commoveor. Notice the zeugma in suspitor. H. 704, I., 2; A. & S. 323, 1, (2); B. 1378. 13. Quarum. H. 396, II.; A. 50, III.; A. & S. 211, Rem. 3; B. 746; G. 158. Major, i. e. requires a more extended treatise than the present. 16. Onere — senectutis. Cicero was at this time 62 years old, and Atticus 65; but the reference here, of course, is not to number of years but to the infirmities of old age. 2. Uteretur. H. 500, 2; A. 65, I.; A. & S. 264, 1, (a), Note; B. 1221, G. 425. 4. Mollem. H. 373, 3; A. & S. 280, Note 3; B. 715; G. 132. 6. Cui = quum ei. Hence possit, subjunctive in a relative causal clause, and pareat attracted by it into the same mood. H. 527; A. 66, II.; A. & S. 266, 1; B. 1291; G. 424. 8. Ceteris, other philosophical subjects. Diximus. Hitherto the writer has referred to himself personally, and therefore used the singular number. This and the following plurals exhibit him in close connection with other philosophers. Lr. See also M. 433; Z. 694. 9. Misimus includes the idea of scripsimus; hence the perfect as in the epistolary style. Som. See also H. 472, 1; A. & S. 259, Rem. 1 (2), (c); B. 1100; G. 47. 10. Tribuimus, ascribed to as the representative of old age: Tithono, the son of Laomedon, who in answer to the prayer of Eos obtained immortality but not eternal youth. Aristo, a philosopher of Ceos, who became the head of the Peripatetic school, B. C. 230. Ceus, from the Greek Κεῖος. In words thus transferred æ is expressed before vowels by either i or e. M. 5, b, Obs. 2; Z. 1, Note. 11. Esset. H. 510; A. 59, IV. 2; A. & S. 261, 1; B. 1267; G. 383. Fabula, myth, i. e. the character (Tithonus) exhibited in the myth. M. Catoni. See Introduction. 13. Admirantes, wondering. A present participle in apposition with the object follows verbs signifying to perceive or represent a person as doing a thing. M. 372, b, Obs. 5; Z. 636. 14. Ferat. Subjunctive because the sentiment of Laelius and Scipio, H. 520, II.; B. 1255; A. 63, I.; A. & S. 266, 3; G. 323. 15. Qui. The relative is often used to continue the discourse in a new proposition and at the same time to connect that proposition with the preceding, instead of a demonstrative with a conjunction, and often where no conjunction is used in English; but only when the pronoun is not emphatic. M. 448; Z. 803. 16. Suis, emphatic. 18. Plura, sc. dicere.

Chap. II. 22. Ceterarum rerum = ceteroqui. Lr. H. 396, II.; B. 746; A. 50, III.; G. 158, 2. 23. Vel intensifies the meaning of the superlative maxime by ellipsis of the positive. 24. Senserim, subjunctive, because the reason is stated not as a fact, but as a motive in the mind of the speaker. A. 63, I. See also M. 357, a, Obs. 2; B. 1257; A. & S. 266, 3, Rem. 25. Plerisque, the majority. Z. 109, Note. Aetna, under which lay buried the giants who had warred against Jupiter. 28. Quibus, made emphatic by position. M. 476, a, Obs. 2, in. fin. 32. Afferat. H. 501, I. 1; A. 65, IV. 2; A. & S. 264, 7; B. 1227; G. 426. Quo in genere, i. e. of things which the necessity of nature brings. 33. Adipiscantur. For the mood after a verb of desiring see H. 492, 3, and 551, II, 2;

Page

- 6 A. & S. 273, 4, (a); B. 1204, Obs. 3; G. 331. Adepti, the reading of two MSS; while others have adeptam, adopted by O. and other editors. Either form is admissible in the case of this and many other perfect participles of deponents, of which a list is given in Z. 632. See also M. 153; H. 221, 2; B. 1346; A. & S. 162, 17, (a); A. 35, I. 7. 35. Aiunt occurs most frequently with indirect quotations, and stands either before the words quoted, or (like inquit) between them; the latter, only with direct quotations. Z. 219 and 802. Putavissent. H. 531; A. 67, II.; A. & S. 266, 2; B. 1296; G. 440. 36. Qui, How. H. 188, 2; A. & S. 137, Rem. (2); B. 246. Adolescentiae, usually, the period between pueritia and juventus, from the age of fifteen to thirty; but here it includes the latter, i. e. the period of increasing strength; as sometimes juventus is used for adolescentia. Cf. p. 16, l. 26, ferocitas juvenum. The other two divisions of human life were aetas seniorum, from forty-five to sixty, and senectus. The limits of each age, however, were not fixed by the Romans with much exactness. 1. Quamvis, though ever so. M. 443, Obs.; H. 516, II. 2; A. & S. 263, 2, (3), in fin. 2. Effluxisset, subjunctive because dependent upon posset, quum here denoting time only. Som. Consolatio, the reading of most MSS. That of others, consolatione, is preferred by O. and most other editors, with a comma after longa. Posset, i. e. even if life were protracted to any given extent. Stultam, made emphatic by its position. Lr.; M. 466, a. 3. Quocirca, like quapropter, refers to a number of grounds collectively, some of which may be implied only, i. e. for these and similar reasons; quare and quamobrem to one definite ground distinctly stated. Arn. 4. Quae — esset, and would that it were worthy; imperfect, to indicate that he disclaims meriting the epithet. H. 488, 2; A. 68, I.; A. & S. 263, 1, Rem.; B. 1196, Obs. 2; G. 56. 5. Cognomine is not used in its technical sense of family-name, but to denote a title (Sapiens), like Dives, Asiaticus, &c., for which the regular term was agnomen. Thus his entire name was Marcus Porcius Cato Sapiens. The reason for the title is given in Laelius, p. 37, line 2 et seqq. But the name Cato itself is from catus (perhaps = acutus), clear-sighted, sagacious, and was given to him first of all his family, because of his character according to Plutarch; as others suppose "bestowed in childhood as an omen of eminence." Quod — sequimur, an expression equivalent to the ethical maxim of the Stoics, "to live according to nature," i. e.

in harmony with the laws of one's mental and moral constitution. 7 8. Partes, i. e. acts, as of a drama. Cf. Shakspeare, "As You Like It," Act II., Scene 7:

"All the world's a stage,
 And all the men and women merely players:
 They have their exits and their entrances;
 And one man in his time plays many parts,
 His acts being seven ages."

Discriptae. So one MS.; while O., Lr., and Som., following the others, read descriptae. These same editors, however, have discripta in line 7, p. 26, with no more MS. authority than here, and the same signification is required in both places; marked out, arranged, i. e. so prepared as to perform the part assigned them for the unfolding of the drama of life. 10. Necesse fuit, a necessity founded in the nature of things. 12. Vietum agrees with aliquid. 13. Molliter. See Lex. sub voce, B. Gigantum, etc., a proverbial expression for a vain contest. 14. Modo. H. 414, 3; A. 54, II.; A. & S. 247, 2; B. 876; G. 197, Rem. Som., in his 6th edition (1869), regards as worthy of mention a suggestion that nisi be transposed, so as to read Quid est enim aliud nisi, etc. But the meaning is plain: He who does not endure old age patiently fights against nature, and that is as hopeless as to imitate the giants in their war against the gods. 15. Atqui indicates an assent to the assertion implied in the preceding question. Nothing else; and yet. Z. 349; M. 437, c, Obs. 16. Pollicear, promise, because of the idea of gratitude in gratissimum; subjunctive, as sometimes, from conciseness of expression, to indicate the design with which the statement is made. M. 440, Obs. 6. 23. Conferis. H. 506; B. 1277, Obs. 2; A. 61, 1; G. 389. Quam — ingrediendum sit, one of the only two passages in Cicero in which an accusative is joined with the second periphrastic conjugation used impersonally; an archaic construction and very rare in other classic prose writers. The regular construction would be quae nobis ingredienda sit. Z. 649; M. 421, Obs. 2, b. For the mood see p. 6, line 6, pareat, note. 24. Istuc, the subject of sit. Quo = ad quod. M. 317, Obs. 2.

Chap. III. 27. Interfui, I have been conversant with. Aequarium. See Lex. sub voce, 2, a. 28. Proverbio. H. 414, 2, 1; A. & S. 249, II.; B. 873; G. 202. 29. Quae — solebant, an anacol-6 — Cic. de S.

Page

- 7 uthon, occasioned by the parenthetical clause preceding. Quae refers to the idea in querelis (H. 445, 5; B. 698; G. 408, Rem. 2, 1), which is repeated in deplorare. C. Salinator, naval commander in the war against Antiochus the Great, and consul B. C. 188. Sp. Albinus, consul B. C. 186; died, very old, B. C. 179. 31. Carerent See p. 6, line 14, note. Vitam nullam, life was no life. H. 373, 1; A. & S. 230, Rem. 1; A. 52, III. (3); B. 715. Strictly speaking, the predicate accusative forms an apposition to the object. M. 227. 34. Accusandum. See p. 6, line 2, note. 35. Accideret. For the tense, see p. 6, line 11, note. Usu. H. 414, 2; A. 54, I.; A. & S. 249, II.; B. 873. For its meaning with veniret see Lex. Usus, II. D. 36. Quorum, partitive genitive. 37. Sine, with its case (like cum) often has the force of an attributive. Cf. Tusc. Disp. I. 49, mortes cum gloria; II. 3, sine ulla delectatione. Et — nec, instead of neque (nec) — nec (Z. 338, M. 458, c), because non modifies not the whole clause, but molestae alone. 38. Ferrent. H. 519; A. 63, II., A. & S. 264, 8, (1); B. 1251; G. 427. 39. Istiusmodi, used as an indeclinable adjective. M. 287, Obs. 1; H. 186, 4; A. & S. 134, Rem. 5. 2. Difficiles. See Lex. sub voce, II. 3. Importunitas, incivility, refers more to the outward demeanor; inhumanitas, churlishness, to the disposition. 5. Dixerit, perfect subjunctive in the sense of a softened future or present potential; the usual meaning in a principal clause. Z. 527; M. 380; H. 486, 6; B. 1179; A. & S. 260, Rem. 4. 6. Opes, political influence; copias, wealth; dignitatem, rank or official position. 8. Contingere, used chiefly of fortunate occurrences; accidere, of any unexpected occurrences, but especially of the happening of evil. Cf. p. 7, line 35, and see D. sub Accidere. 9. Istud, so. which you say. H. 450; A. & S. 207, Rem. 25; A. 20, II.; B. 1028; G. 90. 10. Fertur, so. in Plato De Repub. I. 4. 11. Seriphio, of Seriphos, one of the Cyclades, the poverty and insignificance of which made it an object of contempt. 13. After essem most MSS. read ignobilis, but O., Lr., and Som., as well as Br., omit it. The Greek has but one epithet, δυναστεύς. 14. Quod eodem modo, etc., antithetic to ut Themistocles above; i. e. there must be both fitness of character and some external advantages to make old age agreeable. In extreme poverty only is it burdensome to the wise. 16 Ne — quidem emphasizes the negation. H. 585, 2; A. & S. 277, Rem. 5; B.

999; G. 231. 19. Arma, the weapons, to be used against the evils. 20. Notice the various meanings of aetas: here, period of life; in lines 23 and 25, p. 16, life; in line 29, p. 18, old age; and in line 4, p. 67, generation. Multum signifies richness or fulness of experience. Lr. See p. 18, line 19. 23. Id, neuter because it refers to the clause quia — aetatis. Maximum, of the greatest importance.

Chap. IV. 26. Q. Maximum, according to Polybius, the first of the Fabian gens who was called Maximus, as he was the greatest; five times consul; dictator B. C. 217, after the battle of Lake Trasimenus, and famous for his defensive policy against Hannibal during that year. After the battle of Cannae he was for some years the virtual chief of the Senate and people. Cicero significantly says elsewhere of him, bellum Punicum secundum enervavit. Eum — recepit, regarded as a gloss by some editors, but as genuine by O., Lr., and Som. Similar instances of a parenthetical explanatory clause occur in line 8, p. 17, and line 4, p. 32. 27. Adolescens. The appositive here = a temporal clause. See H. 363, 3; A. & S. 204, Rem. 1, (a). Dilexi, the love of esteem. See D. sub Diligere. 28. Gravitas, weight or dignity of character. For gravitas one MS. has virtus gravis, another gravis virtus, and Mommsen virtus nec gravis. Br. thinks virtus interpolated to support the reading gravis, and with O., adopts the reading given in the text. 29. Colere, i. e. to render the customary respect from younger to older, or client to patron, by acts of courtesy and service. See D. sub Vereri. 31. Anno. The first consulship of Fabius was in B. C. 233, and his fourth in B. C. 214, when Cato at the age of twenty was miles, a private soldier. 33. Ad often denotes the vicinity of a place. Z. 296; 398, Note 1. So ad Tarentum, to the siege of Tarentum. Capuam. The chief city put for the whole country or district, as frequently. During this campaign the Roman armies were confronting Hannibal in Campania. 34. Quaestor — quem. Several MSS. insert aedilis after deinde, and praetor after sum. One omits deinde — factus sum, which Mommsen follows, changing quem to que. Br., O., Lr., and Som. give the reading adopted in the text, and this is the only one which accords with the facts in the life of F. 35. Quadriennio (not quarto anno post), i. e. after the expiration of four full years. 37. Suasor, the advocate, gives prominence to the man, while suasit would only denote the deed as such. Legis

Page

- 8 Cincias, so called because proposed by the tribune M. Cincius Alimentus in B. C. 204. It forbade any reception of gifts for pleading a cause in court; prescribed certain fixed limits for the amount of gifts in general, and required them to be accompanied with certain formalities. See Dict. Antiqq., p. 685. Donis, properly, gratuities; muneribus, rewards for services. See D. sub Donum. 38 Adolescens, i. e. with the vigor and ardor of youth.
- 9 1. Patientia, i. e. his policy of avoiding a pitched battle, keeping Hannibal at bay, and cautiously watching for opportunities to strike a successful blow, which earned him the epithet cunctator. 2. Familiaris. Cato became acquainted with Ennius in Sardinia, and brought him in his train to Rome when the latter was at the age of forty-one. The verses are from his Annals, and are quoted also in the De Officiis, I. 24. The first line is also borrowed by Virgil, Aen. 6, 846. 3. Cunctando, by wise delay. Cunctari properly means, to delay from consideration. See D. Rem, sc. publicam. 4. Noenum, an archaic form compounded of ne-oenum or unum; the conjecture of Lachmann, adopted by Br., O., Lr., and Som. Most MSS. have non enim, which cannot be scanned without resorting to such explanations as that of L. that e in enim was dropped in the reading; or of Sh. that non enim is a dactyl, the m being much slurred over in pronunciation, or of Holden (De Officiis) that enim was pronounced, in scanning, eim. One MS. reads non ponebat enim rumores. Rumores, the popular opinion. "So completely was Fabius' policy misunderstood by all classes impatient for a successful battle, that he was suspected of seeking to prolong the war to retain his command, of cowardice, incapacity and even treachery." Dict. Biog. Ponebat. For the quantity of the final syllable see line 2, p. 5, note. 5. Postque. So Br., O., and Lr.; since his death. Other readings of editors are respectively, prinsque, plusque, magisque. Magisque, so. than if he had heeded the talk of the people. Lr. 6. Tarentum — recepit. When the city by surprise fell into the possession of Hannibal, B. C. 212, the Roman commander held the citadel until the city was retaken by Fabius in his fifth consulship, B. C. 209. The commander, however, was not Salinator as Cicero here states, but M. Livius Macatus. The two men were relatives, and Salinator warmly defended Macatus in the Senate, when his conduct was under discussion. 7. Salinatori. Dat., depending on inquit. 9. Fabi. For the form see p. 5, line 3, praemi, note. 11. In toga,

i. e. in his career as a statesman. 12. Quiescente, remaining neutral, 9 failing to support him. 13. Flaminio, noted for his championship of the popular party, as well as for the construction of the Via Flaminia, and for his defeat and death in the battle near Lake Trasimenus. His tribuneship, in which he secured the passage of the agrarian law referred to here, was in B. C. 232, according to Polybius, while the second consulship of Fabius was in B. C. 228. Either, therefore, Cicero is mistaken in his statement, or Flaminius proposed his bill in the year 232, and through the opposition of the Senate it was not carried until 228. In this latter year Flaminius was one of the Tresviri agris dandis assignandis. In Cicero's mind the welfare of the State had always been identified with the rule of the Senate; and in his view the leaders of the popular party had always been demagogues and disorganizers. Quoad potuit. H. 522, I.; A. & S. 263, 4, (1); B. 1239; G. 358. Agurum Picentem, the district in the N. E. of central Italy bounded by Umbria, the country of the Sabines and the Adriatic. 14. Gallicum, the part of Umbria bordering on the Adriatic and conquered from the Senonian Gauls. Auctoritatem. See Lex. sub voce, 4, a. In its general and original sense Senatus auctoritas is any measure to which a majority of the Senate has assented. Dict. Antiqu. 15. Dividenti, in his efforts to secure the division of, &c. among the plebeians. Augurque quum esset, i. e. although he held an office the very business of which was to interpret by omens the will of the gods as to what the State ought or ought not to do, he was so devoted to its welfare as to utter this sentiment. M. 358, Obs. 3; H. 516, II.; B. 1282; G. 370. 17. Ferrentur. See Lex. II. B. 8, b. 20. Filii, the elder of his two sons, an able general in the second Punic war and consul in B. C. 213. In manibus, in everybody's hands, well known. So in line 34, p. 64; otherwise in line 2, p. 13, and line 9, p. 18. See Lex. sub voce. 21. Laudatio, &c. funebria, his eulogy at the funeral of his son. 22. Contemnimus, i. e. in comparison with him; must we not esteem him more highly than all philosophers. Som. 23. Intus—præstantior, explained by the following sentences. 24. Qui sermo, what a talent for conversation! præcepta, for imparting instruction! Som. 25. Notitia, acquaintance with. Scientia implies a thorough knowledge of its object. D. sub Cognitio. Juris augurii was the phrase for the science of the augurs, which was contained in the Libri augurales. 26. Ut—Romano, considering

Page

- 9 that he was, etc. 27. Domestica, i. e. in Italy. 29. Divinarem. See p. 7, line 23, confeceris, Note. Id. H. 445, 7; A. 48, V.; A. & S. 206, (13), (b); G. 408, Rem. 1. 30. Fore. H. 204, 1; A. & S. 154, Rem. 3; B. 279, Obs. 3. Unde may be used for a quo after a demonstrative or indefinite pronoun. M. 317, Obs. 2. Discerem. H. 501, I.; A. 65, IV. 2; A. & S. 264, 6, Rem. 3; G. 426.

Chap. V. 31. Quorsus — haec, sc. pertinent. One of those expressions in which the ellipsis of the verb has become a general usage. It may be omitted in familiar and every-day discourse, in any of those leading propositions in which an accusative or other words qualifying the verb, sufficiently point it out, and in which it is desired to attain the greatest brevity. M. 479, d; Z. 770. 32. Dietu. H. 570, 1 and 2; B. 1365 and 1366, Obs. 1; A. & S. 276, III., Rem. 2; A. 74, II.; G. 225. 34. Expugnationes. The plural of abstract nouns is much more common in Latin than in English, to denote a repetition of the same thing or its existence in different objects. Z. 92; M. 50, Obs. 3. The accusative is the regular construction of the thing with recordor. 36. Etiam quiete, i. e. in private as well as in public life. Pure, virtuously. Et simply connects two co-ordinate words or clauses, without any additional signification whatever. 37. Atque puts forward the second member somewhat more forcibly in comparison with the first, as distinct from it and equally important. Yet this accessory signification is often not to be recognized, especially with the shorter form ac. M. 433. Eleganter, lit. with correct choice or tastefully, refers here more especially to intellectual pursuits. Placida, the opposite of turbida; lenis of vehemens. D. sub Mitis. These adjectives form the predicate with est. 38. Uno et octogesimo. For the order of the words see H. 174, foot-note 3; B. 208; A. & S. 120, 2, (b); G. p. 38. In such a combination as this, unus is more frequent than primus. M. 74. 1. Scribens, while writing. H. 572; B. 1350; A. 72; A. & S. 274, 3, (a); G. 458. 2. Panathenaicus. In this he recounts the services Athens had rendered Greece in every period of her history. Quarto — dicit, sc. in Panath. ch. 1, 3. 4. Gorgias, of Leontini in Sicily, a noted sophist, though he called himself a rhetorician. 7. Quaeretur is in the imperf. instead of the pluperf. tense, because the inquiry is conceived as continuing until the desired answer is given. Lr. See also Z. 505, Note. 8. Accusem. H. 501, I. 1; A. & S. 264, 7, Note 3. Cf. discerem, p. 9, line 30. 13. Fortis, spirited. Spatio — supremo, at the end of the course. H. 441, 6; 10 A. 47, VIII.; A. & S. 205, Rem. 17; B. 662; G. 87, Rem. 14. Olympia, in the Olympic games, a substantive in the accus. plural. Cf. the Greek Ὀλύμπια νικᾶν. In place of a substantive (in the accusative), of kindred origin or meaning with the verb, an attribute of such a substantive can also be used. Kühner's larger Gr. 278, 2. Senio, old age as a time of debility. D. sub Vetus. Confectus. For the quantity of the final syllable, see p. 5, line 6, plenus, Note. 17. Hi consules, i. e. the present consuls. So p. 22, line 23, hujus Scipionis, the one now living. Hic denotes what is nearest to the speaker in place, time, or thought. M. 485, a. See Introd., p. 75. T. (Quintius) Flamininus, to be distinguished from the one mentioned in chapter I. Their relationship is not known. 19. Iterum refers to Philippo only. 20. Voconiam, proposed by the tribune, Q. Voconius Saxa, B. C. 169. Extant statements of its provisions are imperfect. It provided that no person included in the census should make any female his heir, or leave a larger legacy to any person than the heres should take. It was designed to check the extravagance of women and the alienation of wealth from the old families. Diet. Antiqq. 21. Suasissem, a characteristic thing for Cato to do. His speech was still extant in the time of Livy, and brief fragments of it are now. 25. Etenim forms a transition to a more particular discussion of the subject. Lr. See Introduction. 27. Avocet. Cf. p. 6, line 14, ferat, Note. 31. Videamus. H. 488, I.; B. 1193; A. 68, 1; A. & S. 260, Rem. 6; G. 55.

Chap. VI. 32. Rebus gerendis. This phrase more commonly refers to war or political affairs, but may also include, as here, affairs of private life — business of any kind. Quibus. A preposition in one sentence applies equally to a following relative or interrogative sentence, provided the verb of the former is also to be supplied. Lr. See also M. 323, b, Obs. 1; Z. 778, in fin. 33. An iis, etc. The first member of the double question — Aliisne — is omitted, and the second member here expects an affirmative answer. Is it not from those, etc. Z. 353, in fin.; M. 453. Juventute et viribus, youthful strength; hendiadys. H. 704, II.; A. & S. 323, 2, (3); B. 1379. 34. Res seniles, employments for old men. Vel, by an ellipsis of a preceding vel with its clause, = even. Z. 734; M. 436, Obs. Infirmis corporibus, abl. absol., instead of a temporal clause. H. 431, 1; A. & S. 257, Rem. 7; B. 972; G. 203.

Page

- 10 36. Maximus. See p. 8, line 26, note. L. (Aemilius) Paulus, surnamed Macedonicus for his victory over Perseus at Pydna and the conquest of Macedonia, B. C. 168; the father of Scipio Africanus Minor. 37. Filii mei. Cato's older son, M. Porcius Cato Licinianus, distinguished in the war against Perseus, an eminent jurist afterwards, and a man of unblemished life. He died when praetor-elect about 152 B. C. Fabricii, etc., denote particular individuals, as in line 34, p. 9: all cannot be Scipios or Marimi. The men here mentioned were contemporaries and intimate friends and among the ablest and noblest of the public men of the early part of the 3d century B. C. C. Fabricius Luscinus was noted for his generalship and incorruptibility in the war against Pyrrhus. M'. Curius Dentatus triumphed over the Samnites, the Sabines, and Pyrrhus, and was the constructor of the famous tunnel from Lake Velinus to the Nar. Tib. Coruncanius, like the others, held all the high offices of state, and was eminent as a
- 11 jurist and orator. 1. Defendebant. For the mood see H. 518, II. 3; B. 1248; A. & S. 263, 5, Rem. 3; G. 365. Appii Claudii, censor B. C. 312, builder of the Via Appia, the earliest of the paved roads, and the Aqua Appia, the earliest of the aqueducts. He was also noted for his promotion of the interests of the plebeians. 2. Ut is used because the blindness first developed itself in old age. Lr.; quod would merely introduce a statement of fact. H. 495, 2; B. 1222, Obs. 2; A. & S. 262, Rem. 3, N. 1; G. 342. 3. Ad pacem, when Pyrrhus proposed it, through his ambassador Cineas, after a victory over the Romans, B. C. 280. 5. Perseoutus est. See Lex. sub voce. C. 2. e. β . 6. Vobis. II. 398, 5; A. & S. 211, Rem. 5, (1). 7. Viai. For the form see H. 123, 3, and 42, 3, 2; A. & S. 43, 1; B. 55; A. 9, 2, and Supplement, p. 131; G. p. 13, Rem. 1. For the construction, H. 396, III. 2, 4; A. & S. 212, Rem. 4, N. 3; A. 50, II. 4; G. 168, R. 3. 8. Notum enim, etc., gives the reason for not quoting further from Ennius. 9. Oratio, sc. against peace with Pyrrhus. Plutarch in his Life of Pyrrhus professes to give the substance of it. Egit. See Lex. sub voce, III. 9. 13. Et tamen, i. e. although so old he exhibited, as we have learned, such ability and energy. 14. Afferunt. See Lex. sub voce, 4. 15. Negant. Indicative, to give prominence to the fact; who deny, as many actually do. H. 501, I. 2; A. & S. 264, 7, Note 4; B. 1228; G. 426, R. 2. Similesque sunt, omitted in several MSS., yet inserted in most editions without brackets. Que, when used to connect propositions, denotes consequence or result, = and therefore. Z. 333. Similes — dicant, they resemble any who should say. 16. Ut si qui, lit. as those would be if any, etc. See p. 7, line 23, confeceris, note. 17. Scandant. Quam usually has the subjunctive when it expresses a kind of comparison, and especially a contrast, between the leading clause and the subordinate. M. 358, Obs. 3. 19. Sedeat, a causal clause. 21. Velocitate, nimbleness, dexterity; celeritate, swiftness. D. sub Citus. 22. Sententia. See Lex. sub voce, I. B. Quibus sustains a twofold relation; with orbari, abl. of deprivation; with augeri, of specification. 24. Nisi forte, ironical with the indicative, introducing a case which is, in fact, inadmissible; unless you suppose. Z. 526, in fin.; M. 442, c, Obs. 1. 27. Quae, sc. bella. 28. Male cogitanti, which has now for a long time been designing mischief. H. 467, III. 2, and 577; B. 1083 and 1350; G. 29 and 462. Multo ante, sc. it is declared. 30. Quam. The relative here, as frequently, introduces a sentence, where in English no conjunction is used. See p. 6, line 15, qui, note. 31. Reservent. For the tense see H. 498, II. 2; B. 1196; A. & S. 263, 1, Rem.; A. 68, I.; G. 56. Avi reliquias, what your grandfather left unfinished; i. e. the destruction of Carthage, which four years later, at the close of the third Punic war, he accomplished. The reference in avi is to P. Corn. Scipio Africanus Major, the ablest general of the second Punic war, the conqueror of Hannibal, and the greatest of the Romans with the exception of Julius Caesar. His elder son (see p. 17, line 8) adopted the younger son of L. Aemilius Paulus, whose name thus became P. Corn. Scipio Aemilianus Africanus Minor, and whom Cato is represented as addressing here. See p. 6, line 13. 32. Sextus et tricesimus, i. e. B. C. 185, as the date of Cato's discourse was B. C. 150. This agrees with the statements of time in the following sentence, (taking novem annis to mean nine full years intervening, as in line 11 above, and line 32, p. 19,) since Cato was censor B. C. 184, and consul B. C. 195. Most of the MSS. and O., however, read tertius. The year of Scipio's death is uncertain. Livy placed it in B. C. 185, Valerius in B. C. 187, and Polybius in B. C. 183, and this last is most probably correct. Diet. Biog. But the numbers III and VI are frequently confounded in the MSS. 33. Poeniteret. For the tense see H. 504, 2; M. 347, b, Obs. 2. Enim introduces the reason for the omitted negative answer to

Page

- the preceding question. Excursione — gladiis, i. e. the exercises with which soldiers were trained when in camp. 2. Quae. For the gender see H. 445, 3, 1); A. 47, II.; A. & S. 206, (15), (a); B. 697. 4. Senatum, i. e. the assembly of elders. 6. Quod, strictly an accus. of specification, but used before si and other particles merely as a copulative to denote the connection of the thought with the preceding. M. 449; Z. 807. Voletis. Future tense, which is always used in Latin in a subordinate clause when it occurs in the principal clause, where in English the present is often used with less exactness. Z. 509; M. 339, Obs. 1. 7. Externa, i. e. the history of other nations. 10. Cedo. H. 297, III. 1; A. 38, V. 3; A. & S. 183, (2), 11; B. 448. The line which it introduces is an iambic tetrameter, in which the spondee and its equivalents are admitted in every foot except the last. H. 686; A. & S. 314, III.; B. 1511, 2 and 3. Qui. H. 188, 2; A. & S. 137, 1, Rem. (2); B. 246, in fin. 11. Naevii, an epic and dramatic poet of the 3d century B. C., a friend of Cato, and of the same party in politics and literature. Ludo, i. e. the title of a particular play. So Br., Lr., Som., and Mommsen read. Several MSS. have libro; others, followed by O., have ludo, i. e. the general name for a dramatic composition. Besides regular dramas, Naevius seems to have written entertainments called Ludi or Satirae. Dict. Biog. 13. Proveniebant, etc. Another iambic verse thus divided by Lr.:

Proven|ebant | orat|ores | novi | stulti ado|lescen|tuli.

Novi, inexperienced. 14. Aetatis. H. 402, I.; B. 780; A. & S. 211, Rem. 8, (3); G. 162, R. 1.

Chap. VII. 16. At often introduces in a new proposition an objection started by one's self or another, or the answer to an objection. M. 437, c. See p. 17, lines 4 and 6; p. 28, lines 38 and 39. Here it is alleged that the failure of the memory is another fact proving the first charge against old age. Nisi, etc. One of the instances where it is immaterial whether nisi or si non is used. See Z. 343. For the usual distinction, see H. 508, 3; A. & S. 198, 5, Rem. (b); G. 375; M. 442, c. 19. Qui Aristides esset, is, with the antecedent of qui, the direct object of salutare. H. 373, 1; A. & S. 230; G. 132. 20. Lysimachum, the father of Aristides. B. 715; A. 52, III. 3. Equidem, compounded of the demonstrative prefix e (ce) and quidem, and generally used with the first person of the verb. H. 446, I. 22. Sepulcra,

i. e. the inscriptions on them. Legens, sc. to obtain materials for his Origines. Quod aiunt, like ut aiunt, introduces a proverbial saying, it being a common belief that a loss of memory was caused by such reading. 23. Perdam. H. 492, 4, 1; A. 64, III.; A. & S. 262, Rem. 7; B. 1215; G. 335, Rem. 3. His — legendis. H. 566, I.; B. 1340; A. 73, V.; A. & S. 275, III., Rem. 4; G. 222. 30. Modo. See Lex. sub voce, I., B, d, and H. 505; A. 61, 3; A. & S. 263, 2; B. 1259; G. 396. 31. Claris, eminent for patriotic services; honoratis, distinguished by holding the high offices of the State. See D. sub Celeber. Statesmen are contrasted here with literary men and philosophers. 33. Quod, instead of cujus rei an objective genitive. M. 314. 34. Filiis, sc. Iophon, prompted by jealousy because of his father's affection for a grandson, Sophocles, the child of Ariston. 36. Patribus, dative; bonis, ablative — a mixture (after interdici only) of the usual double construction of a dat. and accus., or accus. and ablat. after a few verbs. H. 384, II., 1; B. 859; A. & S. 251, Rem. 2; A. 51, II. 2. In manibus habebat, was still engaged upon. See Lex. sub Manus, and cf. p. 18, line 9. and Epist. ad Att. 13, 47: Ea, quae in manibus habebam, abjeci. This clause explains why the judges had not yet witnessed the exhibition of the play in the theatre; while proxime scripserat states a fact which would prove his soundness of mind at the time of the trial. Lr. This play was written, however, as is now universally acknowledged, many years before, and only enlarged near the close of his life, with the insertion of political and personal allusions. Som. 7. Simonidem, Stesichorum, Greek lyric poets, the former of whom died B. C. 467, at the age of ninety, the latter about 560 B. C. at the age of eighty or more. 8. Isocraten, Gorgian, the reading of MSS. and the best critical editions. But these endings are less frequent in prose than em and am. See Z. 46, 2, and 71; M. 35, Obs. 2, and 45, 2, d. 11. Diogenem, one of three Athenian philosophers sent to Rome B. C. 155, to negotiate for the remission of a fine imposed for the destruction of Oropus. 17. Serendis. Here, as generally in the oblique cases, the future passive participle has the meaning of a continued passive state, and supplies the place of the present pass. partic. Ablative absolute with fructibus — an infrequent construction with this participle, yet attested by good authority. Z. 643 and 652. Cf. also De Off. I., 2, nullis officiis praeceptis tradendis, and Thacher's note. The neg-

Page

13 atives numquam and non do not destroy each other, because the former is in a general negation which is repeated distributively with the single terms. M. 460, Obs. 2; Z. 754, Note. 19. His, the reading of one MS. adopted by Br. and Som.; sc. employments just mentioned, contrasted with iis in line 21. Alis (sc. other than those referred to in line 21) is the reading of most MSS. and adopted by O. and Lr. 23. Serit, etc. The reading of Br., O., & Som., following the uniform reading of the MSS. in the Tusc. Disp. I. 31, where this line is also quoted. Many MSS. here have saeculo for saeclo. The metrical difficulties of the line have led some critics to suppose that Cicero had no regard to the arrangement of the words in the original. By others several different explanations of the metre have been given as follows: 1st. The line consists of Bacchiuses—the final syllable of serit lengthened by the ictus, and that of saeclo being a case of systole; 2d. The line is a comic iambic trimeter—the diphthong in quae, by exception to the rule for synaloepha, not elided, but shortened, and the first syllable of prosint being a case of systole; 3d. Serit is the last word of one verse, and the rest of the quotation forms another—a Cretic tetrameter verse—with the older form proñient instead of prosint. M. remarks that the combination of syllables called the Bacchius is not properly a foot; and that the comic poets treated the metres (with reference to the feet which may be used, etc.) with great freedom, so that the metrical reading and explanation of their verses is often very difficult. 499, d, Obs. 1, foot-note, and 502, a, Obs. 2. Alteri saeclo, the following generation. Lr. Quae—prosint, a relative clause of purpose. H. 500; A. 64, V., 2; B. 1207, (b); A. & S. 264, 5; G. 425. 24. Statius, considered by Cicero, Varro, and others one of the ablest Roman comic poets; d. B. C. 198. In lines 29 and 36 his other name is given. Dubitat, the reading of the MSS., Br., O., Lr. Some editors read dubitet; but the reply seems to be quoted in substance from the play.

Chap. VIII. 30. Illud, sc. the following lines. H. 450, 3; G. 91, 3. Idem, sc. Caccilius. 31. Edopol. See Lex. sub oe, 3, b, β . These verses and those at the bottom of the page are iambic trimeters. See p. 12, line 10, note, and H. 683, 3; A. & S. 314, 4; B. 1511, 2. 33. Diu. H. 669, II.; A. & S. 306, 1; B. 1519, 3. Videt agrees with a subject implied in senectus. 35. Adolescentia, by metonymy for adolescens, a rare usage, though frequent in similar abstracts, as senectus, juventus. Lr. 38. This line may 13 be scanned

Senti|re ea ae|tate ip|sum esse odi|osum al|teri

— the final e in sentire and the a in ea being cut off by synaloe-
pha. Ipsum esse, the emendation of Bothe, adopted by Br.
Other readings are esse se (three MSS. and O.), eumpse esse (Lr., Som., and Fleckeisen), eum se esse, and esse (MSS.).

2. Indole denotes the disposition as the beginning of individual- 14 ity and susceptible of improvement. D. sub Ingenium. 7. With sed Cato returns from the digression at the beginning of the chapter to the refutation of the first objection, which from the illustrations he has given he infers is groundless. Som. Ut — sit. H. 525; A. 24, II.; A. & S. 265; B. 1182; G. 252. 10. Quid. In certain transitions with this word, an ellipsis of dicam de iis followed as here by qui, what shall we say of those who, or of dicam de eo followed by quod, what shall we say of this that, is common. It may be rendered in various ways, as nay even, moreover. M. 479, d, Obs. 1;
Z. 769. 11. Gloriantem. Notice the use of the participle here, while the infinitive uti occurs in line 16. See p. 6, line 13, note; also H. 551, I. 4; A. & S. 274, 3, (c). 14. Quas quidem, etc.
See Introduction, p. 75. 16. Quod refers to the idea in aliquid ad-discentem. 17. Vellem, potential subjunctive. The tense indicates that the wish cannot be realized. M. 350, b, Obs. 1; Z. 528, Note 2. 18. Fidibus, ablative instead of accus. of the thing after disco as equivalent to the passive of a verb of teaching. M. 228, a, Obs., foot-note; Z. 391, Note 1, (where it is called the ablative of the instrument.)

Chap. IX. 20. Nec, not a mere adverb, but a negative conjunction, indicating a transition to the second topic — locus alter — and belonging to the whole sentence, while quidem belongs only to nunc. Lr. 21. Non here strengthens the negation, a rare exception to the general usage and apparently derived from the language of common life. Z. 754, Note in fin. For the two usual exceptions, see p. 8, line 16, note, and p. 13, line 17, note.
22. Plus strictly denotes quantity, but is also used in the sense of magis, denoting degree. M. 305, c, Obs. 2; Z. 725.
23. Agas. H. 486, III.; A. & S. 260, II., Rem. 1, (1); B. 1174, I.; G. 54, I. The 2d person sing. of the subjunct. is used of an assumed person representing a single indefinite subject, which is imagined,

Page

- 14 and, so to speak, addressed, in order to express something indefinite. In principal clauses this form is found in conditional discourse (as in line 3, p. 15), in potential expressions (as in line 36, p. 55), in commands and prohibitions (as in line 21, p. 16); in subordinate clauses, also with conjunctions and relatives (as here and in line 11, p. 29). M. 370, and 494, Obs. 5; Z. 529, Note.
- 25. Milonis, an athlete of the 6th century B. C., of extraordinary strength; six times victor at the Olympic, and as many at the Pythian games. 29. Nugator, one who talks nonsense, fool.
- 31. Sex. Aelius, sc. Paetus Catus; consul B. C. 198, a celebrated jurist and orator, author of the "Jus Aelianum," probably the earliest commentary on the "Twelve Tables." Coruncanus. See p. 10, line 37, note. 32. Modo, as a particle of time, has a relative value, denoting a time nearer than that of some person or thing mentioned before. On p. 26, line 31, nuper is used with reference to the same man (Crassus). Generally, however, modo denotes a time more recent than nuper. D. sub Nuper. Crassus, though much nearer in time than Coruncanus, died thirty-three years before the date of this discourse. He was consul B. C. 205, a general against Hannibal in Southern Italy, a learned jurist and eloquent orator.
- 33. Praescribebantur, explained or interpreted for their fellow-citizens, as the jurists were wont to in their professional opinions, (L.); according to others, proposed in the popular assemblies, (as in line 27, p. 11.) The former meaning accords with the custom of the times and the character of these men; the latter seems to agree better with the usual meaning of the verb in classic prose.
- 34. Provecta, made progress, increased. Prudentia = jurisprudentia. Orator, i. e. eloquence of expression. 36. Omnino, concessive, to be sure. Som. See Lex. sub voce, II. B. 38. Et = et tamen. 39. Sed tamen, i. e. even when what has just been stated is not the case (thereby implying that it is not always).
- 15 Decorus. Predicte of senis—remissus. 2. Composita, unimpassioned. 3. Nequeas. Queo is used generally only in negative clauses and far more rarely than possum. M. 159, Obs. 1; Z. 216. For instances of its affirmative use see line 38, below, and p. 58, line 8. According to D., possum denotes ability as a consequence of power and strength, queo, of complete qualification. Posis. For the person, see p. 14, line 23, note. Scipioni et Laelio, here, representatives of all young men desirous of knowledge. 5. Studiis, the abstract for the concrete. An. See

p. 10, line 33, note. 7. Instituatur, educate. Officii munus, performance of duty. Munus is used in a similar way on p. 17, line 5, and p. 30, line 2, where the phrase may be rendered function of duty, or any business which duty requires. Strictly, when the two are contrasted with each other, officium denotes an employment imposing a moral, munus, a political obligation, undertaken merely as a charge or office; e. g. on p. 16, line 35. 8. Cn. et P. Scipiones, brothers, the former commanding the army in Spain early in the second Punic war, the latter (father of Africanus Major) at the battle of the Ticinus and from B. C. 217, with his brother in Spain, until they were both slain B. C. 211. 9. L. Aemilius, sc. Paulus, father of Macedonicus. 12. Vires, i. e. physical strength. 16. Cyrus, the elder, conqueror of Babylon, founder of the Persian empire about the middle of the 6th cent. B. C., and benefactor of the Jews. Apud, in a work of. Z. 297. 18. Negat, etc., from the Cyropaedia, VIII. 7. 19. Fuisset. H. 531; A. 67, II.; A. & S. 266, 2; B. 1296; G. 440. 20. Metellum. L. Caecilius Metellus, victor at Panormus in the first Punic war, thus establishing Roman supremacy in Sicily. Memini puer, I remember from the years of my boyhood. M. 408, b, Obs. 2. 23. Esse. The present infin. is commonly used after memini (which has the signification of a present) when one has been an actual witness of the thing remembered; as if the meaning were, I noticed when the transaction took place, that, etc. M. as above; Z. 589. Otherwise the perfect is used. Viribus, predicate ablat. of characteristic. In many instances the gen. and abl. of quality are either not at all or very slightly distinguished. The gen. denotes more the general nature and kind of the subject, the abl. particular qualities and circumstances belonging to it. The abl. is used of qualities in general oftener than the gen.; but the latter alone, to express the requisites for a thing, its size and kind, and the abl. alone to express its constitution with reference to its external parts. M. 287, c, Obs. 2. 24. Requireret, feel the need of. Mihi. Dat. with the infin. mood, after necesse est, because the person is to be made emphatic. Lr. 25. Dicere. Either the infin. or the subjunct. without ut may follow necesse est. M. 373, Obs. 1; Z. 625. Id, i. e. de se ipso dicere.

Chap. X. 27. Ne here suggests the answer yes. H. 346, II. 1, 1); A. & S. 198, 11, Rem. (c.). Ut — praedict. Cf. Iliad, 1, 260, et seqq.; 11, 668, et seqq. 28. Jam marks time definitely with

Page

- 15 respect to another time. Here = already. 29. Aetatem might seem to express only duration of time, but as the passive forms also occur, e. g. tertia vivitur aetas, it will be better to consider vivere as transitive — spend in living. Z. 383; M. 223, c, Obs. 4. 30. Insolens, arrogant. 31. Ut ait Homerus. Cf. Iliad, 1, 249. 33. Et tamen, i. e. notwithstanding his old age. It refers to tertium aetatem, etc., above. Dux illi, sc. Agamemnon. 34. Nusquam, i. e. in Homer. Cf. Iliad, 2, 371. Ajaciis. The gen. of the names of living beings almost always follows similis in Cic. and the earlier writers, and the gen. or dat. indiscriminately of other nouns. M. 247, b, Obs. 2. In the Tusc. Disp. I. 33, 81, the same case is used though the two kinds of resemblance (external and internal) are contrasted; while in the De Nat. Deor. II. 59, 149, both cases are used in the same sentence though the same kind of resemblance is meant. From the age of Livy, however, the use of the dat. became more and more frequent, so that the gen. occurs in hardly a single passage in Virgil or Horace. Chase, Cic. Tusc. Disp. 37. Idem. H. 371, 1, 3), (2); A. 52, I.; A. & S. 232, 1; B. 717, in fin.; G. 129, 2. 38. Possem. So two MSS. and the best editors. Other MSS. and editors, posse. M. remarks that volo is commonly used with the subj. without ut only in short and unambiguous expressions, otherwise with the accus. and infin. 372, b, Obs. 2; H. 551, II. 2; A. 68, II., and 64, IV.; A. & S. 273, 4, (α); B. 1204; G. 331, Rem. 1. The same references apply to habeat, line 34, above, but particularly the remark of Z. 613, Note, 16 that Cic. uses optare ut exclusively. 1. Miles bello, etc. See p. 8, line 33, and Introduction, p. 73. 3. Tribunus. More probably Legatus. Cf. Livy xxxvi. 17. Depugnavi. H. 531, 4; A. & S. 266, 2, Rem. 5; B. 1296, F.; G. 440, R. 2. 4. Sed tamen, etc. Notice the transition to the Oratio Recta. 6. Curia, the senate-house; i. e. the Curia Hostilia, usually, until the time of the empire. It stood on the north side of the Forum, and took its name from king Tullus Hostilius, the builder. Dict. Geog. Non—desiderat, i. e. I am still at my post there, and able to discharge the duties of my profession. 9. Fieri. For the mood see H. 558, VI. 3; A. & S. 273, 2; B. 1209; G. 331, Rem. 1. 10. Mallem. See p. 14, line 17, note. Of course the intended meaning of the proverb is true: One must in youth have something of the prudence and temperance of an old man, if he would live to a great age. Cato replies as if the sentiment were that one must early form that habit of inaction which is often characteristic of the aged. 12. Cui. Dative of disadvantage, denoting that what is asserted by the predicate holds good in reference to some particular person or thing. M. 241. Fuerim occupatus, i. e. to whom I have refused my services on the ground that I was overloaded with work. Som. For the mood see p. 9, line 30, discerem, note. 14. Idcirco, for this reason. It refers here to the preceding statement; sometimes to a following one. Z. 344, note; A. 43, 5; G. 289. 15. Moderatio, a moderate degree. Adsit. For the mood see p. 12, line 30, modo, note. 16. Ne = ut, verily, stands only at the beginning of a sentence, and for the most part before the personal pronouns. Arn. 17. Olympiae. Gen. of place, as if the name of a town. 19. Bovem. Utrum igitur. So Manutius followed by Br., Lr., and Som. O. adopts the reading of four MSS. bovem vivum. Igitur. Three other MSS. have bov. viv. Utr. igit. Has, sc. of Milo, who was a resident of Crotona, where his contemporary Pythagoras established his school. 21. Utare, as well as requiras, is subjunctive of desire, the subject being indefinite. Otherwise this use of the second person pres. subjunct. active, instead of the imperative, is rare. M. 385, and 386, Obs. 1. Adsit. H. 527, 2, 2); A. 66, II.; A. & S. 266, 1; B. 1292; G. 424. Nisi forte. See p. 11, line 24, note. 23. Aetatis, life. See p. 8, line 20, note. 24. Simplex, plain. 25. Tempestivitas. See Lex. sub voce. 26. Ferocitas, impetuosity. Constantis aetatis, middle age. 28. Suo, the fitting. H. 449, 2; A. & S. 208, (8); G. 96, Rem. 1; M. 491, Obs. 1. 29. Tuus avitus, i. e. of your grandfather, Africanus Major, with whom on his invasion of Africa, Masinissa formed an alliance against Carthage. According to Polybius Masinissa was, in B. C. 150, eighty-eight years old, and died two years later. 33. Capite, predicate ablat. of characteristic. See p. 15, line 23, note. 34. Siccitatem, for which we have no word that I know, means a hard, elastic, firm condition of the flesh, the result of a good constitution maintained by exercise and temperance. L. See Lex. sub voce, I. B, 3. 35. Officia et munera. See p. 15, line 7, note.

Chap. XI. 38. Sint, subjunct. of concession. H. 516, II. 1; B. 1283; G. 402. 2. Non modo. For the omission of a second non here, see H. 584, 2; B. 1000; A. & S. 277, R. 6, (α). 4. Cogimur, sc. facere. At multi, etc. An objection, the reply to which begins with the next sentence. 5. Munus. See p. 15, line 7, note.

Page

- 17 6. Senectutis, valetudinis. H. 391, 2, 4); B. 863, Obs. 2; A. & S. 222, Rem. 2, (a); G. 154, R. 1. 9. Ni is antiquated, but occurs in certain expressions of legal phraseology and of daily life and in some few other instances. M. 442, c. Alterum, second, i. e. to his father. See p. 11, line 31, note. 10. Illud. Neuter by attraction of alterum lumen. Lr. The inscription to the memory of this Scipio, found in 1780 in the family tomb near the Via Appia, has been rendered by Donaldson in his "Varronianus," as follows:

The priestly symbol decked thy brow:
 But oh! how brief a share hadst thou
 Of all this world can give:—
 Honor, and fame, and noble birth,
 High intellect, and moral worth:—
 Had it been thine to live
 A lengthened span, endowed with these,
 Not all the stately memories
 Of thy time-honored knightly line
 Had left a glory like to thine.
 Hail! Publius, Publius Scipio's son!
 Thy brief but happy course is run.
 Child of the great Cornelian race,—
 The grave is now thy dwelling-place:
 And mother earth upon her breast
 Has lulled thee lovingly to rest.

13. Id, sc. the abstract quality implied in infirmi. 20. Menti, the intellect; animo, the soul. D. sub Anima. 21. Haec. For the gender see H. 445, 3, 1); A. 47, II. (2); A. & S. 205, Rem. 2, (2); B. 654. 26. Comicos. See Lex. sub voce, and cf. Laelius, p. 66, line 10. 27. Hoc. The reading of four MSS. and adopted by Br. and O.; ablat. of means. Lr. and Som., following two MSS., read hos. Dissolutos, imbecile. Quae, sc. the qualities implied in the words immediately preceding. 28. Inertis, lazy; ignavae, spiritless. D. sub Ignavia. 29. Petulantia, wantonness. 31. Ista indicates contempt. H. 450, 3; A. 20, II.; A. & S. 207, Rem. 25; B. 1031; G. 90, Rem. 32. Levium, weak by nature. 33. Robustos, of mature age. Lr. 34. Clientelas. See Lex. sub voce, C. Appius. See p. 11, line 1, note. 38. Verebantur differs from metuebant in denoting a reverential fear. See D. sub Vereri.
- 18 2. Patrinus, of our ancestors. 4. Mancipata. Som. in his 6th ed.

(1869) asserts that a notice by A. Fleckeisen in the Neue Jahrb. 18 für Philol., 1867, proves that the correct reading here is emancipata — which is also adopted by Nonius and Mommsen. The text of Orelli has emancipaverat in Cic. De Fin. I. 7, 24, without giving any various readings, and emancipatum in Cic. Phil. II. 21, 51. In Hor. Epod. 9, 12, emancipatus occurs in all the MSS., according to Geo. Long; and in all these passages the idea must be that of transference to the possession of another or sale. But even if emancipata has sometimes the meaning required here, mancipata is the reading of all the MSS. and is adopted by Br., O., and Lr. The legal transference of the ownership of a thing was called mancipio dare, for which mancipare is sometimes used as an equivalent. Dict. Antiqq. sub Mancipium. Cf. Hor. Epist. II. 2, 159: Quaedam, si credis consultis, mancipat usus. 6. Senile aliquid, something of the wisdom of old age. 7. Quod sequitur, strives for this, sc. to retain something of the youthful spirit. 8. Animo. H. 429; B. 889; A. 54, I.; A. & S. 250; G. 194. Mihi. Dat. of possessor. 9. Originum. See Introduction, p. 74. In manibus, i. e. I am at work upon it. See p. 13, line 2, note. 11. Quum maxime, a strengthened maxime, i. e. tam conficio quam quum maxime. Arn. See Lex. Quum, I. B. 1. 12. Augurium, the reading of one MS., adopted by Br., Lr., and Som. It also occurs in line 25, p. 9, and Epist. ad Fam. III. 9, 3, and has in its favor the form of the next word pontificium. Most MSS., however, with O., read augurum. Jus was divided by the Romans into jus gentium and jus civile, the latter into jus civile in the narrower sense, and jus pontificium or the law of religion in general; and this last again into jus pontificium in the stricter sense, and jus augurium or the law of augury. 18. Adsum, used technically of legal assistance rendered in court. 19. Multum et diu. See p. 8, line 20, note. 23. Possim. H. 495, 1; B. 1223; A. & S. 273, 1, (b); G. 341; A. 65, I. 24. The dat. of the agent with which (understood) viventis here agrees, is a very rare construction in Cicero with the simple tenses. Z. 419, note; H. 388, 3; B. 846; A. & S. 225, II.; A. 51, VIII. in fin.; G. 150. 25. Obrepat. H. 525; A. 67, I. 1; A. & S. 265; B. 1182; G. 252. Sensim — senescit. Freund regards the phrase sine sensu as “an etymologico-exegetical gloss, though a very ancient one.” But it has the authority of the MSS., the meaning of sensim sine sensu is very evident, though an etymological contradiction,

Page

18 and similar instances of alliteration are frequent. Cf. p. 24, line 21.

Chap. XII. 28. Munus, favor, service, which is rendered of free will, here, and frequently (cf. pp. 8, line 38, and 19, line 6); elsewhere an obligatory service (cf. p. 15, line 7, note). 29. Aetatis, old age. See p. 8, line 20, note. 31. Archytas, a Pythagorean philosopher and mathematician as well as general and statesman, admired for his integrity and virtue, a contemporary of Plato, who is said to have been indebted to him for some of his views. See Diet. Biog. 33. Tarenti, a genitive according to H. 423, II. 2; A. & S. 221, 1; G. 180; and M. 296, a, Obs. 3, who remarks: This idiom proceeds from the fact that the gen. sing. of Decl. I. and II. (in i) had a different origin from the gen. of Decl. III., and at first in addition to its other meanings conveyed the notion of being in a place. But the other theory, that the name of the place where was originally put in a special case called the Locative, which ended in i and is generally the same in form with the Dative (A. 55, III. 3), is maintained by many philologists, and the different forms denoting "place where" are as easily explained by it. Thus in the 2d decl. the ending i is obtained by contraction of the root vowel o with the vowel i of the ending. A. 8, II. 4; H. 123, 3. 35. Voluptatis depends on avidae. H. 399, 2, 2); A. 50, III. 2; A. & S. 213, Rem. 1, (3); B. 767, 3d; G. 170. 36. Temere et effrenate, without reason and without restraint. Potendum, sc. voluptate. 37. Incitarentur. See p. 15, line 19, note. 39. Scelus, an offence against others; 1. facinus, a daring deed of evil; 3. flagitium, an offence against one's self, a shameful act. D. sub Delictum. 1. Libido, a blind or irrational desire. D. sub Cupido. 4. Sive — sive, connect only nouns, and adverbs, and leave it undecided which member is the right one, as a thing of no importance as far as the purport of the sentence is concerned. M. 436, Obs. 6. Muneri ac dono. For the exact difference of meaning between these words see p. 8, line 37, donis, note. 7. Temperantiae, self-control. It denotes the due government of the passions and appetites of our nature. (Crombie's Gymnasium.) It is akin to sapientia. D. sub Modus. Cf. Cic. Tusc. Disp. IV. 9, 22: Temperantia sedat appetitiones et efficit, ut eae rectae rationi pareant, conservatque considerata judicia mentis; and III. 8, 16, σωφροσύνην, quam soleo equidem tum temperantiam, tum moderationem appellare, nonnumquam etiam modestiam. 9. Posset. For the mood

see H. 497; A. 64, II.; B. 1210; A. & S. 262, Rem. 9; G. 333. 19

11. Quanta, used by Cicero, instead of quam with posse, to strengthen the superlative of adjectives only when tantus precedes. Z. 689; M. 310, Obs. 3. 12. Tamdiu, dum, so long as. See Lex. sub Dum, I. B. 1, b. 17. Haec is the object of locutum (esse), and this infinitive depends upon accepisse. 18. Caudino proelio, the battle at the pass of the mountains called Furculae Caudinae in Samnium, in the second Samnite war, B. C. 321, when the Roman army was defeated and compelled to pass under the yoke. 19. Nearchus, a Pythagorean philosopher, the host of Cato after the capture of Tarentum. 20. Qui — permanserat, sc. while Tarentum was in the hands of the Carthaginians. 23. Camillo — consulibus, i. e. in the year B. C. 349; but this is extremely improbable, as Plato was then about eighty years old, and died only two years later. His third visit to Sicily, as is generally stated, was in B. C. 361. Of a later one there is elsewhere no evidence. Dict. Biog. 24. Quorsum haec. See p. 9, line 31, note. 26. Magnam — gratiam, we ought to feel very grateful. 27. Efficeret. Relative causal cl. See p. 7, line 38, ferrent, note. 28. Oporteret. See p. 16, line 21, adsit, note. 29. Praestringit, dims or weakens. 30. Inventus, used instead of an adverb (which the English idiom requires), because the state or condition of the subject during the action is described. Z. 682; H. 443; A. 47, VI.; A. & S. 205, Rem. 15, (a); B. 663. 31. Feci, ut, a frequent periphrasis to express a fact. Z. 618; M. 481, b. T. Flaminini. See p. 5, line 1, note. L. Flaminium, commander of a fleet against Philip of Macedonia, B. C. 198, consul B. C. 192, and governor of Cisalpine Gaul. Cato's censorship, in the exercise of which he degraded Flamininus, was seven full years after the consulship of the latter. 33. Fuisset. Subjunctive by attraction. For the tense see H. 471, 4; A. & S. 259, (2), (d); B. 1249 in fin. Notandum. The most important of the three functions of the censors was the Regimen Morum, which amounted to a complete superintendence over the public and private life of every citizen. The punishment inflicted by them was called Nota. Dict. Antiqq. p. 263. See also Lex. sub Noto, II. C. 36. Rei capitalis. H. 410, 5, 1); B. 793; A. 50, IV. 2; A. & S. 217; G. 174. 38. Elapsus est. See Lex. sub Elabor, I. B. 2. Mihi. See p. 18, line 24, note. Flacco. L. Valerius Flaccus, Cato's colleague in the censorship, as before in the consulship, a life-long friend and one of the leaders in the

Page

- 19 same political party; an able general in Cisalpine Gaul and in Macedonia. 39. Quae = quum ea. 40. Imperii dedecus, because he governed the province in the name of the Roman Senate and people. Som.
- 20 Chap. XIII. 3. Fabricium. See p. 10, line 37, note. 4. Cinea. The friend and minister of Pyrrhus, king of Epirus, and his ambassador to Rome. Quendam, sc. Epicurus. 6. Voluptatem, i. e. bodily pleasure—a misinterpretation of the doctrine of Epicurus, which was that pleasure consisting in pure and noble mental enjoyments was the true end of all human actions, and that this was therefore the standard to which they ought to be referred in determining their merit. 10. Vixerat cum denotes a close intimacy of life. P. Decio. P. Decius Mus, who was four times consul, and in B. C. 300 the chief advocate of the Ogulnian law which made the plebeians eligible to the offices of pontifex and augur. 11. Se devoverat, sc. to death at the decisive battle of Sentinum in the second Samnite war, B. C. 295, in which he was joint commander with Fabius Maximus. 12. Eundem, sc. Decius. 15. Sua sponte, for its own sake, a rare meaning resulting from its connection with a passive verb. Sh. 17. Optimus quisque in connection with the verb conveys the idea of a reciprocal comparison among the persons implied in the statement; i. e. all good men would seek, and the better they were, the more earnestly. Z. 710, b; B. 1052; A. & S. 207, Rem. 35, b; G. 106. 18. Quia regularly introduces a fact; 19. quod, an allegation; 23. quoniam has reference to motives. A. 43, 6. 19. Quod—desiderat is the subject of the preceding est, put in this form to make the fact prominent. H. 556, I.; A. 70, IV.; A. & S. 273, 5, (2); B. 1252; G. 323. 21. Exstructis. See Lex. sub Exstruo, I. A. 23. Aliquid here stands after one of those conjunctions which usually require the simple indefinite pronoun quid, because of its emphasis, which may be expressed by really, or practically; i. e. if it is impossible to withdraw ourselves from pleasure entirely. Z. 708, 2d paragraph. 24. Divine. See Lex. sub voce, II. 2. 25. Appellat, etc., sc. in the Timaeus, 69, D. 28. Duellium, the form of the word in the MSS. and the best critical editions. Duellius was the commander of the first fleet in the first Punic war, and was victorious in his first naval engagement off Mylae in Sicily, B. C. 260, in commemoration of which the Columna Rostrata was erected in the Forum. 30. Crebro, numerous. Som. 31. Nullo exemplo, without any previous instance of the kind. Privatus, i. e. even 20 after his return to private life. Duellius, not content with a triumph of one day, during all his life commanded lighted torches to be carried before him, and flutes to play before him when he returned from dinner, as if he would triumph daily. L. Annaeus Florus, II. 2. The language of the Epitome of Livy (Bk. 17) is: Ei perpetuus honos habitus est, ut revertenti a cena tibicines carent et funale praeferretur. 34. Sodalitates, banqueting-clubs which celebrated certain yearly religious festivals, a custom which probably first became common after the date and as a consequence of the event here referred to. Som. 35. Idæis. Mt. Ida in Crete was the earliest seat of the worship of Rhea, with whom the Greeks identified Cybele, (Magnæ Matris,) the mother of the gods. The worship of Cybele was introduced at Rome B. C. 204, when her image was brought from Pessinus in Galatia, and set up in the temple of Victory on the Palatine, and an annual festival in April established in her honor, called Megalesia. 2. Epularem, from epulae the general term; 3. convivium, a social meal. D. sub Epulae. 5. Compotationem, concenationem. Cf. Epist. ad Fam. IX. 24, 3: Nec id ad voluptatem refero, sed ad communitatem vitae atque victus remissionemque animorum, quae maxime sermone efficitur familiari, qui est in convivio dulcissimus, ut sapientius nostri quam Graeci: illi σμπόσια aut občēσια, id est, comptationes aut concenationes; nos convivia, quod tum maxime simul vivitur. 6. Quod — est, which is of the least importance in this custom. Id, i. e. the eating and drinking.

Chap. XIV. 9. Tempestivis, beginning early, before the ninth hour, the usual time for dinner, and generally continuing late into the night; prolonged. 13. Sustulit. For the mood see H. 519, 2; B. 1252; A. & S. 266, 3, in fin.; G. 420. 16. Modus. The reading of most MSS. and critical editions; (with quidam) indulgence within a certain limit. Non — ne — quidem. See p. 8, line 16, note. 17. Sensu, enjoyment of them. Magisteria. See Lex. sub voce, I, A. 19. A summo, beginning with the guest in the place of honor, i. e. the highest of the three places on the highest of the couches, which surrounded the table on three sides. It was the first seat on the right to one standing at the unoccupied side of the table and facing it. See Dict. Antiqq. sub Triclinium. In poculo, over the wine. 20. Sympōsio, or "The Banquet," interesting as a picture of an Athenian drinking party and of the

Page

- 21 amusement and conversation with which it was diversified. Dict. Biog. Socrates, who is the chief speaker, exhorting the guests to moderation in the pleasures of the table, describes the good effects upon both mind and body, if, instead of large draughts of wine, ἡμῖν οἱ παῖδες μικραῖς κυλίξει τικυὰ ἐπιπικάζωσιν (ch. 2, 26), which Cicero here renders by the phrase pocula minuta atque rorantia, i. e. feasts at which the guests merely sip the wine. See also Lex. sub Roro, II. b. 21. Refrigeratio, cool apartment. In some words in io, the signification of an action is lost (e. g. cenatio, a supper-room). M. 178, 4, Obs. 2. See Dict. Antiqq. sub Triclinium. 22. In Sabinis, at my Sabine villa. 23. Conviviumque, etc., i. e. I make the table full by inviting my neighbors. Vicinorum. The genitive instead of the ablative is sometimes joined with compleo, not only by the poets, but by good prose writers. Z. 463; M. 260, α, Obs. 24. Ad multam noctem, late into the night. Quam maxime combined with possumus expresses the highest possible degree. M. 310, Obs. 3. 25. At. See p. 12, line 16, note. 26. Tanta titillatio, so keen a relish. 27. Desideratur. O., Lr., and Som., following most of the MSS., read desideratio, believing that this form, though very rare, is used to correspond with the preceding titillatio. But the reading of the text has MS. authority, and Br. remarks that Cicero's usage is desiderium, not desideratio. Nihil — desideres, i. e. the absence of anything is not disagreeable if you have no desire for it. H. 513; A. 61, 3, Note; A. & S. 264, 2; B. 1280; G. 422, Rem. 29. Affecto aetate, advanced in age. Aetate, (ablative copiae;) M. 260, α; H. 414, 2, 1), 2d paragraph; A. & S. 249, I., Rem. 1; B. 912. 30. Di meliora, sc. dunt, the gods forbid; a subjunctive clause of desire. Istinc, sc. rebus veneris. The story is from Plato, De Republica, I. 3. 31. Cupidis. H. 391; A. 51; B. 860; A. & S. 222, 3; G. 154. 34. Non caret, i. e. is not really deprived of, because careo properly means to lack that which one desires to have, as Cicero defines it in the Tusc. Disp. I. 36, 88: Carere igitur hoc significat: egere eo, quod habere velis. See also D. sub Carere. 36. Bona aetas = adolescentia. 39. Ambivio. L. Ambivius Turpio, a noted actor and theatre-director, often employed by Terence to superintend the exhibition of his comedies. 1. Prima cavea, the front seats. H. 441, 6; A. 47, VIII.; A. & S. 205, Rem. 17; B. 662; G. 87, Rem. 5. Illa has the infinitive clause animus — vivere, in apposition with it. 6. Emeritis stipendiis, etc. The figure is that of a military service under the command of libido and the other pas- 22 sions mentioned. See Lex. sub Stipendium, II. B. 9. Studii, subjective genitive. 10. Otiosa, not idle, but unoccupied with political pursuits. Cf. De Officiis, III. 1. A re publica forensibusque negotiis armis impiis vique prohibiti, otium persequimur. . . .

Nos ad hanc scribendi operam omne studium curamque convertimus.
Itaque plura brevi tempore eversa, quam multis annis stante re publica, scripsimus. 11. Dimetiendi agrees in form with the nearest noun. H. 439; A. 47, II.; A. & S. 205, Rem. 2, Exc.; B.
656; G. 86. Paene affects the two following genitives which together denote the whole universe. Lr. Galum. This form is given in the best MSS., in the Fasti Capitolini, and in Cic. Epist.
ad Fam. IV. 6, 1. It is also to be so written in the Laelius.
Mommсен quoted by Lr. This reading is adopted by Br., and Lr., while O. and Som. retain Gallum. C. Sulpicius Galus was consul B. C. 166, was an eminent orator and Greek scholar, a friend of the plebeians, and one of the most distinguished men of his time.
His knowledge of astronomy is often mentioned by Cicero.
13. Aliquid describere, to draw some map, sc. of the heavens or earth. 14. Quam delectabat, etc. In B. C. 168, when military tribune under Aemilius Paulus in Macedonia, he predicted with accuracy an eclipse of the moon. 15. Multo ante, sc. their occurrence.
16. Levioribus, less important, sc. relatively to those which were connected in any way with the service of the State. Som. Acutis, i.
e. demanding acuteness of intellect. 17. Bello suo Punico, an epic poem on the first Punic war. 18. Truculento, Pseudolo, names of two of the twenty comedies of Plautus, whose plays are the earliest specimens of Roman literature extant. 19. Livium, sc.
Andronicum, a Greek of Tarentum, a freedman of Livius Salinator, and the earliest Roman author of whom we have any knowledge, whose first play was exhibited B. C. 240. 20. Docuisset. See Lex. sub Doceo, B. 22. Crassi. See p. 14, line 32, note. 23. Ju-
ris. When two genitives depend on one noun (as here), the subjective commonly precedes; the objective may either precede or follow the noun. Z. 791. Hujus. See p. 10, line 17, note. Scipi- onis. P. Corn. Scipio Nasica, twice consul, pontifex maximus B.
C. 150, surnamed Coreulum for his knowledge of law, an eminent orator and a strong supporter of the conservative party. He secured the destruction of a theatre on the ground of its injury to the public morals, and opposed the destruction of Carthage be-

Page

22 cause he thought its existence would be a useful check upon the licentiousness of the masses. Dict. Biog. 26. Cethegum. M. Cornelius Cethegus, consul B. C. 204, a successful general against Mago the brother of Hannibal, in Cisalpine Gaul, the next year, and according to Cicero (Brutus, ch. 15) the earliest orator of any real eminence among the Romans; d. B. C. 196. 27. Suadae, personified by Ennius: Παῖς quam vocant Graeci, hanc Suadam appellavit Ennius; ejus autem Cethegum medullam fuisse vult, ut, quam deam in Perioli labris scripsit Eupolis sessitavisse, hujus hic medullam nostrum oratorem fuisse dixerit. Brutus, ch. 15, 59. Medullam, the very substance. See also Lex. sub voce, II. 30. Comparandae. The second periphrastic conjug. has the meaning of possibility only in negative sentences or interrogative sentences implying a negative. M. 420, Obs.; Z. 650. 31. Haec refers to what precedes, and is antithetic to the following chapter, where other pursuits are mentioned which also afford rational enjoyment to the aged. 34. Ut ante dixi, sc. in Chapter VIII.

23 Chap. XV. 1. Habent rationem, a mercantile phrase. 6. Gremio. H. 422, 1, 2); A. 55, III. 5; A. & S. 254, Rem. 3, in fin. 8. Occatio, really derived from occare, from the root AK, which denotes sharpness. 9. Tepefactum, sc. semen. 10. Diffundit; expands, swells; agrees with quae in line 6. Viriditatem, the green stalk, the abstract for the concrete; antecedent of quae in the following line. 11. Culmo. H. 414, 3; A. & S. 247, 2; A. 54, II.; B. 876; G. 197. 12. Vaginis, leaves or sheaths, an adjunct of includitur, i. e. the plant grows its ears of grain within a husk or covering of leaves. 13. Spici ordine structam, built up in the order of the ear, i. e. the regular ear-form. Som. 15. Ortus points to the power of nature, satus to the activity of man. 17. Ut—noscatis. See p. 7, line 16, note. 22. Malleoli, new shoots with a piece of the old wood attached, in the shape of a mallet; plantae, sprouts or suckers out from the main stock; sarmenta, scions, young twigs cut from the branches; viviradices, quicksets, cuttings with some of the roots of the parent tree attached; 23. propagines, layers, branches fastened in the ground and made to take root while still attached to the parent stock. Cf. Virg. Georg. II. 23–29. Cum admiratione delectent, fill with delight and admiration. 25. Eadem, used to recall to mind with emphasis vitis, which is separated from its predicate by the intervening relative clause; a case of anacoluthia. M. 489, a. 23 28. Erratico, irregular. 30. Fundatur, be spread out. Iis, sc. earmentis. 31. Ea, attracted into the feminine gender by quae, as that is by gemma. Z. 372; M. 315, c. 38. Ut ante dixi, sc. in lines 5 and 6 above. 1. Capitum jugatio, the uniting of the tops of the adminicula by a cross-lattice. 3. Immissio, the letting others grow, refers to in iis quae relictæ, etc., p. 23, line 30. See Lex. sub Immitto, I. B, 2. 6. Eo libro, sc. the De Re Rustica, which as we now have it is probably substantially Cato's, though certainly not exactly in the form in which he wrote it. Dict. Biog. 8. Quum — scriberet, sc. in his "Works and Days." 9. Saeculis, generations. For the case see H. 427, 1; A. 55, I. in fin.; A. & S. 253, Rem. 1; B. 954; G. 196, Rem. 3. 10. Colentem. For this use of the present participle and for the meaning of facit, see p. 6, line 13, note. Cf. Homer: Odyss. XXIV. 226. 15. Consitiones, insitiones, i. e. the various methods of planting and grafting. Som.

Chap. XVI. 17. Possum, I could. That which might yet happen, and its character, are expressed without a condition by the present indicative. M. 348, c, Obs. in fin.; H. 475, 4; A. & S. 259, Rem. 4, (2). 20. Provectus sum, I am carried away with delight. 22. Hac, i. e. such as I have been describing. M'. Curius. See p. 10, line 37, note. 27. Disciplinam, the customs. 31. Poteratne — senectutem, a question equivalent to a negative assertion in which non poterat non = necesse est. Must not so exalted a spirit, of necessity, make old age happy? 33. In agris, farmers. 34. L. Quinctio Cincinnato, appointed dictator the second time B. C. 439, at the age of eighty, that he might oppose Sp. Maelius. 37. Regnum, i. e. to become king — the false accusation of the patricians who hated him for his liberality to the plebeians. On refusing to appear before the tribunal of the dictator and taking refuge among the crowd, he was pursued and murdered by Abala. Occupatum interemit, anticipated and slew. The participle is put for a coördinate clause. H. 579; A. 72, 1. 39. Viatores, the attendants of such magistrates as had the right of making arrests, and the executors of their commands; at first and chiefly employed as messengers and summoners. Dict. Antiqu. sub voce. 3. Haud scio an. H. 526, II. 2, 2); A. & S. 198, 11, R. 25 (s.); B. 1188; G. 245, 4, R.; Z. 721. Cf. p. 30, line 21, and p. 41, line 35. Nulla, sc. senectus. 4. Officio, the sphere of activity.

Page

25 6. Saturitate, sufficiency (subjective); copia, abundance (objective), Sh. 8. Ut — redeamus repeats the sentiment expressed in line 14 et seq., p. 21. 11. Villa. The villa rustica or farm-house had two courts, opening into the first or outer one of which were the cella vinaria and cella olaria, near the kitchen and on the ground floor. The villa urbana or country-seat closely resembled the domus of the city in its interior. Sometimes the two kinds of villae were united in the same range of buildings. Becker's Gallus, p. 58. 13. Succidiam, because a supply can be as quickly and as readily obtained from it at any time. 14. Supervacaneis, the reading of all the recent critical editions, instead of the genitive supervacanei. 15. Operis, abl. of means; i. e. inasmuch as these employments (aucupium and venatio) are engaged in not from necessity but of choice, as amusements, they give an additional zest to farm-life. 17. Brevi praecidam. See Lex. sub Praecido, II. 19. Fruendum. For the construction see H. 562, 4; A. & S. 275, II., Rem. 1; B. 1325; G. 218, R. 4. 20. Ubi melius, sc. than on the farm. 21. Aut denotes an opposition or real difference, and excludes the alternative; vel gives a choice or implies a difference in the expression only. Arn. A. 43, 3; H. 587, II. 2; M. 436; A. & S. 198, II. 2, Rem. (a). 22. Ve for vel is appended as an enclitic, and generally connects single words. 23. Sibi igitur habeant, the reading of one MS., while four have Sibi habeant igitur, and two, with O. and Lr., Habeant igitur sibi. Madvig's rule (471) is: Igitur is usually put after one or two words, or even last, after several words that are closely connected. Yet it is also put first — in some writers more frequently than others. Habeant, sc. the young. Arma, etc., i. e. the various kinds of exercise practised for health before the daily bath, and in preparation for military service. 24. Clavam, the foil or staff used instead of a sword, in a sham-fight with the palus, a post fixed in the ground and attacked as if a living adversary. This game, originally a part of the drill of raw recruits, was also common among civilians. Becker's Gallus, p. 398, et seqq. 25. Talos et tesseras, different kinds of dice used in games of chance. See Diet. Antiqq. 26. Id ipsum refers to the preceding clause, and is an accusative of specification. Utrum libebit, i. e. either concede to the aged the games of dice or not. Lr.

Chap. XVII. 32. Regale, worthy of a king. D. sub Regius. 33. In eo libro, sc. in ch. iv. 20 et seqq., of which Cicero gives here a free version, perhaps from memory. 34. Loquitur cum, i. e. is 25 represented as saying in conversation with. Cyrum minorem, the second son of Darius Nothus king of Persia, satrap of Lydia, Phrygia, and Cappadocia, killed at the battle of Cunaxa on his expedition against Babylon to dethrone his brother Artaxerxes, the account of which is given in Xenophon's Anabasis. 35. Regem, prince of the royal family. 36. Lysander, appointed commander of the Spartan fleet in B. C. 497, near the close of the Peloponnesian war, and sent to the coast of Asia to strengthen the power of his country there against Athens. 37. Venisset, sc. in that year as envoy to Cyrus. Sardis. The ending is represents the Greek αις. H.

 98, 2. For the construction see H. 379; A. 55, III. 2; A. & S. 237;
 B. 938; G. 134. 39. Humanum differs from comem, as a principle from a disposition; hence the use of atque. Sh. See also D. sub Humanitas. Consaeptum agrum = the Greek παράδεισος, a park or pleasure garden. 2. Directos. So the MSS. and O.; and this 26 compound seems to suit the connection better than derectos, the reading of Br., and Lr., following Nonius. 3. Quincuncem, lit.
five unciae, the numerical representative of which was the letter V; here, trees arranged in oblique lines so as to give the appearance of a series of V's placed side by side. See Lex. sub voce.
Humum — puram has nothing corresponding to it in Xenophon.
 The original reads εὐγώνια δὲ πάντα καλῶς εἶη, all things were beauti- fully regular. Puram, cleared of stones, bushes, etc. Lex.
6. Dimensa, here passive. See p. 6, line 33, adepti, note. 7. Di- scripta. So Br., O., Lr., and Som., though most of the MSS. read descripta. The di points to the notion of distribution. Lr. The term in the original is διαράζαντος. See p. 7, line 8, note. 10. Pur- puram, purple robe; in the Greek τῶν τε ἱματίων τὸ κάλλος, the beauty of the clothing. Nitorem corporis, the sleekness of his per- son. The Greek is τῆς δσμῆς, the perfume. 11. Ornatum — gemmis.
 In the Greek, καὶ τῶν στρεπτῶν καὶ τῶν ψελλίων τὸ κάλλος, καὶ τοῦ ἄλλου κόσμου, and the beauty of the necklaces, and the bracelets, and the other ornaments. Auro and gemmis are ablatives of ebaractoristic. 16. Teneamus. H. 499; A. 65, III.; A. & S. 262, Rem.
 9; B. 1236; G. 338. 17. Corvinum. The reading of most MSS., Br., Lr., and Som. O. has Coreum. An able general in the first Samnite war, twice dictator, and consul the sixth time in B. C. 299; one of the most illustrious men in the history of the republic, and

Page

26 popular with all classes. 18. Perduxisse, sc. agri colendi studia. Cf. also Laelius, p. 46, line 38. Quum esset. A clause denoting reason. 19. Acta aetate, like the more usual exacta aetate, = senectute, aetate being here equivalent to bona aetate or the period of vigor; when he had already left behind the best years of his life. 20. Sex et quadraginta. As according to the Fasti Capitolini his first consulship was in B. C. 348, and his sixth in B. C. 299, the interval was really 49 years. Gernhard (quoted by Sh.) supposes that Cicero takes the number 46, in order to make the comparison as close as possible between the military age and that during which Corvinus was in high office. The explanation of Som. is that Cicero follows the chronology of Cato, who reckons each of the years 324, 309, and 301 B. C. as a part of the one next preceding, because there were no consuls in those years, the government being administered by a dictator. 21. Quantum spatium — fuit, i. e. he filled the offices of state as many years as our ancestors were wont to reckon from the birth of man to the beginning of old age. Som. 25. Apex. See Lex. sub voce, 5. 26. L. Caecilio Metello. See p. 15, line 20, note. 27. Atilio Calatino, the conqueror of Panormus and other towns in Sicily in the first Punic war, dictator and twice consul, held in high estimation by his own and subsequent ages. His tomb near the Porta Capena was one of those referred to by Cicero in the Tusc. Disp. I. 7. Elogium is derived from ἐλλόγιον by Düntzer, from eligere by Th. Mommsen. But G. Curtius, Fleckeisen, O., and Lr. believe it to be Latinized from ἐλεγίον, the second e being changed to o through the influence of the l (as in Ptolomaeus, oleum) and the penult shortened (as in Academia and balineum). It denotes, 1st, an adage in distichs, as in line 19, p. 30; 2d, because the distich was often employed in inscriptions, any inscription, especially upon a tomb, as in this passage. Lr. Unum hunc, the former reading of Orelli, restored by Br. following Fleckeisen. It is also the reading in Orelli's edition of the De Fin. II. 35, where the same quotation occurs; while Halm, Mg., Lr., and O. read Hunc unum, and Unicum has some MS. authority. 28. Primarium, of the highest worth. 29. Notum est carmen. So Br. and O. Cf. line 8, p. 11. Many of the MSS. and some editions insert totum either before carmen or before est, and Mommsen reads Notum est id totum carmen. Carmen here = elogium. See Lex. sub voce, 2, d. 30. Gravis, a man of great influence. Cujus esset, a causal clause. 31. Fama, opinion. See Lex. sub voce, II. Crassum. See p. 14, line 32, 26 note. It is the subject-accusative of esse understood, quem virum being the pred.-accus. 32. Lepidum, M. Aemilius Lepidus, pontifex maximus B. C. 180, ambassador to Egypt and to Philip III. of Macedon, and the recipient of many other honors; d. B. C. 152, at an advanced age. 33. Sacerdotio. H. 419, III.; A. 54, IV.; B. 920; A. & S. 244; G. 170, Rem 1. 34. Paulo, sc. Aemilio. See p. 10, line 36, note; Africano, p. 11, line 31, note. Ante, sc. in Chap. IV. 36. Honorata, equivalent to a conditional clause; if it be honored by public office, etc. H. 578, III.; A. 72, 1; A. & S. 274, 3; B. 1354; G. 461. 37. Praesertim asserts that what is said applies particularly to one case. Arn.; Z. 273.

Chap. XVIII. 39. Omni oratione, all this discourse. 2. Con- 27
stituta sit. See p. 6, line 2, note. 3. Miseram, sc. because if one's previous life had been what it ought to be, his old age would need no defence. 4. Defenderet, as a part of the infinitive clause which depends upon efficitur, would be regularly in the same tense as that verb, but is attracted into the imperfect, by the perfect-indefinite dixi. Its subject, quae, refers to talem, which is to be supplied with senectutem. 6. Auctoritatis is regarded by Som. as a genitive of specification (H. 396, V.), i. e. authority is the last fruit it receives. But Sh. explains extremos as one of those adjectives denoting order and succession, which are used in apposition with a noun instead of an adverb qualifying the verb; reaps the fruit of authority last. M. 300, b; H. 443; B. 663; A. & S. 205, Rem. 15. 7. Honorabilia, not found elsewhere in classic Latin. 8. Salutari, and the following infinitives, denote various manifestations of respect customary among the Romans: Salutari, the complimentary morning call upon patrons and distinguished citizens; appeti, the grasping of the hand in order to kiss it; decedi, the standing aside or making way for one on the streets; assurgi, the rising up on one's entrance into a public assembly; deduci, escorting from home in the morning, and reduci, back again at evening; consuli, asking advice on legal affairs. Decedi and assurgi being intransitive, are here impersonal, and have a dative seni dependent upon them understood. M. 244, b; A. & S. 223, Note; Z. 412. 10. Optime morata est, has the noblest character. 15. Quin etiam, Nay even. 16. Athenis. See p. 18, line 33, Tarenti, note. Ludis, sc. Panathenais. For the case see H. 426, 1; B. 949; A. & S. 253, Note 1; A. 55, I.; G. 192, a.

Page

- 27 17. Magno consessu. Abl. absolute. Som. 20. Certo in loco, i. e. the orchestra in which, in the Roman theatre, were the seats for the senators and other distinguished persons, such as foreign ambassadors. Dict. Antiqq. 21. Sessum. H. 569, 1; B. 1363; A. & S. 276, II., Rem. 1; A. 74, I.; G. 224. 22. Multiplex, reiterated. 25. Collegio, sc. augurali. The number of augurs in the time of Cato was nine. Sulla increased it to fifteen. Vacancies were filled by the college itself until B. C. 103, then by the people until B. C. 81, when Sulla restored this prerogative to the college. The people, however, held it again from 63 to 44 B. C. Prasclara, sc. customs or regulations. 26. Sententiae principatum tenet, has the prerogative of voting first. 27. Honore denotes all magisterial and priestly offices other than those culm imperio. 28. Imperio, a military and absolute power not incident to any office, but especially conferred by a lex curiata upon consuls, praetors, and dictators, exercised only out of the city, and without which no military operation could be conducted in the name of the state. Dict. Antiqq. 33. Corruisse, to have been broken down. 34. At introduces a new objection, the reply to which begins in the next line. See p. 12, line 16, note. Difficiles. See p. 8, line 2, note, and D. sub Austerus. 35. Quaerimus, sc. verum. Haec, sc. the abstract qualities implied in morosi, etc. 38. Illius used redundantly with quidem. This particle, when concessive with a predicate verb or adjective with sed following, has in the best writers a pronoun inserted before it, corresponding to the word of which the predicate is conceded. M. 489, b; Z. 744. Justae. See Lex. sub voce, II. C. 39. Contemni, regarded with indifference; despici, looked down upon; illudi, treated with contempt and ridicule; 28 a climax. 1. Quae, sc. morositas et ea vitia quae dixi (p. 27, line 36). 2. Dulciora, less disagreeable. Bonis. Regularly a word belonging at the same time to two or more connected words either precedes or follows them; but sometimes, as here, it stands after the first. Lr.; M. 472, a. 4. Adelphis, the title of one of the six comedies of P. Terentius Afer, whose life was within the first half of the second century B. C. 5. Sic refers to what precedes; just so it is in real life. 6. Natura. So most of the MSS., O., Lr., and Som. Several MSS. have instead, aetas naturae; while Br. reads aetas matura. 10. Quo minus, eo plus, as the less — so much the more. The ablative of a neuter pronoun or adjective is used with comparatives to denote the measure of difference indefinitely. M. 270, Obs. 1.

Chap. XIX. 13. Sollicitam habere differs from sollicitare in 28 that it expresses a permanent state. Z. 634. 16. In aetate. H. 426, 2; B. 951; A. 55, I. 1; G. 192. Viderit. See p. 7, line 38, note. 17. Si — animum. This belief was very prevalent among the Romans in Cicero's time. Sallust (Cat. LI. 20) represents Caesar as saying: In luctu atque miseriis mortem aerumnarum requiem, non cruciatum esse, eam cuncta mortalium mala dissolvere; ultra neque curas neque gaudio locum esse. Cf. Cic. in Cat. IV. 4. 19. Tertium nihil, i. e. nothing other than either annihilation or immortality. Cf. p. 30, line 28. 21. Futurus sum. For the mood, H. 511, I.; B. 1263; G. 379. 22. Quamquam introduces a correction of the statement at the beginning of the chapter that old age is nearer to death than any other time of life. Quamvis, however. Hence sit is potential subjunctive. H. 516, II. 2, and 486, III.; B. 1283; A. & S. 263, 2, (3). 23. Cui. H. 388, 1; B. 844 and 845; A. & S. 225, II.; G. 150. 25. Casus, liabilities. 26. Tristius, with more solicitude or concern, because with greater difficulty. 27. Quod refers to pauci — senectutem. If the number of aged persons was greater there would be more uprightness and wisdom in the world. 29. Nulli, sometimes used as here in apposition with the subject, in familiar speaking and writing, and in imitations of the same, instead of non, occasionally with an intensive signification. M. 455, Obs. 5. 30. Nullae omnino, etc. Cf. p. 12, line 8. 33. Optimo filio. See p. 10, line 37, note. Expectatis. See Lex. sub Expecto, II. 34. Fratribus, the two youngest sons of Aemilius Paulus, one of whom at the age of 12, died five days before, and the other at the age of 14, three days after their father's triumph over Perseus. 38. At. See p. 12, line 16, note. 39. Eo ablative of cause, conditione of characteristic. 1. Ille generally refers to 29 the former of two persons or things previously mentioned, hic to the latter; but often hic, as here, refers to that which is nearer in thought. M. 485, a. 5. Tartessiorum, inhabitants of a district in the extreme south of Spain, near the mouth of the Baetis, probably the Tarshish of Scripture. Scriptum, sc. in Herodotus, I. 163. 6. Arganthonius lived in the sixth century B. C. 10. Effluxit, has vanished. See Lex. sub voce, II. 2; p. 7, line 2; and cf. Cic. De Fin. II. 32. Tantum, only so much. 11. Consecutus sis. Potential subjunctive, in a subordinate clause. 16. Modo. See p. 12, line 30, note. 17. Plaudite, i. e. the end of the play, when it was the custom for the chief actor to invite the audience

Page

29 to give their applause. Cf. Hor., Ars Poet. 155. 19. Sin, if however. M. 442, b; Z. 342, Note. Processerit, so. aetate. 23. Significat, is an emblem of. Ostendit, gives promise of. 29. Senibus, dative depending upon secundum naturam understood, equivalent to the adjective naturale. It is also logically the subject of emori. H. 545, 2, 1); A. & S. 239, Rem. 1. 30. Adversante — natura, abl. abs. of concession. H. 578, IV.; A. & S. 274, 3; B. 1350; G. 461. 34. Consumptus, spent. 35. Quasi more frequently introduces a subjunctive clause of condition, and is very rarely used, as here, in the sense of quemadmodum. M. 444, a, Obs. 1. Cf. Laelius, p. 55, line 21. Lr. regards this as one of the archaisms which Cicero uses here and there purposely as suited to the speaker Cato. 36. Matura et cocta. Hendiadys; ripened by the sun. Som. 37. Vis, violence. 39. Accedam. See p. 16, line 21, adsit, note. Aliquando involves the idea of something longed for; at length. See Lex. sub voce, 2, f.

30 Chap. XX. 2. Munus officii, the duty of your office, i. e. the service or function which your business or station makes incumbent upon you. See p. 15, line 7, note. 3. Possis. See p. 29, line 11, note. Mortemque contemnere, bracketed by Br., O., and Lr.; considered an interpolation by Mg. and others. It is, however, the reading of one of the best MSS., and most of the others have the words mortem and contemnere while otherwise varying the reading. Contemnere, not fear. D. sub Spernere. 4. Animosior, more spirited. 5. Pisistrato, the tyrant of Athens, who lived in the fifth century, an intimate friend of Solon, and the institutor of the Panathenaea. According to Plutarch (Solon, ch. 31) Solon made this reply, not to Pisistratus, but to many who inquired. 6. Quaerenti, concisely for a temporal clause, on the occasion of his asking. H. 578, I.; A. 72, 1; B. 1351; A. & S. 274, 3; G. 459. 7. Audaciter, archaic form for audacter. 9. Certis, reliable or unimpaired. Abl. abs. of time. 15. Reliquum, here, as elsewhere, used substantively, with an attributive modifier. Cf. Cic. Verr. Act. Sec. III. ch. 43, ex omni reliquo. 17. Vetatque Pythagoras. In Plato's Phaedo, ch. 6, the same sentiment is expressed by Socrates. Cf. also Cic. Tusc. Disp. I. 30, 74: Vetat enim dominans ille in nobis deus injussu hinc nos suo demigrare. 18. Praesidio et statione, watch-post as of a sentinel or guard on duty. Hendiadys. 19. Sapientis, Solon's title as one of the seven sages; and in this sense it is often used substantively. Elogium.

The reading of most of the MSS., O., Lr., Som., and Fleckeisen 30 (Neue Jahrb. 1866), and of all the texts in line 27, p. 26. Br., following Matth. Gesner and F. A. Wolf, reads elegium. The distich of Solon is given by Lr. from Schneidewin's Delectus, as follows:

Μηδέ μοι ἄκλαυτος θάνατος μέλοι, ἀλλὰ φίλοισι
Καλλίστοιμι θανὼν ἄλγεα καὶ στοναχάς.

And Cicero, in the Tusc. Disp. I. 49, 117, has rendered these lines in the following couplet:

*Mors mea ne careat lacrimis; linquamus amicis
Maerorem, ut celebrent funera cum gemitu.*

Suam, emphatic, in opposition to the sentiment of Mimnermus, which Solon combats, Lr. 23. Lacrumis. The reading of Br., and O. Most of the MSS. have lacrimis, and Bergk, Fleckeisen, Lr., and Som., dacrumis. Dacruma is from the root DAKR, and, as the older form of lacruma (corresponding to δάκρυ and the Gothic tagr, a "tear") was used by Livius Andronicus, according to Festus, and probably, as Bergk suggests, by Ennius in these lines. The argument from alliteration seems irresistible. Peile, Introd. to Greek and Latin Etymology. 24. Faxit. Present subjunctive from the old future indicative, faxo, which was formed by dropping i from the stem faci, and affixing the ending so. (Cf. the Greek σω.) M. 115, f. Cicero, in the Tusc. Disp. I. 15, 34, quotes also the rest of the second line as follows: Cur? Volito vivos per ora virum. The couplet is thus translated in Diet. Biog. art. Ennius:

Pour not the wall of mourning o'er my bier,
Nor pay to me the tribute of a tear:
Still, still I live! from mouth to mouth I fly!
Never forgotten, never shall I die!

26. Moriendi, not mortis, for the reference is to the act or process of dying. Lr. Aliquis. See p. 20, line 23, note. 27. Praesertim seni, explained by line 14, above. 29. Meditatum, passive. See p. 6, line 33, adepti, note. Ab, from, i. e. through all the remainder of life. Lr.; Z. 304, a; Lex. sub voce, B, 2. 32. Incertum an. See p. 25, line 3, note. 33. Timens. See p. 26, line 36, note. Qui. See p. 6, line 36, note. Animo consistere, be steadfast in mind, i. e. attain and preserve tranquillity of

Page.

30 mind. Som. H. 429; B. 890; A. 54, I.; A. & S. 250; G. 194.

34. Non ita, not very. Arn. 35. Recorder, which is regularly followed by the ablative of the person with de and by the accusative of the thing (e. g. p. 9, line 34), here takes, first, several accusatives of the person and then an infinitive clause. H. 407; B. 790; G. 172, Rem. 2; A. & S. 216, Rem. 1, (b). Brutum, according to the legend, slain in single combat with Aruns, the son of Tarquinius Superbus. 36. Duos Decios, father and son. See p. 20, line 10, note. 38. Atilium, sc. Regulum, the hero of the first Punic war. Nothing further than the fact of his being taken prisoner is known with certainty as to the end of Regulus. Even his mission to Rome is very imperfectly attested. Mom. For the commonly received story here referred to, see Class. Dict. 1. Duos Scipiones, the father and the uncle of Africanus Major. See p. 15, line 8, note. 3. L. Paulum. See p. 15, line 9, note. 4. Luit, the reading of the MSS., O., Lr., Som., and Mg.; while Br. has eluit. Both Andrews's and Klotz's Lexicons give to the former the meanings to wash, to cleanse, to atone for. 5. Marcellum, the conqueror of Syracuse, and one of the principal generals against Hannibal in Southern Italy, until he was killed in battle B. C. 208. A brave, though rude and stern soldier, and destitute of the wisdom of a great commander, he was called the sword as Fabius was the shield of Rome in the second Punic war. Crudelissimus hostis. Laying aside wretched inventions which furnish their own refutation, nothing occurs in the accounts regarding him which may not be justified in the circumstances and according to the international law of the times. Mom. 7. Quod scripsi, etc. Cf. Cic. Tusc. Disp. I. 42, 101. Sed quid duces et principes nominem, quum legiones scribat Cato saepe alacres in eum locum profectas, unde redituras se non arbitrarentur? 8. Animo, ablat. of manner. See p. 7, line 14, note. Erecto, resolute. 18. Extrema, latest. 19. Occidunt, cease to interest.

Chap. XXI. 23. Cernere, est rem aliquam ejusque singulas notas perspicere et dijudicare (discernere). Kühner. Cf. Cic. Pro. Mil. XXIX. 79: Ut ea cernimus, quae videmus; also Tusc. Disp. I. 20, 46: Nos enim ne nunc quidem oculis cernimus ea, quae videmus. 25. Vestros patres. The elder Laelius was through life an intimate friend of Africanus Major, and throughout the war in Spain, Sicily, and Africa was his confidential legatus. In the invasion of Africa he had charge of the fleet, and at the battle of Zama he commanded the Italian cavalry. Besides his brilliant military career, he was distinguished and influential in civil life. Tu, Scipio, tuque, Laeli. Other editors read P. Scipio tuque C. Laeli, and refer to De Amicit., p. 66, line 19. But Br. remarks that Cato never prefixes the praenomen in addressing Scipio and Laelius, though we should expect here tuum Scipio, tuumque Laeli. 32. Contrarium, not congenial. 34. Tuerentur = intuerentur, an archaic and poetic meaning of the word. Cf. De Nat. Deor. II. 14, 37: Ipse autem homo ortus est ad mundum contemplantum et imitandum. For the mood see p. 9, line 30, discerem, note. Caelestium, neuter. 35. Vitae modo atque constantia, a life of moderation, and regulated by firm principle. Som. 36. Ratio ac disputatio, antithetic to nobilitas et auctoritas, (the well-known authority.) Both phrases are instances of hendiadys. 39. Incolas paene nostros, almost countrymen of ours. Pythagoras resided at Crotona, in Southern Italy, the latter part of his life, and his doctrines became so widely prevalent there that his followers were called the Italic School. Essent nominati. See p. 6, line 35, putavissent, note. 1. Universa mente divina, the world-soul. 32. Delibatos, which were portions of. Cf. Tusc. Disp. V. 13, 38: Humanus autem animus decerptus ex mente divina; and De Nat. Deor. I. 11, 27: qui [Pythagoras] censuit animum esse per naturam rerum omnem intentum et commeantem, ex quo nostri animi carperentur. 2. Quae — disseruisset, sc. as reported in the Phaedo of Plato; a subjunctive clause, because the sentiment of another than the speaker. 4. Esset judicatus, subjunctive by attraction. 5. Quid multa. See p. 9, line 31, note. 7. Prudentia, foresight. See Lex. sub voce, I. 8. Tot artes [tantae scientiae]. O., and Lr. read without brackets. Some editors regard tantae scientiae as in the nominative plural, such profound sciences; and Andrews' and Klotz's Lexicons assign to scientia a plural, citing this passage but no others. But Lr. remarks that the plural of scientia does not occur in good Latin. It is therefore, here, in the genitive singular depending upon artes; = so many arts which require so great learning. 10. Agitetur, is in a state of activity; ἀκίνητος, in Plato, Phaedrus, ch. 24. Principium, i. e. exterior to itself. 13. Esset, haberet, the imperfect tense, because persuasi, on which the infinitive clause depends, is here treated as a perfect infinitive. H. 482, 1; B. 1171; A. & S. 258, I., Rem. 2; G. 296, Rem. 2.

Page

32 Som. remarks that instances of such a change as this from the present in one clause to the imperfect in a second, and back again to the present in a third, occur in Cicero, only when the views of authors are referred to whose lives belonged to the past, but whose writings to the present. Cf. Laelius, p. 50, line 14 et seqq., and De Nat. Deor. I. 15, 40. 16. Interire represents death as a vanishing, and applies more to the soul; perire, as destruction, and applies more to the body. D. sub Mors. 17. Homines — nati sint, i. e. that the soul has existed before birth, and that it is therefore imperishable. Those ancients who believed in the immortality of the soul believed also in its pre-existence, so that to their minds what proved the latter proved also the former. The clause introduced by quod is the subject of esse in the preceding line. H. 554, IV.; A. 70; A. & S. 273, 5, Rem. 20. Reminisci denotes a momentary act; recordari, one of some duration, and expresses the consequence of reminisci; call to mind and contemplate when recalled. D. sub Meminisse. For the sentiment cf. Wordsworth, Ode. Intimations of Immortality:

“Our birth is but a sleep and a forgetting:
The soul that rises with us, our life's star,
Hath elsewhere had its setting,
And cometh from afar:
Not in entire forgetfulness,
And not in utter nakedness,
But trailing clouds of glory, do we come
From God, who is our home.”

Hæc Platonis fere. These are the principal arguments of Plato. Chase. They are contained in the Phaedrus and the Meno. Cf. Tusc. Disp. I. 23–29; Somn. Scip. 8 and 9. See also Introduction.

Chap. XXII. 22. Apud Xenophontem, sc. in the Cyropaedia, VIII. 7, 17 et seqq. As the whole work is an historical romance, the dying speech of Cyrus, of a part of which Cicero here gives a free version, is of course to be understood as only the expression of Xenophon's own views. Cyrus major. See p. 15, line 16, note. 23. Nolite arbitrari. H. 538, 2; B. 1114; A. 58, III.; A. & S. 267, Rem. 1, Note; G. 65. 24. Nullum fore, shall not exist at all. See p. 28, line 29, note. 27. Eundem esse. The emphatic word is esse; I still exist. Som. 28. Nec vero, etc., i. e. The fame of illustrious men would not continue, if their own spirits 32 did not exercise an influence upon men after death. Som. 30. Sui, as the connection shows, refers not to the subject of its own clause, but to the persons* to whom the subject of the principal clause refers. M. 490, c, Obs. 1 and 2. Generally, in a subordinate clause expressing the sentiment of the principal subject, it refers to that subject. 34. Insipientem, without consciousness. Som. In Xenophon ἀφρων. 35. With sed an affirmative clause is to be supplied from the negative one in line 31. 36. Esse sapientem, had real discernment; in the Greek, φρονιμώτατον. 38. Rerum finis quaeque. 40. Discedit So Br., O., and Lr., and the original is οὐτ' ἀπιοῖσα. The readings of some MSS. are discessit and discesserit. 2. Atqui. See p. 7, line 15, note. 3. Remissi, released. 33 4. Futuri sint, they are destined to be. 6. Sic—deum. The Greek reads as follows: τὴν ἐμὴν ψυχὴν καταιδούμενοι ποιεῖτε ἃ ἐγὼ λέγω. Perhaps instead of the last words Cicero had before him an incorrect reading. Lr. Colitote may be used for demonstrations of reverence toward either gods or men; venerari, toward the former only, observare toward the latter only. D. sub Vereri. 7. Sin, if on the other hand, M. 442, b; Z. 342. Est interiturus. This periphrastic conjugation in the case of transitive verbs expresses an intended action, in the case of intransitive verbs as here, a state or condition which is to come to pass. Z. 498; M. 341, Obs. 8. Hanc—pulchritudinem, this beautiful universe. 9. Memoriam, etc. This is quite unlike the original: μήποτε ἀρεβίς μὴδὲν μὴδὲ ἀνδρῶν μήτε ποιήσῃτε μήτε βουλεύσῃτε. Pie, inviolateque, affectionately and sacredly. Servabitis. For the mood, H. 535, 3, 2); B. 1116; A. & S. 267, Rem. 2; G. 66, 1.

Chap. XXIII. 11. Nostra; instances of this belief among our own countrymen. Som. 13. Patrem aut patrum. See p. 15, line 8, note. 15. Esse conatos, by exception for esse conaturos. H. 532, 2, 2), second paragraph. 17. Posteritatem ad se pertinere, that subsequent ages had some connection with themselves. Som. An-censes. A common form of direct question with an is when, in an argument, the speaker asks whether some absurd supposition (the opposite of what he is maintaining) is true. Arn. An stands not only in the second member of a disjunctive question, but also in such simple questions as are used to complete and emphasize what immediately precedes. M. 453. 20. Si isidem—terminaturus, if my fame were to end with my life.

Page

- 33 23. Nescio quomodo, somehow; a parenthetic clause, and so without influence upon the mood of the following verb. M. 356, Obs. 3; Z. 553. 24. Erigens, aspiring. 27. Ut—essent, a clause of result in apposition with quod which stands in the stead of a demonstrative or a noun. H. 495, 3; B. 1224; G. 340, 4. Haud. See p. 5, line 6, haud, note. 28. Cujusque. See p. 20, line 17, note. The superlative with quisque is frequently in relation to another, (here maxime), which is joined with the verb, whereby the reciprocal comparison is distinctly expressed. Z. 710, b. Immortalitatis gloriam, i. e. a fame which belongs to immortality, therefore everlasting fame. Kühner. 29. Quid, quod. See p. 14, line 10, note. Aequissimo animo, tranquillity. 30. Iniquissimo, with the greatest disquiet. 31. Qui cernat, i. e. such a mind as perceives. See p. 6, line 2, note. 32. Meliora, a better condition or world. Som. 33. Efferor. See Lex. sub voce, II. 2. 34. Videndi, the gerund, which is much less common in the genitive, in Cicero, than the gerundive, except when the object is a neuter pronoun or adjective. M. 413, Obs. 1. 37. Ipse conscripsi, sc. in the Origines. 38. Retraxerit. See p. 8, line 5, note; G. 54. Peliam, king of Iolcos, cut to pieces and boiled by his own daughters, who had been told by Medea that in this way they might restore him to vigor and youth. Contrary to the common account, Plautus (Pseudolus, Act III., Scene 2, 80) represents Medea as actually restoring him to life and youth. Cicero may have confounded him with his half-brother, who, according to Ovid, was made
- 34 young again by Medea. 2. Carceres, the stalls at the entrance of the Circus, where the chariots were stationed before the race, the starting-place; i. e. to begin life anew. 3. Calce, the goal. See Lex. sub voce, 3. 4. Sed habeat sane. But grant indeed that it has advantages. Chase. It is a concessive clause with the concessive particle omitted. H. 516, II. 1; A. & S. 260, II. Rem. 3; A. 60, 4; G. 59. 6. Quod—fecerunt. Cf. Tusc. Disp. I. xxxiv. 83, and 84. 8. Vixi. For the mood, H. 520, I.; B. 1250; A. & S. 266, 3, in fin.; G. 323. 10. Commorandi, for a temporary abode. Devorsorium. The reading of some of the MSS.; while others have divorsorium, and O., diversorium; a lodging-place, to which one turns off from the road. It is a general term for any place at which a traveller is accommodated with temporary board and lodging. R. 11. Habitandi, a permanent residence. It depends on some general word implied in devorsorium. 15. Cato

nem meum. See p. 10, line 37, note. 16. Pietate, filial affection. 34
17. Quod contra. For the position of the preposition see M. 469, Obs. 1; H. 602, II. 1; A. & S. 279, 10, f.; Z. 324. 18. Ab illo meum, sc. cremari. 21. Non quo — ferrem, not that I bore it without emotion. H. 520, II. 3; B. 1256; A. 63, I., second paragraph; A. & S. 262, Rem. 9; G. 326. 24. His rebus, i. e. those which prove the immortality of the soul. Id — dixisti, sc. at the beginning of Chapter II. 27. Credam. See p. 7, line 38, note.
29. Sin. See p. 33, line 7, note. Mortuus, equivalent to a subordinate clause of time. 30. Minuti. See Lex. sub voce, II. Nihil sentiam, I shall be unconscious. 33. Suo tempore, at the fitting time. See p. 16, line 28, note. 34. Modum, a proper limit. Chase.
35. Peractio, the last act. This word does not occur elsewhere;
 instead of it Cicero uses the verb peragere. Cujus, in which, refers to peractio. Som. 38. Quae dicerem, to say; a relative clause of result. 39. Re experti, from your own experience.

NOTES

TO THE

DE AMICITIA.

INTRODUCTION.

THE treatise DE AMICITIA, which was written at the request of Titus Pomponius Atticus, is addressed to him with peculiar fitness because of his life-long and confidential intimacy with Cicero, of which mention has been made in the account of the life of Atticus on page 72.

It was issued later than the De Senectute, (see p. 36, line 10, and p. 71,) but earlier than the De Officiis (II. 9,) which was begun in September (probably), and at any rate finished before the ninth of December, 44 B. C.

The reason for the peculiar form into which this essay as well as the De Senectute is cast, the occasion, time, and place of the introductory dialogue, and the names of the interlocutors, are given in the first chapter.

As the work was composed in a time of civil dissensions, and was designed in part to show the relation of friendship to the welfare of the State, the scene of the discussion was very appropriately laid in an age somewhat similar — in the very midst of the Gracchan revolution.

The Agrarian laws of Tib. Gracchus were just and beneficial in themselves, and in the view of the wisest statesmen of the time were essential to the welfare of the State. Yet they so deeply affected individual interests and class privileges, that they were advocated and opposed with a strength of passion which at length became reckless and ungovernable. Unconstitutional means were used to secure the passage of the popular laws, and they were executed in the most arbitrary way. Partisans of the aristocracy lawlessly assaulted and murdered the popular leader, with hundreds of his adherents; and, by a law transferring the judicial powers of the Triumviri to the consuls, all further division of the public lands was afterwards stopped. In this deadly conflict in which the two factions had become involved, the champions on both sides, as in almost every reform movement before in the history of the nation, were connected with the nobility. There were thus inevitably mingled with the civil strife, family quarrels, alienations of friends, and the bitterest personal animosities.

This dark back-ground of discord made all the more conspicuous the friendship of two men who were among the most eminent in a century remarkable in Roman history for its great characters. For the chief personage in a discussion upon this subject, therefore, no selection could have been more appropriate than that of CAIUS LAELIUS SAPIENS. He was the son of a man influential in civil life and a brilliant officer in the second contest with Carthage, and was born about 186 B. C. Of ability in war, as his campaign against Viriathus proved, Laelius was more noted as a statesman of moderation and conservative views, and was most of all distinguished as a scholar and a patron of learning. His studies in philosophy were guided and stimulated by Panaetius, who was afterwards at the head of the Stoic school, at Athens. His literary accomplishments, "his polished eloquence better adapted for the deliberative assembly than for the tumults of the forum," and his wisdom fitted him to be the model and the representative of the best culture of his day. For his social traits and genial temper he was also noted. Cicero applies to him the phrases, multa hilaritas, praeclara aequabilitas in omni vita, et idem semper vultus eademque frons; and he asks: Quis C. Laelio comior? quis jucundior?

Foremost among the numerous friends whom these attractive qualities drew into companionship with him, was SCIPIO AFRICANUS MINOR, a man of about the same age (B. 185 B. C.). The son of that Aemilius Paulus who reduced Macedonia to a Roman province and was the most illustrious member of his family, he was adopted by his cousin, a son of Africanus Major, and received the name of Scipio Aemilianus. Distinguishing himself by his courage and skill when military tribune in Spain and at the opening of the third Punic war, he was elected consul in 147 B. C., before the legal age, and ended that war the next year by the destruction of Carthage. In 133 B. C. he was equally successful against Numantia, and was thenceforth called Numantinus. Though inferior to his great namesake, his generalship, his patriotism, his discretion and independence as a statesman, gave him a similar position in his own generation. "The history of Rome," says Mommsen, "presents various men of greater genius than Scipio Aemilianus, but none equalling him in moral purity, in the utter absence of political selfishness, and in generous love of country."

It was in part the unity of their views in politics that brought him into intimacy with Laelius. Scipio, in his censorship, B. C. 142, followed in the footsteps of Cato, and sought to repress the growing luxury and immorality, to uphold the ancient customs, and to check the appetite for foreign conquest. In 139 B. C., he incurred the displeasure of the Optimates by supporting the Casian law which introduced the ballot. Several years before the tribuneship of Gracchus, he, in conjunction with Laelius, had entertained the idea of a distribution of the public lands among the poorer classes, but abandoned the scheme as impracticable. For a time afterward they with their associates occupied middle ground between the aristocracy and the masses, and protected the reform movement. "To Scipio quite as much as to the author of the Sempronian laws," is the opinion of Mommsen, "were the citizens indebted for nearly 80,000 new farm-allotments." But when, in their judgment, the life of the State was endangered by the continuance of this movement, they became its firm and fearless opponents. It was chiefly through their united influence that the Papirian bill, allowing the re-election of tribunes, was defeated in 130 B. C., and that the judicial power of the Triumviri, which was then beginning to affect seriously the interests of the allied communities of Latins and Italians, was, in the year following (B. C. 129), transferred to the consuls. Scipio advocated this measure in a speech before the Senate, which called forth enthusiastic demonstrations of respect from that body and from the allies, but which so exasperated some of the opposite faction that he was assassinated on the night following, "in his quiet chamber dying for Rome, no less than if he had fallen before the walls of Carthage."

But these men were still more closely connected in literary pursuits. Scipio from the early age of eighteen was an earnest student of Greek literature and philosophy, and had the benefit of the instructions and counsels of the Greek historian Polybius, who became a member of his family and accompanied him in all his campaigns. He was celebrated also for his eloquence. Quintilian mentions as the most eminent orators of the period in which they lived, the Laelii, Africani, Caton, and Gracchi. Cicero in his Brutus asserts that Scipio surpassed all his contemporaries, except Laelius, in eloquence not less than in learning and wisdom. And Mommsen, indorsing the sentiment of the ancient critics, styles the speeches of Scipio and Laelius "master-pieces of model prose as well as expressions of the noblest patriotism."

With such abilities and such tastes Scipio became a congenial associate of Laelius in efforts for the improvement of the national language, and for the intellectual culture of their fellow-citizens, as well as in their own favorite studies. United with them in a love of learning, in scholarly attainments, and in oratorical excellence, were many men of high character and position in the State, such as the consul L. Furius Philus; Fabius Maximus, the older brother of Scipio and the adopted son of Fabius Cunctator; Sulpicius Galus, an eminent astronomer as well as orator and Greek scholar; M'. Munilius, a jurist; P. Rupilius, and others who are enumerated in the last chapter of the essay. Among the younger members of this group of scholars were Laelia, the daughter of Laelius, "celebrated for the purity with which she spoke her native language, and whose conversation gave the tone to the polished society of her age;" her husband, Q. Mucius Scaevola, the augur, an eminent jurist and the teacher of Cicero; and C. Fannius Strabo, the other son-in-law of Laelius, who had served under Scipio in the last war against Carthage, and with Tib. Gracchus had been the first to scale its walls, and who was also the author of a history of his own times.

With these coadjutors Scipio and Laelius led the way also in the patronage of the most talented authors of their day. Among their familiar acquaintances, mingling in their society, sharing their hospitality, and often befriended by them, were Pacuvius, one of the two geniuses of that age in tragedy; the comic poet Terence, "whose wit and idiom were pointed and polished by their conversation," and whose plays, inferior in purity of diction to no later classic productions except those of Caesar and Cicero, were for this reason imputed by many to Laelius; Lucilius, the earliest of the four Satirists and the equal of his successors in the keenness and severity of his assaults upon the vices and follies of the hour;

Caelius Antipater, who dedicated to Laelius his history of the second Punic war; and Sp. Mummius, a writer of ethical epistles like those of Horace. "In this select circle," says Max. Müller, "the master works of Greek literature were read and criticised, the problems of Greek philosophy were discussed, and the highest interests of human life became the subject of thoughtful conversation. It exercised a most powerful influence on the progress of Roman literature. It formed a tribunal of good taste; and much of the correctness, simplicity, and manliness of the classical Latin is due to that 'Cosmopolitan Club,' which met under the hospitable roof of the Scipios."

According to the representations of Horace, and of Cicero in this work (Chapters iv. and xxvii.) and elsewhere, the relations of Scipio and Laelius to each other were in all respects of the most intimate and confidential kind. They were companions in travel as well as in war, in their simple sports and recreations at Caieta and Laurentum, as well as in graver employments at Rome. One in their sympathies and in their views on all subjects through life, it was not strange that their mutual attachment should have become even more memorable than that which had bound together the father of Laelius and the elder Africanus.

The event which so suddenly sundered this friendship, Cicero represents to have been the subject of conversation between Laelius and his sons-in-law a few days after its occurrence; and he here reproduces from memory the discourse which Laelius, at their request, delivered on that occasion, as it had been reported to him by Scaevola, the augur, his teacher. -

Chapters ii.-iv. contain the introductory conversation, in which Fannius and Scaevola report to their father-in-law the inquiry of many how he bears the death of Scipio. Laelius replies that although deeply moved by this affliction, he is consoled by the recollection of the virtues and the illustrious career of his friend, by the belief that death was no evil to him, and by the remembrance of their friendship.

Chapters v.-xxvii. contain the discourse of Laelius, which may be divided as follows:

I. Chh. v.-ix. The nature, worth, and origin of friendship. It is an entire agreement on all subjects, human and divine, united with affection; with the exception of wisdom, it is the most valuable gift to man from the gods; and it does not spring from any selfish consideration, but from a natural impulse to love awakened toward another by a perception of real worth in him.

II. Chh. x. – xx. Concerning the friendships of the wise.

1st. The dangers which threaten the permanence of friendship. 2d. (Chh. xi. – xvi.) The true limits of the claims of friendship. Only what is honorable should be asked or done; advice should be frankly given and faithfully heeded; and the services rendered should not be less than our abilities. 3d. The importance of proving the character of men before entering into friendship with them. 4th. The duty of never abandoning old friendships for new ones, and of treating friends, inferior to ourselves in any respect, as equals.

III. Chh. xxi. – xxvi. Concerning ordinary friendships, (amicitiæ vulgares, communes, leves.)

1st. The duty of sometimes severing friendships, and the manner in which this should be done. 2d. Genuine friendship universally believed to be indispensable to happiness; but attainable only by those who are themselves good, and who seek it among the good. 3d. Frankness and a kindly disposition in administering, and meekness in receiving rebukes, indispensable to friendship; flattery and servility incompatible with it.

Conclusion. Ch. xxvii. The impossibility of genuine friendship without virtue; and with the exception of virtue, friendship the highest good.

Page

Chap. I. 1. Q. Mucius, sc. Scaevola. See Introduction, p. 35
125. He was praetor and governor of Asia in 121 B. C., and consul in 117 B. C., and was active in his profession until his death, which occurred later than the year 88 B. C. Augur. It was the function of the augurs as interpreters of the science of augury to declare whether the auspices, which revealed not what was to happen, but what the State should or should not do, were valid or not; so that they had in reality a veto upon all public business. Their office, which was for life, was therefore one of the highest in the State, and was sought and usually filled by the most eminent statesmen. 2. Jucunde, in an agreeable manner. Dubitare, signifying to hesitate and followed by a clause containing the same subject, generally takes the infinitive, as here, though the subjunctive with quin sometimes occurs even in Cicero.

Page

35 M. 375, c, Obs. 2. 3. Omni, every. Appellare sapientem, i. e. to give him the title of Sapient or the Wise. See p. 7, line 5, note, and of. p. 36, line 37 et seqq. 4. Autem, the weakest of the adversative particles, only adds something different from what precedes, and sometimes serves to introduce an explanatory parenthesis; = now. M. 437, b. Ita, i. e. with the intent or design. St. Lr. considers it equivalent to so entirely. Deductus, placed under the tuition of, for a broader practical training, according to the custom of the time. Cf. Tac. Dial. de Orat. xxxiv.: Apud majores nostros juvenis ille, qui foro et eloquentiae parabatur, . . . deducebatur a patre vel a propinquis ad eum oratorem qui principem in civitate locum obtinebat. Hunc sectari, hunc prosequi, hujus omnibus dictionibus interesse, sive in judiciis sive in contionibus, assuescebat, etc. 5. Quoad — liceret, as far as I myself might be able, and it might be allowed me, sc. per Scaevolam. 7. Breviter et commodè dicta, i. e. short, pithy sayings, apothegms. N. 8. Prudentia, the practical wisdom of the statesman. 9. Quo mortuo, a participle for a temporal clause. See p. 30, line 6, note. Pontificem, lit. bridge-builder or constructor of ways. The pontifices formed one of the two original colleges of men skilled in religious lore, and derived their name from their function, as sacred as it was politically important, of conducting the building and demolition of the bridge over the Tiber. They were the Roman engineers, who understood the mystery of measures and numbers whence there devolved upon them also the duties of managing the calendar and of seeing that every religious and judicial act took place on the right day. Thus they acquired the general oversight of Roman worship, and of everything connected with it. Mom. The number of pontifices (including the pontifex maximus) was originally five. In B. C. 300 it was increased to nine, and in B. C. 81 to fifteen. They held their office for life. Vacancies were filled by the college itself until B. C. 104, then by the people until B. C. 81, when Sulla restored this prerogative to the college. The people, however, exercised it again from B. C. 63 to 44. Q. Mucium Scaevolam, a relative and perhaps nephew of the Augur mentioned above. He was consul B. C. 95, a popular and able governor of Asia, and was proscribed and killed by the Marians, B. C. 82. Cicero, in the De Orat. (I. 39), calls him the most eloquent of jurists and the most learned jurist among orators. He was the first jurist who wrote a systematic treatise on the Jus civile. The purity of his moral character, his exalted ideas of equity, and his abilities place him among the first of the illustrious men of all ages and countries. Dict. Biog. 10. Unum, used with the superlative praestantissimum, to express more strongly its exclusive signification. M. 310, Obs. 2. 12. Alias, sc. dicam. 13. Multa, the object of a transitive verb implied in sermonem incidere; a case of anacoluthia. It resumes the thought in multa narrare de C. Luelio solebat in the first sentence. Tum introduces a clause more important than that introduced by quum; but especially, or more particularly. Z. 723. Hemicyclio, a semi-circular alcove, sufficiently large to admit of several persons sitting in it at the same time, for conversation. R. 14. Admodum may either follow the word it qualifies as here, and in line 24, p. 40, or precede as in line 20, p. 59, and line 2, p. 66. 15. Eum sermonem, that topic of conversation; explained by the next sentence. Incidere. For the tense see p. 15, line 23, note. 16. Fere, almost exclusively, qualifies erat in ore. Multis, dat. of possessor. 17. P Sulpicio Rufo, an eloquent orator and an influential politician, and, until his tribuneship in B. C. 88, an adherent of the aristocratic party. He then proposed measures which were really "beneficial reforms," but which were fiercely opposed by the Senate. He resorted to violence to prevent the adjournment of the assembly which was to act upon them, and then, to secure himself and his cause against Sulla, carried a law transferring the command against Mithridates to Marius. On Sulla's return to Rome he was declared a public enemy and fled, but was discovered and put to death. Utebare. See Lex. sub voce, I. B. For the mood, H. 520, I.; A. 63, I.; B. 1255; A. & S. 266, 3, in fin.; G. 323. 18. Odio. See p. 23, line 11, note. Q. Pompeio Rufo, a zealous supporter of the aristocratic party, and at first a personal friend of Sulpicius. Deprived of his consulship (B. C. 88) by the Marians, he fled from the city, but returned with Sulla, and was placed in charge of Italy during the absence of the latter in the East. The Senate appointed him general of the army of Pompeius Strabo, who, after handing over the command to him, secretly instigated the soldiers to murder him. 19. Conjunctissime. See Lex. Conjungo, in fin. 21. Admiratio, astonishment. The ad has reference to the object of the wonder. The simple word miratio occurs but once in Cicero's works. Querela, lamentation, because pernicious consequences to the State were feared from the enmity of men so influ-

Page

- 35 ential. Itaque tum refers to what precedes, and indicates the time of the discourse. N. 22. Eam ipsam for ejus ipsius rei. A demonstrative pronoun (or a relative instead) is sometimes used in agreement with a substantive, in a suggestive sense, instead of adding that which is suggested in the genitive case. M. 314. Cf. p. 12, line 33, quod studium. 24. C. Fannio. See Introd., p. 125.
- 36 1. Diebus. See p. 24, line 9, note. Africani, i. e. Scipio Africanus Minor. See Introd., p. 124. 2. Libro, abl. of place. In is usually omitted when the contents of the whole book are referred to. M. 273, b, Obs. 1. 3. Arbitratu, according to my own judgment; one of several verbal nouns in u from supines, which are used only in the abl. sing., with a genitive or a possessive pronoun. M. 55, 4; Z. 90. Cf. rogatu, line 9. 4. Saepius. H. 444, 1; A. 17, V. 1; A. & S. 122, Rem. 3; B. 902, in fin.; G. 112, 2. Interponeretur. For the tense, H. 482, 1; A. 57, III., in fin.; A. & S. 258, I., Rem. 2; B. 1171; G. 296, Rem. 2. 5. Coram, probably from con and or. 6. Ageres. See Lex. sub voce, III. 9, a. 7. Scriberem. H. 492, 2; A. & S. 273, 2; B. 1208; A. 64, I.; G. 331. Res, the subject. 8. Nostra familiaritate. See Introduction to Notes to De Senectute, p. 72. 9. Invitus. H. 443; A. 47, VI.; A. & S. 205, Rem. 15, (a); B. 663; G. 123, Rem. 5. Prodessem. For the mood see p. 19, line 31, note. 11. Catonem. See Introduction to Notes to De Senectute, pp. 73–75. He was called Major (sc. natu) to distinguish him from Cato Uticensis, the contemporary of Cicero. 12. Persona, character or personage. In classic Latin it never means person in the sense of individual merely. See Lex. sub voce. 13. Loqueretur. The relative with the subjunct. follows idoneus, and sometimes aptus, to express that for which a person is qualified. M. 363, b. Here aptior and idonea (line 17) are used in the same sense. Strictly the former denotes an active, the latter a passive fitness. D. sub Idoneus. 14. Fuisset. See p. 7, line 38, ferrent, note; and cf. the next line, where the causal clause is introduced by quum. Floruisset refers both to his vigor of mind and body and to his wealth and political position. Cf. p. 8, line 6. 18. Meminisset. See p. 6, line 6, pareat, note. 20. Veterum, of former times. 21. Nescio quo pacto, often, as here, parenthetic and equivalent to an indefinite adverb; somehow. M. 356, Obs. 3. 29. Velim. H. 486, I.; A. & S. 260, II., Rem. 4; A. 60, 2; B. 1178; G. 54, 1. Avertas. H. 493, 2; A. 64, IV.; A. & S. 262, Rem. 4; B. 1204, in fin.; G. 331, 3. See also p. 15, line 38, note, for the different constructions after volo.

Chap. II. 34. For the use of ista see p. 8, line 9, note. The sentence is an assent to some supposed remark of Laelius respecting the calamity which the State had experienced in the death of Scipio. 35. Sed, etc., i. e. But instead of merely lamenting his death, you ought, etc. 36. In te—unum, sc. as the only one capable of filling the place of Scipio in political affairs, or of preserving the republic. Unum, joined with a noun or pronoun, is often used for the adv. solum. Z. 687. 38. Hoc, i. e. this distinction ut sapiens appellaretur. Lr. Modo, i. e. comparatively recently. Cato had already been dead twenty years. In De Off. ii. 21, it is used of a time seventy years, and in Livy xxii. 14, of one twenty-five years distant. See also p. 14, line 32, note. L. Acili-um, a jurist who flourished about 200 B. C., the author of a commentary on the Twelve Tables, and the first Roman who was called by the people Sapiens. 39. Alio, different, sc. from that in which you are considered wise. N. 2. Multarum rerum, sc. 37 agriculture, war, statesmanship, law, oratory, and history. Lr. Usum, experience or a practical knowledge of. N. 3. Multa—ferebantur, many instances were related of his wise forethought, etc. 6. Te—esse sapientem would regularly be the object of existimant in line 15, but on account of the long parenthetical clause intervening, it is repeated under the form hanc—sapientiam. 7. Natura et moribus, disposition and character. Verum etiam, following non solum, introduces something more important than the preceding. M. 461, a. 8. Studio et doctrina, application and learning, the former corresponding to natura, the latter to moribus. Lr. 9. Appellare, sc. talem, the antecedent of qualem, while qualem—neminem is one of the objects of accepimus. 10. Reliqua Graecia, antithetic to Athenis. 11. Septem, sc. sapientes. There was a difference of opinion among the ancients as to the names and even the number of the sages of Greece. Solon of Athens and Thales of Miletus were the most eminent. 12. In numero—habent, i. e. do not regard as philosophers, but only as practically sagacious. Sh. Athenis. For the case see p. 18, line 33, note. Unum, only one, sc. Socrates. 13. Eum—judicatum, sc. in reply to the inquiry of Chaerephon, a pupil of Socrates. The utterance was said to have been as follows :

Σοφὸς Σοφοκλῆς, σοφώτερος δ' Ἐδριπίδης,

Ἀνδρῶν δὲ πάντων Σωκράτης σοφώτατος.

Page

37 15. Omnia—esse, that all your welfare is dependent upon yourself alone. On the sentiment of this and the following clause, cf. Horace, Sat. II. 7, 83–88:

*Quisnam igitur liber? Sapiens sibi qui imperiosus, Quem neque pauperies neque mors neque vincula terrent,
Responsare cupidinibus, contemnere honores
Fortis, et in se ipso totus, teres, atque rotundus, Externi ne quid valeat per leve morari,
In quem manca ruit semper fortuna.*

Ut—ducas, a clause of result in apposition with hanc sapientiam. H. 495, 3; B. 1224. 16. Virtute inferiores, of less account than virtue. 17. Quonam expresses a more lively or emphatic question than the simple word, and the nam answers to the English “pray.” Z. 134. 19. Nonis. H. 708, 2; A. 83; A. & S. 326, 2, (1); B. 1526. This was the regular day of meeting of the augurs. D. Bruti, one of the aristocratic party, consul B. C. 138, and one of the most celebrated generals of his age. He was also the patron of the tragic poet Accius, and was well versed in Greek and Roman literature. 20. Commentandi, deliberating together. Assolet. See Lex. sub voce. 22. Solitus esses. H. 515, II.; A. 61, 3, Note; A. & S. 264, 2; B. 1290. Obire applies to diem by zeugma; to be present on that day, and to discharge that duty (munus, sc. commentandi.) 25. Acceperis. For the mood see p. 6, line 35, putavissent, note. 27. Humanitatis. See p. 12, line 14, note. 28. Collegio, sc. augurum, one of the two original corporations of men especially skilled in religious lore, and charged with the preservation of traditional rules regarding religious observance, in general. Mom. See p. 35, line 1, note. For the number of members of this college, and the mode of appointment to it, see p. 27, line 25, note. Affuisses, a subordinate clause in Orat. Obliq. 34. Constanti, of firm character. See p. 55, line 15, note. 35. Fiat. See line 15, ducas, note. Quod, as to the fact that. H. 554, IV., second paragraph; M. 398, b, Obs. 2; A. & S. 273, 6, (a); Z. 627. Tantum tribui, that so much worth is attributed. 37. Videris. Even in a parenthetic clause with ut, videri is almost always used as a personal verb. Z. 380; M. 400, a, Obs. 38. Aut. See p. 25, line 21, note. 39. Quisquam, regularly used only in negative sentences, but sometimes as here after si, not in a negative sense, but only to increase the indefiniteness which would be implied in 37 aliquis or quis. Z. 709, b. Alia, sc. through which his wisdom was disclosed. N. 1. Filii. See p. 10, line 37, note, and p. 34, 38 line 15 et seqq. Memineram, etc., sc. mortes filiorum ferentes. N.

Paulum, sc. Macedonicum. See p. 10, line 36, note; 2. Calum, p.
 22, line 11, note. In pueris, i. e. when their sons died in boy-hood. Perfecto—viro, mature and honored manhood. 3. Cave.
 H. 535, 1, 2); A. 58, III.; A. & S. 267, Rem. 3; B. 1114; G. 65.
Anteponas. H. 493, 2; A. 64, IV.; A. & S. 262, Rem. 6; G. 335, Rem. 2. Ne—quidem. See p. 8, line 16, note. 5. Hujus, sc.
 Cato. Generally hic refers to the last mentioned, and ille to the more remote, but not unfrequently hic refers to that which is nearer in thought and in its nature. M. 485, a. 6. Ut—loquar, explanatory of the plural habito. For the mood, see p. 7, line 16, note.

Chap. III. 7. Negem. On the force of the present here, see H.
 504, 1; A. & S. 261, 2, Rem. 3. 8. Viderint, subjunct. of desire.
 It is also the conclusion of the conditional cl. si—negem. On the force of the tense, see p. 8, line 5, note. Sapientes, i. e. the Sto-ics, who held that it was the duty of a wise man to be free from the disturbing influence alike of joy and of grief, and to maintain equability of soul. 9. Amico. H. 419, 2, 1); A. 54, VI.; A. & S.
 251; B. 911; G. 189. 11. Certe. See p. 5, line 7, note. Medici- na, sc. for this mental disease, grief. Ipse. H. 452, 1; A. & S.
 207, Rem. 28; B. 1035; G. 100. 13. Quo, ablat. of cause; de- cessu, of time, with the idea of cause involved in it also. Ple- rique, most men. Z. 109, note. 16. Cum illo actum esse prae- clare, that his lot was a glorious one. See Lex. sub Ago, III. 9, b.
17. Neget. H. 486, II.; A. 60, 3; A. & S. 260, II., Rem. 5; B.
 1180; G. 54, 2. 18. Immortalitatem, sc. corporis. Cf. the similar expression respecting the same man in Cicero's oration for Milo, vii. 16: Quem immortalem, si fieri posset, omnes esse cuperent.
Optare vellet, had chosen to desire. For the tense of vellet, II.
 504, 2; A. & S. 261, 2, Rem. 5; B. 1270; G. 384, Rem. 2.
19. Esset. H. 501, I. 1; A. & S. 264, 7; B. 1220, b; G. 426.
20. Jam, already. Puero, in his boyhood, an appositive equivalent to a temporal clause. The same is true of adolescens. H. 363, 3; A. & S. 204, Rem. 1, (a) in fin. 23. Ante tempus. The legal age was forty-three. Scipio was elected at the age of thirty-six, when in B. C. 147 he received the command of the third Punic

Page

- 38 war. Sibi suo tempore, at a time propitious for himself. Chase.
24. Suo. See p. 16, line 28, note. Paene sero, because of the defeats of the Roman army in the Numantine war. Duabus urbibus eversis, sc. Carthage in B. C. 146, and Numantia in B. C. 134.
27. Moribus facillimis, amiability of character. N. Pietate, filial affection, refers to the fact that he gave a legacy, received from his grandmother by adoption, to his mother after her divorce. At her death he gave it to his sisters. 28. In suos. His share of his father's estate he gave to his elder brother. 30. Quid. H. 380, 2; A. 52, 4; A. & S. 232, (3), Note 2; B. 731; G. 129, Rem. 3. 33. Memini, etc. See Introduction to the Notes to the De Senectute. 34. Disserere. For the tense see p. 15, line 23, note. 35. Etiam nunc, sc. at the time of his death, so recent that Laelius includes it in the present. N. Quamobrem, like quare, refers to one definite ground distinctly stated. Arn. 36. Fortuna, gloria. See p. 30, line 33, animo, note. 37. Moriendi, to be constructed with sensum (consciousness) and understood with celeritas. N. 38. Quo genere, sc. celeritas. Difficile dictu est, i. e. It is difficult to form an opinion respecting the cause of his death. 39. Quid — videtis. Some thought that he died a natural death, others that he committed suicide; but it was the general opinion that he was murdered. Various persons were suspected, his wife Sempronia, her mother Cornelia, Gracchus, Fulvius, and Carbo who was most generally believed to have been guilty. "That he became the victim of a political assassination cannot be doubted. The murderer was never discovered, and this much only is clear, that the instigator of the deed must have belonged to the Gracchan party." Mom. 2. Celeberrimos, lit. those days on which large numbers of people were collected together, particularly festal days; otherwise used in Cicero only of places which are frequented, or of things which are much talked about, never of persons in the sense of famous. St. 3. Reductus, the technical term for escorted as a token of respect. See p. 27, line 8, reduci, note. The occasion of this manifestation of respect was his delivery of a speech in the Senate on that day, in which he pledged himself to maintain the claims of the Latins and the Italians to their lands against the Triumviri. See Introduction, p. 124. 4. Populo Romano, here = Optimates. Cf. Somn. Scip. II. Te senatus, te omnes boni, te socii, te Latini intuebuntur, etc. 5. Sociis et Latinis. Before the Social war, B. C. 90, the Roman State comprehended cives Romani, Latini (i. e. citizens of the old Latin towns and the 39 Latinae Coloniae, who had a partial Roman citizenship), Socii, or other inhabitants of Italy in alliance with Rome but really subject to her, and the Provinciales. Dict. Antiqq. 7. Deos, an explanatory addition to ad superos (into heaven); to which, with ad inferos (the lower world) perhaps manes (departed spirits) would correspond. N.

Chap. IV. 8. Neque is used instead of a simple non, when a negative proposition is connected by enim, tamen, or vero. M. 458, b; Z. 808. Iis, sc. the Epicureans. Nuper. The various systems of Greek philosophy began to be taught at Rome a little earlier than the middle of the second century B. C. 10. Interire. See p. 32, line 16, note. 11. Vel — vel. See p. 25, line 21, note. 12. Religiosa jura, sc. those laws which regulated the mode of interment and prohibited the violation of sepulchres. 13. Nihil, accus. of specification. Pertinere agrees with a pronoun referring to jura. 14. Eorum, sc. Pythagoreans. Cf. p. 31, line 39 et seqq. Magnam Graeciam, not a territorial but a collective term for the Greek colonies in Southern Italy. 17. Ejus, sc. Socrates. 18. Cui, uti. The reading of Br. and several other editors. Several MSS., O., and St. have qui, ut in. Cui depends on videbatur to be supplied from the next sentence. Plerisque, most persons, who wavered in their belief respecting the immortality of the soul. 21. Optimo — cuique. See p. 33, line 28, note. 23. Praesagiret, sc. se mox moriturum. Schutz. 24. L. Furius Philus, consul B. C. 136, an able general in the Numantine war and distinguished for his literary culture. Manius Manilius, consul B. C. 149, and commander of the Roman army at the opening of the third Punic war. He was also a jurist, and was called one of the founders of the Jus civile. 26. Disseruit de re publica. Cicero's treatise De Republica, in six books, written in B. C. 54, professes to be a report of a discourse on government delivered by Africanus Minor, B. C. 129, to the persons here mentioned and several others. Only fragments of it are extant. Extremum, i. e. the famous episode in the sixth book of the De Republica, called the Somnium Scipionis, which was quoted entire by Macrobius, and thus preserved. It professes to be Scipio's narrative of a dream in which he had an interview with the departed spirit of the elder Africanus. 27. Fere qualifides de immortalitate. L. Cf. p. 35, line 16, note, and p. 42, line 21. Quae refers to the idea in

Page

- 39 de immortalitate animorum. H. 445, 5; A. & S. 206, (11); B. 678; G. 408, Rem. 2, 1; and cf. p. 7, line 29. 28. Id si — corporis, sc. as represented in the Somnium Scipionis. 30. Evolet. See p. 37, line 15, ducas, note, and p. 40, line 29. 32. Quocirca. See p. 7, line 3, note. Maerere — eventu, the logical subject of sit. 33. Sit. H. 492, 4, 1; A. 64, III.; A. & S. 262, Rem. 7; B. 1215; G. 335, Rem. 3. Sin autem, If on the other hand. M. 442, b. 34. Veriora, ut sit. If a judgment is pronounced concerning the character of an action that is only supposed, by means of an adjective with sum or some equivalent phrase, the subject is expressed either by an infinitive alone or an accusative with the infinitive. Yet such clauses are also found with ut when it is intended to denote at the same time the reality or falsity, possibility or impossibility of the action. M. 374, Obs. 2; H. 556, I. 2; A. & S. 262, Rem. 3, Note 3; B. 1224. 35. Sensus, consciousness. 37. Natus esset. For the mood see p. 7, line 23, note. Its subject is the antecedent of quem. 38. Dum, as long as. Hence erit, in the indicative. H. 522, I.; A. 62, II.; B. 1237; A. & S. 263, 4, (1) in fin.; G. 357. Gaudemus strictly denotes the inward feeling; laetabitur its outward expression, exult, shout for joy. D, sub Gaudere. 39. Ut supra dixi, sc. p. 38, line 16.
- 40 1. Fuerat aequius, it had been fairer. Chase. When it is declared without a condition what might or ought to happen, or have happened, but does not happen, with possum, debeo, etc., or with sum with a gerundive, or with sum with such an adjective as aequum, etc., the imperfect indicative is commonly used to represent present time, to describe that which does not happen, and the perfect and pluperfect indicative to represent the past. M. 348, c, Obs.; H. 475, 4, 1; A. & S. 259, Rem. 4. 5. Conjuncta cura. See Introduction, p. 126. 7. Voluntatum — consensio, entire agreement in tastes, employments, and opinions. 9. Sapientiae fama, reputation for wisdom. 10. Falsa, put for a causal clause. Præsertim. See p. 26, line 37, note. 12. Cordi, delightful. H. 390, I.; A. 51, VII.; A. & S. 227; B. 848; G. 148. 13. Tria — amicorum. Cicero, De Fin. i. 20, 65, remarks that only three pairs of friends are found in all the fictions of antiquity: these were Theseus and Pirithous, Achilles and Patroclus, Orestes and Pylades. In the De Off. iii. 10, 45, he mentions a fourth instance from authentic history, Damon and Phintias. 14. Genere, class. 16. Istuc, i. e.

which you have just expressed; sc. Scipionis et Laelii amicitiam notum posteritati fore. 20. Quid sentias — des, states the plan of the discourse, viz., the worth of friendship, the nature of it, and rules for it. See Introduction, pp. 126-7.

Chap. V. 25. Gravarer, would not be reluctant. See Lex. sub voce, II. Si — confiderem, if I had confidence in my ability or fitness. 26. Res, the subject. 28. Doctorum, sc. by profession, philosophers. Ista, sc. which you wish me to imitate. Eaque is used to connect emphatically a more precise definition of the word to which it refers. M. 484, c; Z. 699. 29. Graecorum, at first of the Sophists, afterward of the Middle Academy. Cf. De Fin. ii. 1, 1: Sophistarum e numero primus est ausus Leontinus Gorgias in conventu poscere quaestionem, id est jubere dicere, qua de re quis vellet audire; also De Orat. i. 22; iii. 22, and 32. Iis ponatur, a subject should be given them. Disputent. II. 501, I.; A. 65, IV. 2; A. & S. 264, 6; B. 1227; G. 426. 30. Subito, without preparation. 32. Petatis. H. 558, I. 2; A. 70, I.; A. & S. 273, 2; B. 1203; G. 331. Ista, i. e. that they are competent to teach on such a theme. 36. Nisi is subjoined to negatives and questions with a negative sense with the signification of but or except. M. 442, c, Obs. 3. In bonis. Cf. p. 56, line 22, inter bonos, etc. 37. Ad vivum reseco. See Lex. sub Vivus, B, 1. He means that he does not deny the possibility of friendship to those who have not attained some extraordinary degree of goodness. 38. Illi, sc. the Stoics, who fixed the standard of goodness so high as to be unattainable by man. Fortasse vere, perhaps rightly in theory. Sh. 1. Sit. H. 516, II. 1, second paragraph; A. 60, 4; A. & S. 260, 41 II., Rem. 3. 4. Usu vitaeque communi, the experience of common life. Hendiadys. 6. C. Fabricium, etc. See p. 10, line 37, note. 7. Ad, according to, is often used in figurative relations to denote a standard or object of comparison. Z. 296 in fin. Istorum. See p. 17, line 31, ista, note. 8. Habeant. See p. 10, line 31, videamus, note. 9. Invidiosum, sc. because pretentious, assuming. N. Obscurum, sc. because a mere abstraction without any corresponding reality in actual life. N. 10. Fuerint. The subjunct. may occur after concedant because it involves the idea of a wish. H. 551, II. 2, 3; A. & S. 262, Rem. 4, in fin.; G. 331; Z. 613, (a). 11. Agamus. See Lex. sub voce, III. 9. Pingui Minerva, a proverbial expression as ut aiunt indicates, in the ablat. absolute; pingui = coarse, 41 and Minerva, here = ingenio; with plain mother-wit, i. e. as common men, not philosophers. L. Cf. Hor. Sat. ii. 2, 3: Crassaque Minerva, and De Off. i. 31, 110: invita Minerva; id est, adversante et repugnante natura. 14. Cupiditas, covetousness. Libido, licentiousness. 15. Constantia. For the case see p. 15, line 23, viribus, note. 18. Naturam, i. e. the teachings of the unperturbed and perfectly developed nature of the ideal wise man of the Stoics. Cf. p. 7, line 5, quod — sequimur, and note. 19. Ita = ea lege. Cf. Somn. Scip. iii.: Homines enim sunt hac lege generati ut, etc.; Tusc. Disp. iii. 24, 59: ea lege esse nos natos ut, etc. 20. Societas, fellowship. Major — accederet, moreover the stronger, the more nearly each one was related. The sentiment is that human society is a consequence of man's constitution or nature; a necessity therefore, and not a choice. L. Cf. De Off. i. 16, 50: Sed, quae naturae principia sint communitatis et societatis humanae, repetendum videtur altius. Est enim primum, quod cernitur in universi generis humani societate; ejus autem vinculum est ratio et oratio, quae docendo, discendo, communicando, disceptando, judicando conciliat inter se homines, conjungitque naturali quadam societate. 22. Peregrini, foreigners, as without the rights of citizens. D. sub Exterus. Propinqui, kindred by blood. D. sub Necessarius. Alieni, strangers. 23. Ea, i. e. that affection for one's kindred which is implanted by nature. 24. Firmitatis. H. 396, III. 2, 4; A. 50, II. 4; A. & S. 212, Rem. 4; G. 168, Rem. 3; B. 771. Hoc. See p. 30, line 33, animo, note. 30. Conciliavit, has united together. 31. Res, the circle. N. Adducta in angustum, drawn together within so narrow a limit. Caritas, any tender affection, especially of parents to children, which shows itself in friendship and voluntary sacrifices. D. sub Diligere. 32. Jungeretur, imperfect for the present, an exception occurring only when there is a possibility of conceiving of the action in its progress, and not merely its result. Z. 514.

Page

Chap. VI. 33. Nisi. See p. 40, line 36, note. 34. Rerum, objective genitive. 35. Consensio, an agreement of opinion. Haud scio an. See p. 25, line 3, note. 36. Nihil. So Br. following two MSS. Most MSS., with O., and St., read quidquam. 39. Beluarum, used with an intellectual reference as an animal destitute of reason. D. sub Animal. Hoc extremum, sc. the preference of pleasure. Sh. Illa superiora, i. e. those objects of preference first mentioned. 3. Praeclare illi quidem, sc. faci- unt. See p. 9, line 31, note. 4. Illi quidem, sc. the Academics and Peripatetics. 5. Esse, exist. Its root, es, denotes continuance of being. 6. Consuetudine vitae, the usage of real life.

7. Quidam docti, sc. the Stoics. 8. Magnificentia. See Lex.
sub voce, B, in fin. Virosque. If a negative proposition is followed by an affirmative, in which the same thought is expressed or continued, que, et, or ac is employed in Latin, where in English we use but. M. 433, Obs. 2. 9. Paulos, etc., i. e. men like Paulus, etc. 11. Qui — reperiuntur, i. e. men of superhuman excellence, whom alone the Stoics consider virtuous, but who have never really existed at all. 13. Opportunitates, advantages. For the meaning and use of queo, see p. 15, line 3, note. 14. Qui.
 See p. 12, line 10, qui, note. Vitalis, worth living, true life.
15. Conquiescit. The reading of Br., and O. Some editors read conquiescat. For the indic., see p. 11, line 15, note. 16. Quicum.
 The old form qui occurs as an abl. sing., but is only used by good writers in combination with the preposition cum, (= quo- cum,) and with verbs in some few expressions as a neuter after an indefinite pronoun understood. M. 86, Obs. 2. Audeas. See p. 40, line 29, disputent, note. 17. Qui. The reading of a few MSS., and Br.
 Most MSS., with O., and St. have quis. In the masculine, quis is both a substantive and adjective, and occurs as an adjective in the older writers (Cic.) chiefly with substantives denoting a person, but often too with others. M. 88, Obs. 1. Quis inquires for the name and existence, qui for the nature and quality. N. Fructus, en- joyment. 18. Ac = as with adjectives and adverbs denoting similarity. M. 444, b. 19. Sine eo supplies the place of a conditional clause. H. 503, III. 2, 2); G. 373. 20. Ferret. See p. 6, line 2, note. 21. Rebus fere singulis, almost always for particu- lar ends only. N. 22. Opes, political resources, power. See D.
sub Divitiae. 25. Res — continet, includes many advantages.
Praesto. H. 353, 2; A. & S. 203, 2; B. 670. 26. Loco. Verbs signifying to abstain, to hinder, to exclude, are followed by the abl. either with or without a preposition, except where a person is specified, when the preposition is always used. M. 262. 27. Aqua, igni, proverbially used, as things essential to human life. Lr.
28. Locis, occasions. When locus is accompanied by a pronoun or adjective, in is often omitted, and almost always when locus has a derived signification. M. 273, b, Obs. 1; H. 422, 1, 1); A. & S.

Page

- 42 254, Rem. 2, (b); B. 937, 2; G. 184, Rem. 29. Mediocri, ordinary. It denotes quality, with reference to worth. D. sub Medius. 31. Qui pauci. See p. 40, line 13, note. 33. Adversas — leviores:

"Such is the use and noble end of friendship,
To bear a part in every storm of fate,
And, by dividing, make the lighter weight."

- Chap. VII. 35. Contineat. With quum — tum when each member has its own verb, the first is often put in the subjunctive to express a kind of comparison between the general and the particular case, the earlier and the later, etc. M. 358, Obs. 3. Cf. De Nat. Deor. i. 1: Quum multae res in philosophia nequaquam satis adhuc explicatae sint, tum perdifficilis et perobscura quaestio est de natura deorum. Illa, sc. commoditate. Omnibus, sc. rebus humanis. 36. Bonam spem. The reading of most MSS., Br., O., and Lr., while St., and N. read bona spe; with praelucet, throws the light of a good hope forward into the future. 37. Debilitari, to be dispirited. Enim. The reading of O., St., Lr., and N. It has also some MS. authority. Br., following most of the MSS., reads etiam. 38. Exemplar. See Lex. sub voce, II. B. 39. Ad-
43 sunt, sc. in their friends. L. 1. Abundant. See Lex. sub voce, 3. 3. Illorum, horum here follow the rule. See p. 38, line 5, hujus, note. 4. Quod si, But if. Quod (properly the neuter accus. of the relative pronoun) sometimes stands before a conjunction belonging to a subordinate clause which begins a period, to denote the connection of the thought with the preceding, especially before si and nisi. M. 449. 5. Benevolentiae, gen. of source. N. H. 396, I.; A. & S. 211, Rem. 1; B. 745. 8. Quanta — sit, the subject of potest. H. 525, 2; B. 1182. 12. Agrigentium — virum, sc. Empedocles, who flourished in the first half of the fifth century B. C. He called the original forces of the universe, which cause existence and dissolution, φιλότης (friendship) and νείκος (strife). 13. Quidem always stands after the emphatic word. H. 602, III., 1; A. & S. 279, 3, (d); M. 471, in fin. Quendam denotes a particular individual, while aliquis and quispiam do not necessarily. Cf. p. 48, 19, quemquam, note. 14. Vaticinatum, i. e. set forth in metre. The reference is to his didactic poem on nature entitled Περὶ τῆς φύσεως, which was written in hexameter verse. 15. Constarent, antithetic to moverentur. For the mood of both verbs, see p. 6, line 35, putavissent, note. Ea, the antecedent of both the preceding relatives, and the object of both the following infinitives. 17. Re probant, i. e. by their conduct prove its truth. 18. Officium, service. See p. 15, line 7, note. Exstitit. See Lex. sub voce, II. 19. Adeundis, seeking, a stronger term than obeundis. N. For the construction, H. 562, 3; B. 1341; G. 218, Rem. 1; A. & S. 275, Rem. 4, Note 2. 20. Efferat. See p. 10, line 8, note. 21. Clamores, shouts of applause. Cavea. See Lex. sub voce, 3. 22. Pacuvii, one of the two most eminent of the tragic poets, b. about B. C. 220, d. about B. C. 130. Nova fabula, sc. the Dulorestes, an adaptation to the Latin stage of the Iphigenia in Tauris of Euripides. Rege, sc. Thoas, king of the Tauric Chersonese, which was the seat of the worship of a goddess whom the Greeks identified with Artemis, and to whom all strangers thrown on the coast were sacrificed. 23. Orestes, son of Agamemnon, who, at the court of Strophius, king of Phocis, formed an intimate friendship with his son Pylades. Going to the Tauric Chersonese by advice of the Delphian oracle, they were arrested and brought as victims to the altar. For the story, see Classical Dict. 24. Ita ut erat, i. e. the real. 25. Perseveraret, stuck to it. Stantes, participle for a finite verb in a co-ordinate clause. See p. 24, line 37, occupatum, note; they rose up, so great was the excitement. N. Ficta, i. e. merely represented on the stage. 31. Qui ista disputant, i. e. the philosophers by profession. 32. Quaeritote. H. 537, I.; A. 58, III. in fin.; A. & S. 267, (3); B. 1112; G. 63. 34. Invitus. See p. 19, line 30, note. 35. Filum, not thread of discourse in our sense of the word, but nature, or quality. 36. Magis, more confidently. Diceres. On the tense see p. 11, line 38, note. 37. Quum — disputatum. See p. 39, line 26, note. 38. Patronus. Because it was one of the duties of a patrician to maintain the cause of his client in court, patronus came to mean a pleader at the Bar, and then advocate in general. 39. Accuratam. See Lex. sub voce. 3. Quid amicitiam? = Quid 44 diceres, si amicitiam eum defendentem audires? Sh. Nonne facile ei, sc. eam defendere. 4. Servatam. See H. 580; A. 72, 2; B. 1357; A. & S. 274, 2, Rem. 5, (a).

Chap. VIII. 7. For the constructions with refert, see H. 408, 2 and 3; A. & S. 219, Rem. 4; B. 811 and 812; G. 179. 8. Studiis, the earnest request. 9. Aequum, reasonable. Obsistere, to act contrary to. 13. Quisque almost always stands in the relative pro-

Page

44 position, commonly immediately after the relative, when a relative and demonstrative proposition are combined. M. 495. 14. Posset, sc. facere. 15. Esset would regularly be in the same tense as desiderata sit in line 12, but is attracted into the imperfect by the verbs in the preceding line. Lr. Sometimes the tense of a dependent clause is governed rather inaccurately, not by the leading clause, but by some remark in another tense inserted between the leading and subordinate clauses. M. 383, Obs. 4. Hoc, i. e. the giving and receiving of favors, as mentioned in the preceding clause, ut dandis—redderet. Amicitiae. The genitive generally follows proprius, especially when the neuter is used as a substantive in the sense of property or peculiarity. Z. 411; M. 290, f. 16. Alia causa, sc. amicitiae. The inquiry of Laelius is whether the cause of friendship is a selfish desire for personal advantage, or an unselfish feeling of affection, and personal advantage an attribute or concomitant of it. 17. Amor, internal love, is related to benevolentia, external friendly treatment, as the cause to the effect. Lex. sub Amor. 19. Ab iis percipiuntur, are acquired or received from those. 20. Coluntur, used for demonstrations of respect toward either gods or men; observantur, toward men only. D. sub Vereri. Temporis causa, on account of a condition of need, i. e. that some advantage needed or desired may be obtained from them. See Lex. sub Tempus, I., B, 2. 23. Natura, used with the preposition a, because regarded not merely as the source, but also as the parent or producer of friendship. Lr. Potius points to the greater correctness; magis to a higher degree. Lr. 24. Indigentia, a consciousness or feeling of need. D. sub Carere. Applicatione, inclination, occurs only here in this sense. 26. Illa res, not friendship alone, but the act of entering into a friendship. St. Quod does not refer to a particular word for its antecedent, but to the natural inclination to friendship which has been spoken of in the preceding sentence. The same is true of quod, in line 30. N. On the use of the relative in this position, see p. 6, line 15, note. 28. Ad quoddam tempus, sc. so long as they need the care of parents. 29. Ut facile—appareat, that their affection may be easily seen. 31. Caritate, any tender affection, especially that of parents toward their children, which shows itself in friendship and voluntary sacrifices; amor is an ardent, passionate love, arising from inclination; diligere (see diligendum, line 37,) is love arising from esteem, a result of reflection on the worth of the beloved object, and free from sensuality and selfishness. D. sub 44 Diligere. 33. Similis, sc. eius caritatis quae est inter natos et parentes (line 31). Lr. 34. Congruamus, harmonize. 35. Lumen, i. e. who is a shining example. Probitatis, uprightness, that kind of goodness which is guilty of no injustice. D. sub Bonus. 36. Perspicere videamur = perspiciamus ut videmur. For the subjunctive, therefore, see H. 520, II. 1; A. & S. 266, 3, Rem.; B. 1257; G. 326, Rem. 38. Quippe strengthens the causal force of the relative word to which it is prefixed; with quum = inasmuch as. 1. Fabricii, Curii. See p. 10, line 37, note. 2. 45

Usurpet, cherish. 3. Viderit. H. 515, II.; A. & S. 264, 2; B. 1290. 4. Sp. Cassium, sc. Viscellinum; a patrician of high rank, consul for the third time B. C. 486, and the proposer of the first agrarian law, an equitable measure designed for the benefit of the plebeians. He was beheaded B. C. 485, on the probably false charge of aiming at regal power, but really that the patricians might be rid of a dangerous opponent. See Mom. I., p. 363. Cicero believed the charge to be true. Sp. Maelium, a wealthy plebeian falsely accused of aspiring to kingly power because he sold grain to the poor at a low price, or distributed it gratuitously in a time of famine, B. C. 440. See p. 24, line 37, note. 5. Est decertatum. H. 465, 2; A. 39, 5; A. & S. 142; B. 453. 6. Pyrrho, king of Epirus, who invaded Italy to assist the Tarentines against Rome, B. C. 280, and who remained there and in Sicily until B. C. 264. Ab altero, the regular construction after alienus, in the signification of disinclined, alienated. It takes the dat. when it means unsuited to. M. 247, b, Obs. 6, and 268, b, Obs. 1. 8. Propter crudelitatem. See p. 31, line 5, crudelissimus hostis, note.

Chap. IX. 10. Quod si. See p. 12, line 6, note. 12. Quid, accus. of specification. 13. Usu. See Lex. sub voce, I. B. 15. Videantur. See p. 6, line 6, pareat, note. 16. Studio perspecto, by perceiving affection or attachment in another toward ourselves. Consuetudine, companionship. 17. Quibus rebus refers to the idea in the preceding line, and is in the abl. absol. of time with adhibitis, added. Motum animi, sc. which springs up on perceiving real worth in another. It refers to animi moveantur, etc., line 12, et seqq., and is explained and supplemented by amoris. 20. Per quem — desideret, through whom each one may obtain what he desires. 21. Humilem, low, mean. 22. Generosum

Page

- 45 ortum, noble origin. 24. Volunt. See Lex. sub voce, II. E.; lit. wish to be true. Quod si ita esset, i. e. If friendship really did have so base an origin. Minimum esse in se, Cf. lines 27–29, and p. 50, lines 13–20. 25. Ad amicitiam, a more frequent construction with adjectives, which denote an aptitude for anything, than the dative. M. 247, b, Obs. 6; H. 391, 2, 1), (2); A. & S. 222, 3, Rem. 4, (1); B. 866; G. 154, Rem. 3. 27. Confidit, relies upon. 28. Nullo. Nullus is used as a noun instead of nemo, in the genitive and ablative. M. 91. Suaque—judicet signifies a kind of self-sufficiency (not in a bad sense) founded on a man's own virtue, an independence, to a certain degree, of external fortune and circumstance. Oxf. Class. Series. Cf. p. 37, line 15. 30. Quid enim, sc. censetis. See p. 9, line 31, note; Z. 769. 31. Mei. H. 399, 2, 2), (3); A. 50, III. 2; A. & S. 213, Rem. 1; B. 776; G. 189, Rem. 2. Ac. See p. 9, line 37, note. 32. Ejus, an instance of one genitive depending on another. Cf. illius furoris, p. 47, line 39. 38. Ut exigamus gratiam, for the purpose of demanding a return. Exigere is the term applied to exacting the payment of a debt. Ox. Cl. Ser. Feneramur. See Lex.
- 46 sub voce, II. 1. Spe. H. 414, 2, 3), second paragraph; A. 54, I., second paragraph; A. & S. 247, Rem. 2, (b); G. 202, Rem. 1. 3. Ab his. The reading of several MSS., Br. and St. O., following other MSS., has At ii; his, neut. plural, referring to the idea in the preceding sentence. Qui—referunt, sc. the Epicureans. Cf. p. 20, line 5, and line 6, note, and p. 41, line 39. 5. Susplicere, raise their thoughts up to. 6. Abjecerunt. See Lex. sub voce, 4. It is used in direct contrast with susplicere. 9. Benevolentiae. H. 396, I.; A. 50; B. 745; A. & S. 211, Rem. 1; G. 158. 10. Significatione, indication, evidence. 11. Applicant—admovent, a case of hysteron proteron. H. 704, IV. 2; A. & S. 323, 4, (2); B. 1381, 2d. Cf. Virg. Aen. II. 353: Moriamur et in media arma ruamus. 12. Usus ejus, his society. 13. Pares has reference to quantity or degree; aequales, to quality or kind; equally strong and of a like nature. N. Cf. p. 53, line 22; and D. sub Aequus. 15. Haec, sc. bene mereri; feminine by attraction. H. 445, 4; A. & S. 206, (10); B. 695; G. 408, Rem. 2, 2. Est. The reading of Br. and O. Several MSS. and St. have sit; other MSS. and editors, fit. 17. Ejus ortus, etc. The derivation of it from nature will be gravior, more noble, sc. because resting on ethical grounds; and verior, more real, because the man who acts from expediency loves not so much his friend as the benefits to be obtained from him. Lr. 18. Utilitas, expediency. 19. Commutata. See p. 44, line 4, note. 20. Idcirco. See p. 16, line 14, note. 21. Ad haec, sc. respondere. 23. Laeli. For the form, H. 45, 5, 2; A. 10, 2; B. 65; A. & S. 52; G. p. 15, Rem. 2. 24. Meo jure, sc. as the elder.

Chap. X. 27. Quae, etc., i.e. which were expressed in our conversations, etc. 29. Quamquam, corrective, refers to line 20 above, and prevents the supposition that Scipio's views had coincided throughout with his own. St. 32. Incidere depends on dicebat, and the oratio obliqua extends to the end of the chapter. 33. Mores, character. 34. Ingravescente, becoming burdensome. 35. Exemplum, proof or illustration. Ex similitudine ineuntis aetatis, the similar case which boyhood presents. St. 36. Summi, See Lex. sub voce, 2, b. 37. Praetexta toga. See Lex. sub Praetexo, (participle,) B. Ponerentur for deponerentur, laid aside. 38. Sin autem. See p. 29, line 19, note. Adolescentiam. See p. 6, line 36, note. Perduxissent, (sc. pueri,) had prolonged. Its object is amores (to be supplied from the preceding clause), which is the antecedent of the subject of dirimi. Cf. p. 26, line 18, perduxisse. 39. Uxoriae conditionis, (lit. the state of marriage,) marriage, which is often the meaning of conditio alone, according to Ernesti, quia (nuptiae) fiunt sub conditione dotis. See Lex. sub Conditio, II. 2. 1. Ali-cujus. Supply alius, and cf. p. 33, line 14, aut multos praesantes. Lr. 2. Quod. The clearness and completeness of the thought demand that quod be taken as a causal particle, and that idem refer to uxoriae conditionis as well as to commodi. St. 3. Labefactari, sc. amicitiam. Honoris contentionem, rivalry for political honors. 6. Optimis quibusque. See p. 20, line 17, note. The plural is used here because the reference is to a pair of friends. N. Ex quo = nam ex eo. It refers to the whole thought preceding — to avarice as well as ambition. 8. Discidia, separations. Justa, sc. of course on the part of those who refuse to do wrong for the sake of a friend. Plerumque is added because, in his view, one should sometimes do wrong for the sake of a friend. Cf. p. 54, lines 38 et seqq. 11. Ad injuriam. Quod. So O. Br., & St., however, have only a comma after injuriam. Quod. See p. 6, line 15, note. Quamvis, an adv. qualifying honeste. 12. Deserere arguerentur, would be accused of abandoning. 13. Obae-

Page

47 qui, to comply with the request of. Illos autem qui auderent, antithetic to Quod qui recusarent in line 11. 16. Eorum, sc. illos (in line 13). Inveterata, habitual. 18. Quasi stands before a word to signify that it is used to express a thing figuratively, and by way of approximation. M. 444, a. Obs. 2. Fata, i. e. calamities. 19. Subterfugere, the subject of videri. II. 549, 2; A. & S. 269, Rem. 3; B. 1151. Sapientiae. See p. 12, line 14, note. 20. Felicitatis, good fortune. Diceret sibi-videri, = sibi videretur. N.

Chap. XI. 22. Quatenus — debeat, i. e. to what extent love for our friends ought to influence our actions. Cf. p. 53, line 17, qui sint, etc. Numme. Ne appended to the other interrogative particles adds emphasis to them. Arn. 23. Caius Marcius Coriolanus, a distinguished patrician, according to the legend, impeached B. C. 490, for proposing that the sales of public corn should be suspended until the people should abolish the tribunate. He became general of the army of the Volscians, marched on Rome, and was only dissuaded from conquering it by the entreaties of his mother, and other matrons. Returning, he spent the rest of his life in exile among the Volscians. How much of this legend is true cannot be determined. Mom. I., p. 360. Ferre. For the tense, see H. 541, 3; A. 57, IV. et seqq.; A. & S. 268, 2; B. 1132. 24. Sp. Cassium Viscellinum. See p. 45, line 4, note. 26. Rempubicam vexantem, sc. by the agrarian laws proposed in his tribunate B. C. 133, the measures taken to secure their enactment, and his efforts to secure his own re-election to the tribunate. Cicero, as well as Laelius, whose sentiments he professes to give, was an adherent of the aristocratic party, and regarded all who had proposed measures for the political elevation of the masses as disorganizers. In the De Off. ii. 12, he remarks of the Gracchi: Nec vivi probabantur bonis, et mortui numerum obtinent jure caesorum. Yet earlier in life, in his second oration, De Lege Agraria, (ch. V.,) B. C. 63, he expressed a very different opinion: Non sum autem ego is consul, qui, ut plerique, nefas esse arbitrer Gracchos laudare; quorum consilia, sapientia, legibus multas esse video reipublicae partes constitutas. 27. Q. Aelio Tuberone, surnamed the Stoic, a nephew of Africanus Minor. He was a tribune in B. C. 133 with Tib. Gracchus, and opposed his measures, and was praetor in B. C. 123. He was also a jurist of some distinction. 28. At, on the other hand, emphatically calls the attention to something different and opposed. It has an adversative force; sed, 47 (e. g. line 35,) a corrective or limiting force. Arn.; M. 437, c. Blossius, a Greek, an intimate friend of Tib. Gracchus, whom he urged to propose an agrarian law. Cumanus, of Cumae, in Campania. 30. Aderam, used technically for legal advice and aid rendered in court. For the tense, H. 469, II.; A. 27, II. 2; A. & S. 145, II. 1; B. 1088; G. 31. At the trial of Blossius, Laelius acted as assistant or adviser to the consuls who were the presiding judges. 31. Deprecatum, to seek to avert punishment. H. 569; A. 74, I.; A. & S. 276, II.; B. 1360; G. 224. Sibi. H. 449, 1; A. & S. 208, Rem. 37, (b,) (1); B. 1024; G. 96, Rem. 2. 32. Tanti. H. 402, III. 1; A. 54, IX. 1; A. & S. 214, Rem. 1; B. 799; G. 176. Fecisset. See p. 6, line 14, note. 34. Etiamne. The ne introduces the principal member of the question, which is understood, sc. id faceres or pareres. 35. Vellet. For the tense, see p. 11, line 38, note. Numquam, inquit, etc. Plutarch (Tib. Gracch. ch. 20) adds, as a part of the reply: For Tiberius would never have laid such a command on me, if it had not been for the good of the people of Rome. 36. Quam nefaria vox. This answer of Blossius has been censured; but the fault was theirs who put such a captious question to him. He saw in Gracchus his own exalted self; and the word he spoke does not disgrace him, but those who wrenched it from him. Niebuhr. 37. The single vel is used by Cicero only to correct a preceding expression, commonly combined with dicam, potius, or etiam. Z. 336. Quam dixit, sc. se facturum esse. 38. Temeritati, the mad scheme. 39. Ilius, sc. Gracchus. See p. 45, line 32, note. 1. Amentia, the abstract for 48 the concrete, like temeritati above. It is abl. of cause and modifies the whole clause to profugit. Quaestione, the technical term for a judicial examination or trial. See Dict. Antiqq. p. 648 and 957. Nova, unusual, extraordinary. The praetors regularly presided over the criminal courts, which took cognizance of capital crimes; but in this instance, the duty of investigation as to the accomplices of Gracchus was committed to a special commission, with the consul Popilius Laenas at its head. Mom. III., p. 120. 2. Ad hostes. Blossius was accused before this court B. C. 132, fled to Aristonicus, king of Pergamus, who was then at war with the Romans, and, when Aristonicus was conquered shortly after, committed suicide. 3. Igitur, then (= a weak ergo), is used in passing from one stage of the argument to another. A. 43, 5.

Page

484. Peccaveris, the fut. perf. for the English present; rare, but found in conditional clauses. H. 473, 2. 5. Virtutis opinio, i. e. the belief of another in your virtue. 9. Perfecta — simus, i. e. if we possess the character of the ideal wise man of the Stoics. For the distinction between the abl. and the gen. of quality, see p. 15, line 23, viridus, note. Si simus, nihil. The reading of Br. and O.; simus, si nihil; of two MSS. and St.; sumus si, of many other MSS. 12. Quos — communis, i. e. such as actually exist in every-day life, not men of ideal excellence. 14. Ad sapientiam, i. e. to the Stoic ideal. 15. Q. Aemilium Papum, consul in B. C. 282 and 278, and censor in B. C. 275. In his first consulship he defeated the Etruscans and Boians, and in B. C. 280 was one of the three ambassadors sent to Pyrrhus. Luscino. See p. 10, line 27, Fabricii, note. 17. Inter se, with one another, reciprocal. H. 448, 1; Z. 300. 19. Quemquam, regularly used in negative clauses where the negative is universal and relates to the whole clause; also with emphasis in other clauses. 20. Quidpiam denotes a single thing which is quite indefinite, with less emphasis than aliquid, but with more than quid. It is used in affirmative propositions, and is of rather infrequent occurrence. Cf. p. 43, line 13, quendam, note. Contendisse. See Lex. sub voce, II. B. 4. 22. Nam introduces a conclusive reason (objective); 31. Enim, a confirming circumstance, the consideration of which depends upon the inclination of the speaker — a subjective reason; 33. Etenim does not differ essentially from enim, yet indicates a closer connection with the sentence preceding. All these particles, however, are often used in Latin in the sense of namely, to introduce an explanation which was announced. Z. 345, Note. 22. Quid attinet. See Lex. sub Attineo, II. 2. 24. Sanctissimi denotes a high degree of morality which rises above the standard of ordinary men, a saintly and holy spirit derived from a principle of piety. D. sub Bonus. Fuerint. H. 518, 1; A. 63, III.; A. & S. 263, 5; B. 1251; G. 369. 25. Nefas, an offence against the gods. D. sub Delictum. 26. At, i. e. in contrast with the course such men would have taken. Sequebantur, espoused the cause of. C. Papirius Carbo, the successor of Tib. Gracchus, as commissioner for distributing the public lands under the agrarian law, tribune B. C. 131, proposer of the law for the use of the ballot in the enactment and repeal of laws, and suspected of the murder of Africanus Minor. After his election to the consulship

B. C. 120, he abandoned his party, defended the murderer of 48 Caius Gracchus, and justified that crime. Accused of some crime, he committed suicide in B. C. 119. He was a man of great abilities, but of no principle. C. Porcius Cato, a grandson of the Censor, and consul in B. C. 114. He afterwards served as legate in the war against Jugurtha, and was won over to the interests of that king by bribery. 27. Minime, sc. acer. Tum, sc. at the time of the tribuneship and death of Tiberius Gracchus. Caius was then in Spain. Nunc, sc. in B. C. 129, at the time when the discussion is represented to have taken place. Idem supplies the place of tamen when two predicates are given to one subject, and are of a different kind. Z. 697. 28. Acerrimus. Cicero has been charged with having fallen into a slight anachronism here; and it is true that, after the return of Caius Gracchus from Spain, he took very little part in public affairs until his tribunate in B. C. 123; yet he was, during this time, one of the triumviri for the distribution of the public lands, and in B. C. 131 he supported the bill proposed by Carbo, respecting re-election to the tribuneship, in an eloquent speech which made a deep impression on both parties.

Chap. XII. 29. Sanciatur, subjunctive of Deire. 30. Rogemus. See p. 33, line 27, note. 33. Eo loco locati sumus = ea rei publicae conditio est. Lr. 35. Jam, already. 36. Spatio, the whole ground (with reference to its extension); Curriculo, the track (with reference to its direction). N. 37. Regnum occupare, to become king. 38. Vel, or rather. See p. 47, line 37, note. Regnavit alludes to his securing the deposition of Octavius from the tribuneship, unconstitutionally, and perhaps to the outcry of his enemies, when he raised his hand to his head in the midst of the tumult which resulted in his death, that he was asking the people for a crown. 2. P. Scipione, sc. Nasica, the son of Nasica Corculum, and the leader of the Senate party in the attack in which Tiberius Gracchus, who was his cousin, was slain. The hatred of the people toward him was so excited by this, that the Senate sent him on a pretended mission to Asia, and he died shortly after at Pergamum. Non queo, always in Cicero in the first person sing. indic., instead of nequeo. Lr. 4. Sustinuimus, we have borne with; i. e. through fear of exasperating the people, already excited by the death of Tib. Gracchus, we have foreborne to punish him or to oppose his measures. 5. Quid exspectem. Lae-

Page

49 lius must refer to the general expectation that Caius, since his character was well known, would attempt in his tribunate to carry out the reforms his brother had initiated. 6. Serpit deinde, etc., states a second example of deviation from the ancient customs. Cf. p. 48, line 35, et seqq. Res refers to the laws respecting the ballot, of which he proceeds to speak. St. 8. Jam ante, i. e. before the tribunate of Tib. Gracchus. Quanta labes. In his second oration, De Lege Agraria, ch. II., Cicero had called the ballot vindicem tacitae libertatis. Gabinia lege. In early times the people voted viva voce in elections and in trials, and with white and black pebbles in the enactment and repeal of laws. The use of the ballot in the election of magistrates was introduced by the Gabinian law in B. C. 139; in courts of justice, except in cases of perduellio, by the Cassian law in B. C. 137, (and this law, when proposed, was advocated by Africanus Minor;) in the enactment and repeal of laws by the Papirian law, B. C. 131; and afterward in cases of perduellio by the Caelian law in B. C. 107. 10. Populum here = plebem. 11. Res maximas agi, the most important matters decided. 12. Haec fiant, these revolutionary movements may be made. 13. Quorsum haec. See p. 9, line 31, note. Sociis, partisans, companions, bound by common interests to act together; to be distinguished from amicus, a friend with whom one exchanges a sacred feeling of love and respect. D. sub Socius. 15. Ejusmodi. See p. 7, line 39, note. 16. Existiment. H. 493, 1; A. 64, I.; A. & S. 262, Rem. 5; B. 1211; G. 334. In magna aliqua re. Instead of re, some texts have republica, and St. has the accus. instead of the abl. 17. Improbis, like bonis in line 14, has especial reference to political views and conduct. N. 19. Impletatis, treason. 22. Propterque invidiam. He was accused of complicity with the Persians and was acquitted, but was soon after ostracized. Cf. Grote, V., p. 279, et seqq. In exsilium expulsus, sc. in B. C. 471. 24. Fecit idem, i. e. ad hostes se contulit. 26. Itaque = atque ita. 27. Mortem — conscivit. It is not certainly known that this was true of either of these men. Cf. Nepos Themist., x. 4; Thucyd. I. 138; Mom. I., p. 360. 29. Tegenda. See Lex. sub voce, II. B. 2. 30. Concessum, sc. esse. Its subject is amicum — sequi, which is the antecedent of Quod, in the next sentence. 32. Haud scio an. See p. 25, line 3, note. 34. Futura. See p. 33, line 7, est interiturus, note.

Chap. XIII. 35. Prima. See Lex. sub voce, II. B. Ut —

petamus. Cf. p. 48, line 30. Petere generally refers to the object wished for; rogare to the person who is applied to. 37. Rogemur. H. 522, II.; A. 62, II. 2; A. & S. 263, 4, (1); B. 1238; G. 359. 2. Aperte, frankly. 3. Adhibitae, sc. auctoritati. 5. Mirabilia, strange sentiments. 6. Persequantur argutiis, make the subject of subtle discussions. 7. Partim = aliis, sc. the Epicureans; logically a partitive appositive — to quibusdam above. The other partitive, Alios, in line 14 below, is changed in construction by dependence on a different verb. N. Instead of alii — alii in the plural, we have sometimes partim — alii. B. 665. Nimias, too strong. 8. Pluribus, sc. than one, i. e. himself and his friend. N. Super = more than, with numerals and sometimes other expressions. Z. 320. 9. Sibi. The addition of sibi to suus is a pleonasm, analogous to the addition of the word own to possessive pronouns in English. Z. 746. Cf. Plaut., Captivi, Prol., line 50: Ignorans suo sibi servit patri. Cuique, dat. of possessor. Implicari, sc. by excess of friendship. 10. Quam intensifies the meaning of the superlative laxissimas by ellipsis of potest. Z. 108. 11. Adducas. See p. 13, line 23, proint, note. 12. Caput, the chief thing. 13. Securitatem, freedom from care. Cicero uses this term to express the εὐδαιμονία of Democritus, the ἀνάσσεια of the Stoics, and the ἡδονή of the Epicureans. St. Cf. De Fin., v. 8, 23: Democriti securitas, quae est animi tamquam tranquillitas, quam appellavit εὐδαιμονίαν. Possit. See p. 6, line 35, putavissent, note. 14. Alios, sc. the Cyrenaics. 16. Paulo ante, sc. in Chap. viii. 18. Expetendas. Strictly expetere means to seek intelligently and from choice; 20. appetere, instinctively and from blind desire. N. 19. Firmitatis refers to strength of moral character; virium, to facultates et opes. St. Haberet. On the tense see p. 32, line 13, note. 20. Mulierculae, the diminutive, to express the feebleness and inferiority of women. L. 23. Beati, fortunate. O praeclaram sapientiam!, ironical. With the next sentence he begins a refutation of the views of the Epicureans. 24. Videntur, must be considered to be doing the same as if. It does not imply any doubt, but is the usual formula for expressing the generally received opinion. L. 26. Ista. See p. 17, line 31, note. 27. Specie. See p. 30, line 33, animo, note. Locis, a technical rhet. term, sometimes as here = ratio or causa. 29. Ve, ah. See p. 25, lines 21 and 22, notes. 32. Aliqua, considerable. Aspernetur. Either the subjunct. without ut or the infin. may

Page

- 50 follow necesse est. M. 373, Obs. 1. 34. Itaque = atque ita, accordingly; denotes conformity between a preceding statement and a following one; 36. Ergo introduces the inference from the discussion which precedes. Lr. 32. Videas. For the person see p. 14, line 23, agas, note. 36. Modestos. See Lex. sub Modestia, II. C. Proprium, a characteristic. 39. Nisi. See p. 12, line 16, nisi, note. Humanitatem, the feelings and affections natural to man. L.
- 51 3. Quid enim interest, etc., verifies the assertion in qui profecto cedit, (p. 50, line 38 et seq.) Motu — sublato, abl. abs. for a conditional clause. See p. 26, line 36, note. 4. Pecudem, sc. that which is without reason; 5. truncum, without feeling; saxum, motionless and lifeless. Lr. 6. Neque enim confirms the affirmative meaning of the preceding question. Lr. Isti, sc. the Stoics. 7. Quandam, used to soften the expression, the speaker meaning to suggest that ferream should not be taken in its literal, but in a figurative sense. Z. 707. Volunt. See Lex. sub voce, II. E. 9. Tractabilis, antithetic to ferream; open to the touch of sympathy. Sh. See Lex. sub voce, II. Bonis, good-fortune. 10. Diffundatur, contrahatur. The reading of Br., O., and Mg. The subject of each verb is virtus, which stands by metonymy for animus virtute praeditus. Lr., or = virtus in amicitia, the exercise of virtue in friendship. Oxf. Others supply as subject (from amici) amicus = animus amici. Diffundantur, contrahantur is the reading of many of the MSS., and of N. and St., of whom the former supplies homines as the subject, and the latter conjectures the omission of animi after amici. 12. Non plus. On the force of the negative, see p. 14, line 21, note. 13. Quam ut, etc. Instead of this form of expression would have been expected quam illae curae et molestiae quas afferunt virtutes tantum valent ut virtutes repudientur. N.

Chap. XIV. Refutation of the views of the Cyrenaics, which were stated in lines 14–23 of p. 50. 15. Contrahat has for its subject the clause si — eluceat. Cf. De Orat. II. 51, 206: Plusque proficit, si proponitur spes utilitatis futurae, quam praeteriti beneficii commemoratio. St. For the mood see p. 28, line 22, sit, note. Ut supra dixi, sc. p. 44, line 36 et seqq.; p. 45, line 10 et seqq.; p. 46, line 9 et seqq. 17. Similis animus, a kindred spirit. Contigit. For the meaning see p. 8, line 8, note. 20. Aedificio, here, a collective term. Cultu has a wider meaning than vestitu

(clothes), and denotes whatever belongs to dress—ornaments, 51 arms, etc. D. sub Vestis. 21. Animo autem.^o The reading of O., St., and Lr., following most of the MSS. Br., however, adopts that of the rest, animante. Eo qui—possit, a supplementary explanatory clause. Cf. p. 8, line 26, eum—recepit, and note. 24. Stu- diorum, personal affection, in which the officia have their source.
 St. 25. Quid? See p. 9, line 31, note. 27. Similitudo, a like- ness, sc. in tastes, habits, and pursuits, 28. Diligant. For the mood see p. 39, line 34, note. 29. Propinquitate, blood-relationship.
 30. Appetentius denotes the longing; rapacius, the actual seiz- ing upon the object of desire. Lr. Sui. See p. 15, line 34, note.
 33. Necessariam, sc. esse, which is omitted only when it is the simple copula, never when a verb of existence. Qui, masculine gender by attraction of fons. See p. 46, line 15, note. Est con- stitutus. H. 531, 4; A. 67, II. in fin.; A. & S. 266, 2, Rem. 5;
 B. 1296, F; G. 440, Rem. 2, 2. 35. Multitudinem, the mass of mankind. Inhumana, inconsistent with the natural affection.
 L. 36. Immunis, usually, exempt from political duties or ser- vices; here, withdraw itself from services to mankind. Lr. See also Lex. sub voce, I. B. 37. Consulere. H. 385, 3; A. 51, IV.; B. 836; G. 145. Soleat. See p. 7, line 38, note. 38. Vulgi, object. genit., mankind in general. 1. Fingunt, falsely suppose. N. 52
 2. Per amicum. H. 414, 5, 1); A. 54, I. in fin.; A. & S. 247, Rem. 1; B. 876, in fin.; G. 199. 5. Tantumque abest ut, etc.
 See Lex. sub Absum, 1, b. 6. Colantur, subjunct. of result and appositive to a pronoun understood, belonging to the predicate. Cf.
 Tusc. Disp. i. 31, 76: Tantum abest ab eo ut malum mors sit, ut verear, etc. See p. 37, line 15, ducas, note. Ut ii—sint. A clause of result may be connected with a demonstrative word preceding, which signifies a measure or degree, as tantum, etc. M. 440, a. See also H. 496, 3; G. 342. Opibus, copiis, ablat. of cause. For the difference of meaning see p. 8, line 6, note. 8. Alterius. H. 409, 1;
 A. & S. 220, 3; B. 787; G. 189, Rem. 1. 9. Haud. See p. 5, line
 6, note, sub voce. Sciam, potential subjunct. The phrase haud scio an acquires the meaning perhaps, and denotes a suspicion that the thing is. A doubt whether a thing is, is expressed by the addition of negatives, as here. M. 453, in fin. Perhaps it is even desirable that our friends should sometimes have some wants to which we may minister. The next sentence explains why it is de-

Page

52 sirabile. L. Opus, it is expedient, denotes an obligation, not of nature (necesse est) or of morality (oportet), but of prudence. D. 10. Decesse, the usual construction after opus est; the subjunctive is rare. Z. 625. Ubi — vniussent, wherein could the strength of my affection have proved itself. N. 11. Nostra, for mea, just as the first person plural is often used when the speaker thinks more of the condition and bearings of the subject under discussion, than of himself personally in distinction from others. M. 483. Cf. also p. 6, line 8, dirimus, note.

Chap. XV. 16. Quam — cognitam, of which they possess neither a practical nor theoretical knowledge. N. 17. Habent, in combination with a participle pass. perf. (e. g. cognitam) of verbs of insight or determination, forms a kind of periphrastic perfect active which at the same time indicates the present condition. M. 427. 18. Fidem. See Lex. sub voce, II. B, 2, in fin. Ut, etc., i. e. ita (ea conditione) circumfluere ut, etc. N. 22. Nimirum in qua = nimirum ea vita, in qua. So Br. and Lr. St. joins nimirum with the preceding clause; O. omits it, although it has good MSS. authority. 22. Fides, confidence. Stabilis benevolentiae, permanent good-will; object. gen. 24. Sollicita. See Lex. sub voce, II. B. 26. Simulatione, a false show, sc. of friendship. 27. Dumtaxat qualifies the whole phrase simulatione ad tempus. St. See Z. 274. Quod si. See p. 12, line 6, note. 29. Quod refers to the idea in the preceding clause, and has the clause tum exsultantem, etc., as an explanatory appositive of itself. Lr. 30. Exsultantem stands in most MSS., and in O. and St. Br. brackets it. 32. Illa, that notorious. H. 450, 4; A. 20, II.; A. & S. 207, Rem. 24; B. 240; G. 91, 2. Superbia, abl. abs. = quum tanta ejus superbia et importunitas fuerit. Z. 472, Note 1. 33. Amicum, an appositive of quemquam. N. 38. Efferuntur. See Lex. sub voce, II. 2. 39. Quidquam, sometimes used for the masculine quisquam. Z. 675. Insipiente fortunato, a fool favoured by fortune. The singular of adjectives is rarely used substantively to designate men of a particular class and kind, and only when the context excludes all ambiguity. In the philosophical style, however, sapiens is often used substantively. To an adjective thus used another adjective is sometimes subjoined. M. 301, a, Obs. 2. Commodis, obliging. 3. Moribus. See p. 15, line 23, viribus, note. Imperio. See p. 27, line 28, note. Potestate, civil authority. 4. Sperti

—novis. Br. brackets this clause, though given in most MSS. and other editions. Indulgeri. Intransitive verbs which in the active voice take a dative, are in the passive used only impersonally and retain the dative. M. 214, b. 5. Facultatibus, abilities. 6. Opibus. See p. 42, line 22, note. 8. Amicos, etc. The conjunctions vero, autem, are often omitted in short adversative clauses, the opposition being indicated by the position of the members of the clause. Z. 781. 11. Ejus. H. 402, 1; A. 60, I. 1; A. & S. 211, Rem. 8, (3); B. 780; G. 162. 14. Inculta, unadorned.

Chap. XVI. 17. Constituendi sunt, etc., a mixture of two constructions—Constituendum est qui sint, etc., and Constituendi sunt in amicitia fines, etc. 18. Fines, limits (as lines); termini, boundaries (as the signs of a bounding-point). D. sub Finis. Diligendi, love arising from esteem, and a result of reflection upon the worth of the object loved. Cf. p. 44, line 24 et seq.; amandi, love arising from inclination which has its ground in feeling, and is involuntary. D. sub voce. 19. Ferri, proposed. 22. Pariter aequaliterque. See p. 46, line 13, note. 23. Quanti. H. 402, III. 1; A. 54, IX. 1, in fin.; A. & S. 214, Rem. 1, (a), (1); B. 802; G. 176. 24. Ipse. See p. 38, line 11, sub voce, note. Faciat, etc., at whatever value each one estimates himself. Most MSS., O., and St. read facit, but they all have faciat in precisely the same sentence on p. 54, line 5. 27. Sit animatus. See p. 33, line 27, note, for the mood. 28. Nostra is the reading of some MSS., though most of them have nostri, which is adopted by O., St., Lr., and N. Z. remarks (424): The place of the subjective genitive of personal pronouns is usually supplied by the possessive pronouns; and the genitives mei, tui, etc., are never used with causa = for my, thy, etc., sake. See also M. 297, and b, Obs. 1. Cf. Epist. ad Fam. V. 21, 2: mea potius quam meorum civium causa. Lr., who admits that nostri is rare, cites Cic. in Verr. Act. II., iii. 52, sui causa. But the reading there is doubtful. St. and N. also admit that nostri can stand only in an antithesis; and they believe it to be used here for the sake of the contrast with amicorum. Causa amicorum, one of the rare exceptions in Cicero to the rule that causa = on account of follows the genitive depending on it. Z. 792. Causa is omitted by N., who says it is superfluous and contrary to rule. Cf. De Nat. Deor. II. 14, 37: Eas fruges atque fructus, quos terra gignit, animantium

Page

- 53 causa, animantes autem hominum, ut equum vehendi causa, arandi bovem, renandi et custodiendi canem. 29. Precari and the other infinitives are explanatory appositives of multa. St. Other editors regard them as the antecedent of quae and the subject of fiunt. 32. Multaque. Que sometimes = and in short, adding a general or universal assertion to a particular statement or statements. Arn. 35. Altera, The second. Regularly this sentence would have been introduced by nec, correlative to nec in line 25. Definit, fixes the limits by, i. e. confines to an equal amount of service and affection. N. 36. Exigue et exiliter, minutely and meanly. Sh. 37. Ad calculos vocare, to call to a reckoning, i. e. make a mere matter of calculation. See Lex. sub Calculos, 2, c. Ut — datorum, i. e. so as to strike a balance between the debtor and creditor
- 54 accounts. Sh. 38. Ratio, a computation, account. 1. Acceperit. Subjunct. by attraction. See p. 6, line 6, pareat, note. 2. Ne quid excidat, etc. Non enim in metiendis amicitiae officiis ac beneficiis par ratio est cum mensuris aridorum (ne quid exoidat) fluidorumque (ne quid in terram defluat), e quibus supra modum congesta exoidunt atque defluunt. Görentz. N. regards excidat as the general term, and defluat as the special term followed by its antithesis. 4. Finis, sc. of friendship. 6. Abjection, dejected. 16. Putaretur, sc. a Biante dictum. Aulus Gellius imputes this saying to Chilon, another of the seven. 17. Biante, of Priene in Ionis, mentioned by Dicaearchus as one of the four to whom alone the title of Sage was universally given. He flourished probably about the middle of the fifth century B. C., and his fame, like that of the other wise men (except Thales), was derived not from his philosophy, but from a certain practical wisdom, the fruit of experience. Dict. Biog. 18. Impuri, here = mean, sordid, and includes in meaning ambitiosi, who seeks the honors, and (19) omnia revocantis, who would make everything serve his own ends. L. 21. Quin etiam necesse erit, etc., i. e. if the precept stated in lines 14 and 15 be adopted. 22. Cupere, strictly denotes the impulsive action of the feelings; optare, a deliberate and well-considered wish. N. See also D. sub Velle. Either the infin. or the subjunct. without ut may follow necesse est. M. 373, Obs. 1. Quam saepissime. Cf. p. 19, line 11, note. 23. Pecceet. H. 551, II. 2; A. 70, I.; A. & S. 273, 2; B. 1204; G. 331. Sibi refers to the subject of cupere, understood. See p. 47, line 31, sibi, note. 29. Ut ne. See p. 49, line 16, note. Quando occurs 54 after ne when the ever is unemphatic, otherwise aliquando is used. Arn. 31. Deligendo, the choice, selection. This is the reading of St., Br., and Lr., and the two latter also read deligendis in line 12, p. 55. The MSS., O., and N. have diligendo and diligendis.

Chap. XVII. 34. Utendum, in construction with esse, is more frequently impersonal, as here. M. 421, Obs. 2. 39. Caput agatur, used, not only when life, but also when the rights of liberty, citizenship, or family were at stake. See Lex. sub Caput, III. 1, b. 1. Via, sc. recti. 2. Sequatur. See p. 12, line 30, note. Qua- 55 tenus, a rel. adv. denoting a limit, with the antecedent omitted; i. e. there is a point beyond which indulgence cannot be granted. 3. Neo vero, etc., our good reputation ought not to be neglected, sc. propter amicum. 4. Res, sc. publicas. Cf. p. 10, line 32, note. 5. Blanditiis, complaisance, (saying what is pleasing to another;) assentando, shunning contradiction for the sake of flattery. See D. sub Assentiri. 6. Virtus — caritas, antithetic to quam — turpe est. Virtus, here, not virtue in general, but those virtues which win the esteem of others. L. 8–14. The thought here is borrowed from Xenophon's Memorabilia (II. 4). 8. Omnis sermo, etc., who spoke on every opportunity, etc. Cf. p. 46, line 27: quae saepissime, etc.; p. 35, line 3: omni sermone; and Acad. I. 4, 16; omnis ejus oratio. Hence querebatur = was wont to complain. 9. Omnibus, sc. aliis. 11. Farandis. In the oblique cases the part. fut. pass. generally supplies the place of the part. present pass., i. e. it has the meaning of a continued passive state. Z. 652. 15. Firmi, immovable, those who hold a firm position from which they cannot be driven by others; stabiles, not changeable or vacillating in their disposition; constantes, those who always act in accordance with their convictions of right. St. 17. Expertum agrees with the subject of judicare. St. For the voice, see p. 6, line 33, adepti, note. 19. Prudentia. See p. 52, line 39, insipiente, note. Sustinere, to hold in check. 20. Currum. The reading of several manuscripts, and adopted by Br., O., and Lr.; the course of his chariot. A few MSS. read currum, which St. thinks makes the comparison much clearer. Quo refers to the whole of the preceding clause, and = ut eo. In a few cases quo is equivalent to a simple ut, or has the meaning that thereby. M. 440, Obs. 5. 22. In parva pecunia, in a matter involving a lit

Page

55 money, sc. which they may gain by disregarding friendship. Lr. 23. Leves, worthless. 25. Sin. See p. 29, line 19, note. 27. Honores, the most comprehensive expression, including priesthoods, the rank of senator and knight, triumphs, and other special demonstrations of honor; magistratus, civil offices; imperia, see p. 27, line 28, note; potestates, any just and lawful power; opes, see p. 42, line 22, note. 29. Multo modifies the magis in ma-lint. N. 32. Consecuti sint. See H. 516, III.; A. & S. 263, 2, (4); B. 1281; G. 398. St., and Lr., following some of the MSS., read sunt. Obscuratum iri agrees with a neut. pronoun understood referring to the idea in the preceding clause. This infin. is less frequent than the circumlocution by means of futurum esse or fore with ut and the subjunct. Z. 594. The meaning is: that their neglect will be concealed or placed in a dim light by the magna causa, so that it will appear trifling, and be overlooked or forgotten. N. 34. Qui — versantur, i. e. who engage in political affairs. 36. Invenias. For the person see p. 14, line 23, note. Honorem, i. e. political offices and honors. Quid? See p. 45, line 30, note. 37. Graves, painful. 38. Calamitatum socie-
56 tates, participation in the calamities of others. 1. Facile is one of a few adjectives which stand in the neuter with a supine, even when they properly refer to an active infinitive as their subject, and are followed by a proposition which ought to depend on this infinitive: inventu (= invenire) qui descendant. M. 412, Obs. 1. Quamquam, for Quamquam enim. The sentiment is: Ennius indeed says correctly that a sure friend proves himself to be such when one is in need, yet many persons do not prove themselves such; especially do these two things convict, etc. N. Ennius, b. B. C. 239, d. B. C. 169, the earliest and one of the most distinguished of the epic poets, and regarded by the Romans as the parent of their literature; an intimate friend of Scipio Africanus Major. 3. Amicus, etc. For the metre see p. 13, line 31, note. 4. Haec duo refers to the last two clauses of the sentence. Levitatis, fickleness. For the case see H. 410, II.; A. & S. 217; A. 50, IV. 2; B. 793; G. 174. 5. Bonis rebus, sc. enim. 6. Malis, sc. amicorum. Utraque re, each case, i. e. his own prosperity, and his friend's adversity. Sh. 7. Se praestiterit, has proved himself.

Chap. XVIII. 12. Simplicem, sincere, opposed to multiplex in line 16, 13. Consentientem, congenial, 16. Tortuosum, morally crooked, wily. 17. Consentit, is like-minded. 18. Ad-56

dendum est, like accedit, (to this is to be added,) is followed by ut with the subjunct., after the analogy of verbs signifying it remains, follows, etc. See M. 373, Obs. 3, and the gram. references in note to line 2, p. 11. 21. Tracto. For the tense see p. 11, line 28, note.
Fit verum illud, the truth of the assertion is established. N.
 22. Initio dixi, sc. in line 36 et seqq., p. 40. 23. Eundem, often used where something new is said of a person or thing already mentioned, to denote either similarity (also) as here, or a contrast.
 M. 488. 24. Ne — simulatum, the first of these two principles of action, stated as a precept (a subjunct. clause of mixed purpose).
 The second is put in the form of an infin. clause (27. deinde non solum, etc.) in apposition with haec duo. 26. Fronte, by his looks or outward appearance. 29. Aliquid, i. e. some right of friendship or regard for it. N. 30. Oportet. For the meaning see p. 52, line 9, opus, note; for the mood which may follow it, p.
 15, line 25, note and references. 31. Sermonum, conversation.
 32. Tristitia, melancholy, antithetic to remissior, more cheerful, and liberior, more unconstrained; Severitas, sternness, antithetic to dulcior, more genial, and proclivior. N. 33. Illa. See p. 27, line 38, note. 35. Comitatem, kindness, a moral virtue; facili- tatem, a social virtue. D. sub Humanitas.

Chap. XIX. 36. Loco, subject. 38. Veteribus, old, refers simply to length of time; vetulis, (strictly, a diminutive,) old and therefore worn out, useless; vetustatem (p. 57, line 4) refers to the superiority of age. D. sub Antiquus. 3. Quaeque. See p. 57 20, line 17, note. 5. Multos modios, etc., a proverbial expression; a very long intimacy is requisite that, etc. 6. Simul, strictly, refers to time; una, to place. Munus. See p. 15, line 7, officii munus, note. Ut expletum sit, that the work or duty of friendship (which consists in effecting a complete harmony of souls) be fully performed. N.

"Friendship is no plant of hasty growth;
 Tho' planted in esteem's deep fixed soil,
 The gradual culture of kind intercourse
 Must bring it to perfection."

7. Novitates, new things, here especially, new friendships; antithetic to veterrima quaeque (line 3). 8. Appareat. For subjunct.
 see p. 41, line 10, note; and gram. references in note on line 27, p. 33.

Page

- 57 9. Vetustas, abstract for concrete. 10. Vetustatis et consuetudinis, long-continued companionship. 11. Quin ipso. O. inserts etiam in, and many MSS. and St., et in, after Quin. As to the force of Quin, see H. 498, 3, 4); A. & S. 262, Rem. 10, Note 9; Z. 542; M. 375, c, Obs. 4. 12. Quin eo. The reading of several of the best MSS., and of Br., and St. Other MSS. and editions have qui non eo. 13. Quo, dependent on uti to be supplied from utatur. 18. Parem esse, to conduct one's self as an equal of. Excellentiae quaedam. Qualities when attributed to several persons are frequently used in the plural. The plural in this case often denotes different species of the same quality. Z. 92. 20. Philo. See p. 39, line 24, note. 21. P. Rupilio. As consul, B. C. 132, he prosecuted with the utmost cruelty all the adherents and friends of Tib. Gracchus, and for this was condemned in B. C. 123. In 131 B. C. he was proconsul of Sicily. Sp. Mummio, a brother of L. Mummius who conquered Corinth, and a man of some distinction as an author. These three men were prominent members of the aristocratic party, and friends of Scipio. See Introduction, p. 125. Anteposuit, avoided all assumption of superiority to. 22. Maximum, Q. Fabius Maximus Aemilianus, eldest son of L. Aem. Paulus Macedonicus, and adopted by Q. Fabius Maximus Cunctator. In his youth he was a pupil of Polybius. He served in the last Macedonian war, was consul in B. C. 145, and encountered and defeated Viriathus in Spain. See Introduction, p. 125. 23. Omnino, concessive. See p. 14, line 36, note. 25. Colabat. See p. 33, line 6, colitote, note. Esse ampliores. Cf. Cicero's definition of Amplitudo (De Invent. II. 55, 166): Amplitudo, potentiae aut majestatis aut aliquarum copiarum magna abundantia. 27. Praestantiam, pre-eminence in. 28. Impertiant communcentque. Cf. p. 42, line 33. Ea. For the gender, see p. 12, line 2, note. Suis. H. 386; A. 51, V.; A. & S. 224; B. 826; G. 144. 29. Proximis, relatives. 30. Imbecilliores — fortuna. Cf. p. 54, line 6 et seqq. 32. Fabulis, legends. Cf. p. 59, line 2. Ignorantionem, sc. on the part of others. 33. Stirpis, family, has reference to natural descent; generis, rank, to nobility of birth whether divine, royal, or princely. N. Famulatu, used in a patriarchal sense. D. sub Servus. 37. In veris, etc., antithetic to in fabulis, in line 32. Veris, the opposite of simulatis; certis, of dubiis. N.

Chap. XX. 1. Conjunctionis by the side of amicitiæ denotes connections of any other kind, especially those of kindred. N. 5. Quorum = sed eorum. See p. 6, line 15, note. Plerique, the majority. Z. 109, note. 7. Officose, conformably to duty; amice, from affection. L. Suo, on their own part. 8. Queant. For the usage, see p. 15, line 3, note. Odiosum genus, in apposition with plerique. 9. Officia exprobrantium, casting in your teeth the kindnesses they have done you. 11. Quamobrem, i. e. Because the inequality when it makes itself felt is wont to cause such evils, therefore, etc. Submitters. See Lex. sub voce, I. B. 2. 12. Inferiores extollere. The reading of Br., following most of the MSS.; and he adds that inferiores is accusat. not nominat.: so ought they to raise up their inferiors. Laelius proceeds in line 17 et seqq. to show to what extent this should be done. Halm and O., however, insert se after inferiores. 14. Ipsi. For the usage see p. 38, line 11, sub voce, note. Non fere, scarcely ever. 18. Tribuendum, ought to be bestowed. 19. Ille, the subject of possit, (to be supplied from possis above,) on which sustinere depends. 20. Quamvis, however much. See p. 28, line 22, quamvis, note. 23. Lucium, sc. Rupilius Rufus. 24. Deferre, bestow, a technical term used with reference to the honors of State. N. 25. Sustinere, i. e. what he is qualified for. Omnino. See Lex. sub voce, II. C., and cf. p. 60, line 4. For a different meaning, see p. 14, line 36, note, and p. 65, line 20. Corroboratis — aetatibus, for a temporal clause; i. e. one ought not to pass judgment until then. See p. 10, line 34, infirmis corporibus, note. N. 28. Habere depends on judicandum est, to be supplied from judicandae sunt; i. e. nor ought it to be judged that they should have those as their intimate friends, etc. Necessarios, any one to whom one is bound by a permanent connection, whether of an official kind or of a private nature. D. sub voce. 30. Paedagogi, (from which the English "page,") like the παῖδαγωγοί among the Greeks, were slave-attendants of the sons of the noble and wealthy, from the sixth or seventh year until the time of assuming the toga virilis, accompanying them to and from school, and on all occasions out of doors, charged with their personal safety, and employed to guard from evil rather than to give instruction. Quintilian expressly distinguishes them from the praeceptores. Vetustatis, long intimacy. 31. Qui is referred by most editors to nutrices et paedagogi for its ante-

11 — Cic. de S.

Page

- 58 cedent. L., however, refers it to eos, (line 28,) and regards the clause Isto — postulabunt as parenthetical, on the ground that a Roman knew that he ought to feel some gratitude to nutrices and paedagogi, while friendship with them was out of the question; and that the difficult thing was to know what to do with his youthful companions whom he had once loved. 32. Aestimandi. The MS. reading is est, which N., St., and O. consider a gloss and omit. O. remarks that this est seems to have been corrupted from sunt after some participle had been lost, as colendi (ed. Veneta a 1470) or amandi or diligendi. N., and St., regard alio quodam modo as an adjunct of negligendi non sunt, to be supplied from the preceding clause. Br., however, reads aestimandi, and Mommsen aestimandi. Aliter refers particularly to the first clause of the sentence omnino amicitiae, etc. (line 25). 34. Mores, characters, the subject of sequuntur (result from). N. 37. Nisi quod, except that. Z. 627. Quanta maxima. See p. 19, line 11, note. 38. Distantia, used by Cicero only here. 3. Neoptolemus, a son of Achilles and grandson of Lycomedes of Scyros, who was summoned to Troas after his father's death, in consequence of an oracle which had declared that Troy could not be taken unless one of the descendants of Aeacus was among the besiegers. 5. Impedientem = the imperfect of an attempted action. Cf. divident, p. 9, line 15, and lenientem, p. 24, line 10. For this use of the imperfect see p. 65, line 1, transferebatur, note. 6. Res, occasions. Discedendum, a temporary separation, not a rupture of friendship. 7. Desiderium, grief on account of their absence. 8. Infirmus — natura, weak and unmanly in character. St. 9. Justus, complete, perfect, one who fulfils all the conditions of friendship. L. 10. Quid ab amico, the construction always found after postulo instead of two accusatives. M. 228, b, Obs. 1.

Chap. XXI. 13. Necessaria, unavoidable. 14. Vulgares, i. e. those of common life. See Introduction, p. 127. 16. Tum — tum, often used, like modo — modo, as an adverb of time. Z. 723. Quorum, sc. vitiorum in alienos erumpentium. N. 17. Redundet, a relative clause of result. 18. Remissione usus, by a lessening of intercourse. St. Catonem dicere, that Cato said. For the difference of meaning between this phrase and Catonem dicentem audiri, see p. 6, line 13, note. 19. Dissuendae — discindendae. Cf. De Off. I. 33: Amicitias, quae minus delectent et minus probentur, magis decere censent sapientes sensim dissuere, quam repente praecidere. 21. Nec connects its clause with the two preceding taken together, (neque rectum neque honestum.) In nec the opposition is stronger and sharper than in neque. Arn. 22. Alienatio denotes the internal withdrawing of friendly feeling; disjunctio, merely an external separation. 27. Communibus, ordinary. Cf. vulgares, in line 14. 30. Bellum gerere, to be an enemy. 31. Q. Pompeii, sc. Nepotis, gained the election to the consulship for 141 B. C., in opposition to Laelius, by assuring Scipio that he did not intend to become a candidate for it, and then entering upon a vigorous canvass after he had thus thrown the friends of Laelius off their guard. Dict. Biog. Meo nomine, on my account. 33. Re publica, politics. Metello, Q. Caecilius Metellus Macedonicus, a colleague of Scipio and Laelius in the augurship, yet a political opponent of Scipio, as well as of the measures of the Gracchi. It is related of him, however, that he conducted his opposition to Scipio without any bitterness or malice, and was one of the first at his death to recognize and acknowledge his greatness. Dict. Biog. 34. Graviter, with deliberation, not from caprice or passion. Auctoritate — acerba stands in the relation of an explanatory appositive to graviter: without using his personal authority, or exhibiting his hostility, in a bitter manner. N. 36. Sin. See p. 29, line 19, note. 37. Exstinctae, to have died out; oppressae, to have been destroyed by violence. Cf. p. 29, lines 32–34. 3. In 60 culpa sit, i. e. may be seen to be in the wrong. 4. Omnino. See p. 58, line 25, sub voce, note. 6. Ut ne. See p. 49, line 16, note. 9. Praeclara. Respecting the omission of the verb, see p. 9, line 31, note. 10. Omni ex parte, in every respect. 16. Per se, i. e. because it is itself noble and good, and therefore worthy of admiration (objective); propter se, for its own sake, i. e. without reference to any ulterior advantage (subjective). Sh. Nec ipsi sibi exemplo sunt, etc., nor do they perceive in themselves the beautiful (qualis) and lofty (quanta) meaning of this friendship. N. Nec ipsi se intuentes et considerantes vident, quae sit vera amicitia. St. 19. Ipsae. The reading of most MSS., Br., and St. O., has ipso. For the usage see p. 38, line 11, note. 20. Quod idem, this same motive. 22. Alter idem, a second self. 23. Bestiis, living things without reason; the general term, the first member of the appositive to which is volucris, nantibus, agrestibus, and the second, cicuribus, feris. 24. Ut — diligent, in apposition with hoc. See p. 37, line 15, note. 29. Natura, abl. of cause. 31. Mis-

Page

60 ceat, relat. clause of purpose. See p. 13, line 23, quae — prosint, note. Unum ex duobus, Cf. p. 64, line 8 et seq.; Hor. Carm. I. 38: Virgilium . . . animae dimidium meae; and Shakspeare's phrase: "two seeming bodies, but one heart."

Chap. XXII. 32. Perverse refers to the head; impudenter, to the heart. St. 37. Tractamus. For the tense see p. 11, line 28, note. 1. Aequitate, justitia. For the difference in meaning, see Lex. sub Aequitas, 2. Cicero elsewhere contrasts aequitas, equity, with jus, the law. 4. Colent denotes the outward demonstration of respect; 5. diligent, the inward feeling of love; verebuntur, a feeling of reverence bordering on fear. Cf. p. 33, line 6, colitote, note. Inter se, one another. 7. Verecundiam, here = mutual respect. 11. Ea quae summa sunt, explained by summum naturae bonum, below. 13. Quos, the shorter form of the indefinite after si. H. 190, 1; A. & S. 138, Note; B. 250; G. 104. On the position of inter, see p. 34, line 17, note, and cf. quo-ad, quam-ob-rem, quo-cum. 14. Eorum, where we should expect is, referring to societas, and attracted to the gender of comitatus. Ad, in respect of. Z. 296. 15. Comitatus, here = the abstract term companionship. 16. Societas, the fellowship. 17. Honestas, honorableness of character; with the following nominatives, in apposition with omnia. 20. Quod, sc. ut beata vita sit. 25. Eos experiri, put them to the test. Quocirca. See p. 7, line 3, note. 26. Dicendum est saepius. Cf. p. 55, line 16 et seqq., and p. 60, line 6. 28. Quum — tum. For the difference in meaning see p. 35, line 13, tum, note. Negligentia, on account of our carelessness. 29. Deligendis. The reading of St. Br., and O., have diligendis; but see p. 54, line 31, and note. Praeposteris, beginning at the wrong end, having that first which ought to be last; i. e. we act before we deliberate; we become friends of others before proving their character. L. 30. Acta agimus, lit. do what has been already done; then a proverb. expr. = labor in vain. See Lex. sub voce, III. 10, and cf. Ter. Adolph. II. 2, 24. 31. Implicati ultro et citro, when we have been closely attached mutually. 32. Usu, intimacy. Officiis, kind offices.

Chap. XXIII. 34. Quo, wherefore. Rei, sc. friendship. For the case, A. & S. 211, Rem. 2, (c); II. 396, II.; A. 50, III. 1; B. 746; G. 158, 2. 36. Uno ore, unanimously. 37. A multis. The MSS. and most editions begin this sentence with Quumquam. Multis then refers to those who do not know that friendship cannot exist without virtue. 38. Venditatio means, 1st, offering 61 anything for sale; 2d, a boasting of its worth; 3d, exaggerating its worth for the sake of effect, an ostentatious display; ostentatio, mere pretence, false show. D. sub Jactatio. 1. Cultus, style 62 of living. 6. Omnes ad unum = all even to the very last man, including the last himself. Z. 296. 7. Ad rem publicam, to politics, i. e. statesmen; rerum — doctrinaque, = a scientific knowledge of things, and the whole clause means philosophers. N. 9. Otiosi, i. e. not engaged in public affairs. 10. Vitam — nul- lam. Cf. p. 42, line 14: qui potest esse vita vitalis. 11. Liberaliter, in a manner befitting a freeman. 12. Nescio quomodo. H. 525, 4; A. & S. 265, Rem. 4; A. 67, I. 1, Note; B. 1189; G. 252, Rem. 2. See also p. 33, line 23, note and cf. 17 nescio quem. Athenis. For the case cf. p. 18, line 33, note. Timonem, sur- named the misanthrope, because, in consequence of ingratitude experienced and disappointments suffered from friends, he se- cluded himself entirely from the world, admitting no one to his society but Alcibiades. Diet. Biog. 18. Possit. The subjunct. here follows the indicative in the condition, because required by the very nature of the thought; potential subjunct. See H. 511, I.; B. 1269. 19. Virus. For the form see H. 47, II.; A. 10, 9; A. & S. 51; B. 72, 3; G. p. 14, Exc. 22. Usquam, used for the most part in affirmative propositions, usquam in negative. 26. Cuique = et cui. 27. The clause Quod — solitum (esse) is the subject of auditum (esse). 28. Archyta. See p. 18, line 31, note. Ut opinor, inserted not to indicate doubt, but to make the quotation less formal. Lr. 31. Illam = illarum rerum. See p. 35, line 22, note. 32. Fuisset. See p. 37, line 22, note. 34. Semperque. See p. 42, line 8, viroque, note.

Chap. XXIV. 37. Quum, although. Eadem. See p. 56, line 23, note. 39. Quae. See H. 410, 3, 1); A. & S. 218, Rem. 1; A. 50, IV. 1, in fin.; G. 172, Rem. 1. 1. Usus, intercourse. 2. Suspi- 63 cionum. The plural of abstract nouns is often used to denote a repetition of the same thing or its existence in different objects. Z. 92. 3. Tum — tum — tum. See p. 59, line 16, note. Elevare, to lessen, i. e. efficere ut minus gravis sit offensio. St. 4. Subeunda, en- dured, submitted to; the reading of Br., O., and Lr. Most MSS. and St. have sublevanda. Offensio, ground of offense. 5. The clause introduced by nam explains una illa offensio. 8. Andria, the name of a comedy of Terence, first exhibited in 166 B. C.

Page

- 63 Familiaris meus. See Introduction, p. 125. 10. Obsequium, etc., Act I., Scene 1, 41. For the metre see p. 13, line 31, note. 14. In eo, sc. amicum (in line 13). 15. In fraudem impellitur, lets himself be swept away into self-deceit and the ruin consequent upon it. N. Cf. De Off. I. 26, 91: Cavendum est, ne assentatoribus patefaciamus aures, neve adulari nos sinamus; in quo falli facile est. Tales enim nos esse putamus, ut jure laudemur. Ex quo nascuntur innumerabilia peccata, quum homines inflati opinionibus turpiter irridentur, et in maximis versantur erroribus. 16. Ratio et diligentia, careful consideration. N. 17. Monitio, used only here in Cicero. 18. In obsequio, etc., indicates the limits within which complaisance is not an evil. 19. Terentiano verbo, i. e. the expression quoted or borrowed from Terence, merely. 21. Non modo, sc. non. See p. 17, line 2, note. Libero. See p. 52, line 39, insipiente, note, for the substantive use of the adj. 22. Aliter — aliter = aliter — ac, otherwise than. Z. 712. Cum tyranno. Cf. p. 52, line 21 et seqq. 27. Illos, hos here follow the general rule, in meaning. See p. 29, line 1, note. 32. Quod contra. See p. 34, line 17, note.

- Chap. XXV. 38. Adulationem, blanditiam, assentationem, different forms of flattery. The first, sycophancy, is a seeking to gain favor by an unworthy subserviency, and has its origin in a degrading, servile spirit; blanditiam, fair speaking, in the endeavor to be amiable, or at worst in self-interest; assentationem, in cowardice or weakness. D. sub Assentiri. 1. Quamvis qualifies multis, as many as possible. 2. Notandum. See p. 19, line 33, sub voce, note. Levium, unprincipled. 3. Ad voluntatem, i. e. to gratify the wishes, sc. of friends. Ad often denotes purpose. Z. 296. 5. Judicium, i. e. the power of judging. Id. sc. verum. 6. Repugnat. See Lex. sub voce, II. B. 7. Valere, i. e. vim aut pondus habere. St. 9. Qui. See p. 12, line 10, note, sub voce. Unoquoque is emphatic, and denotes each individual in opposition to some individuals, or every one absolutely; quisque is unemphatic, and denotes every one distributively or relatively. 10. Unus, antithetic to multiplex; idem to varius and commutabilis. St. 12. Devium, variable. 14. Convertitur = se accommodat. St. 15. This line is from the Eunuchus, (Act II., Scene 2, 21.) The metre is comic iambic tetrameter. See p. 12, line 10, note. Negat, says no. Ait expresses affirmation. D. sub Dicere. 17. Gnathonis, a parasite. Persona. See p. 36, line 12,

note. 18. Levitatis, folly. 19. Gnathonum. See p. 10, line 37, 64 Fabricii, note. Sint. See p. 9, line 15, esset, note. Its subject is multi—similes. Loco, family, lineage. 21. Vanitatem, empty words, fluttery. Auctoritas, explained by loco—superiores above. Secerni, discerned. 24. Contio, abbreviated from conventio, the popular assembly. D. sub Concilium. 25. Popularem, one who supports the popular party against the optimates, i. e. a demagogue in the opinion of Laelius and of Cicero. Cf. Cic. in Cat. iv. 5, 9: Intellectum sit, quid intersit inter levitatem concionatorum et animum vere popularem, saluti populi consulentem. 26. Inter, frequently repeated after interesse, occasionally also in other connections, particularly in the poets. M. 470, Obs. 2. 27. Constantem. See p. 55, line 15, note. 28. C. Papirius Carbo. See p. 48, line 26, sub Carbo, note. 29. Legem de tribunis, etc. In his tribuneship B. C. 131, he proposed a law allowing the re-election (reficiendis) of tribunes to that office as often as the people pleased. See Introduction, p. 124. 33. Comitem. Scipio was then a homo privatus, holding no office. Diceres. On the tense see H. 486, III. 4; A. & S. 260, II., Rem. 2; A. 60, 1, in fin.; B. 1278. 34. In manibus. See p. 9, line 20, sub voce, note. 36. Q. Maximo. See Introduction, p. 125, and p. 57, line 22, note. 37. Lex de sacerdotiis, a bill proposed 145 B. C., transferring the power of filling vacancies (cooptatio) in the colleges of priests from those bodies themselves to the popular assembly. Though the attempt to procure its passage failed then, it was afterwards carried in 104 B. C. Crassus was then a tribune of the people. 38. Videbatur, indic. in an interrog. clause because meministis is parenthetical. See H. 525, 5, 2; A. & S. 265, Rem. 1, in fin.; B. 1191; G. 252, Rem. 1. 1. Beneficium. Honors and offices which the people conferred were often called beneficia populi. L. Transferebatur. For the signification of the tense see H. 469, II. 1; A. & S. 145, II. 4; B. 1089; G. 31, b. 2. Instituit, introduced the custom. In forum versus. The rostra stood between the comitium (originally the place of assemblage of the comitia curiata) and the forum, (where the plebeian assembly met,) which together constituted the Forum Romanum. Up to that time public speakers had addressed themselves to the aristocracy. Agere. See Lex. sub voce, III. 9. 3. Vendibilem, i. e. adapted to gain favor with the multitude, like a commodity which recommended itself to purchasers, taking, acceptable. Religio, here used in its strictest meaning,

Page

65 reverence for the gods, springing from a careful pondering of divine things. Servius (ad Virg. Aen. 8, 349), Augustine (Retract. I. 13), and Lactantius (IV. 28), derive the word from religare, and the last mentioned quotes the expression of Lucretius (1, 931), arctis religionum animum nodis exsolvere. But in favor of its derivation from relegere, to gather again and again, to go through or over again in reading, in speaking, or in thought, are the following considerations: 1st, Cicero's statements, De Nat. Deorum II. 28: Qui autem omnia, quæ ad cultum Deorum pertinerent, diligenter retractarent et tamquam relegerent, sunt dicti religiosi ex relegendo, ut elegantes ex eligendo, et tamquam a diligendo diligentes, ex intelligendo intelligentes; his enim in verbis omnibus inest vis legendi eadem, quæ in religioso; II. 3: Religione, id est cultu Deorum; De Invent. II. 53, 161: Religio est, quæ superioris ejusdam naturæ (quam divinam vocant) curam, caerimoniam affert; 2d, the form of the participle in a verse quoted by A. Gellius, IV. 9: Religentem esse oportet, religiosum (here = superstitious) nefas; 3d, the various meanings of religio which (according to Freund) follow more naturally from the idea of the careful pondering of divine things. Cf. also the language of Arnobius: Non enim quæ sollicite religit et immaculatas hostias caedit . . . numina consentiendus est colere, aut officia solus religionis implere. Nitzsch (Theol. Stud. u. Krit. I., p. 532) has even attempted to prove that according to the genius of the Latin language, the only possible derivation is that of Cicero. See also Donaldson's Varronianus, p. 407. 6. Re, by its own real merit. If Laelius had been consul it might have been said that his success in this cause was owing to his official position, (summa auctoritate.)

Chap. XXVI. 8. Quod si. See p. 12, line 6, note. Id — con-tione, parenthetic and = of which one kind is the popular assembly. N. 9. Loci plurimum, the most favorable opportunity.
13. Tuumque, sc. apertum. 14. Amare, amari, objects of habeas.
15. Quamquam, And yet. See p. 5, line 7, note. 16. Quamvis.
See p. 28, line 22, note. 18. Ita fit, etc. The self-deceiver runs the most risk from flattery, because he is prepared to let it work on him by his own good opinion of himself. The only defense against flattery is the hard lesson to know oneself; the first part of which lesson is a reasonable self-distrust. L. 20. Omnino, when concessive, and followed by sed or autem, is used in anticipating an objection. Amans sui. The present active participle often expresses not a simple act or a momentary condition, but a 65 permanent quality or condition. It is then followed by a genitive.

Z. 438. 22. Virtutis opinione, an unfounded or exaggerated belief in one's own virtue. 23. Praediti—volunt. Cf. Sall. Cat.
 LIV. 5: Esse quam videri bonus malebat. 25. His, dat., limits adhibetur. 26. Vanam, false, deceitful. 27. Laudum. See Lex.
sub voce, II. A. 32. For the metre of this line see p. 13, line 31, note. It is from the Eunuchus of Terence, (Act III. Scene 1,) and is a question put by the boastful soldier Thraso to the parasite Gnatho. Agere, historical infinitive, the question repeating the words used by Gnatho in giving an account to his master of his interview with Thais, the mistress of Thraso, to whom the latter had sent a present by him. St. 33. Ingentes, huge, immense.
34. Auget, exaggerates. Cf. Juvenal, Sat. III. 100–103:

Rides, majore cachinno

Concutitur; flet si lacrimas conspexit amici,

Nec dolet; igniculum brumae si tempore poscas,

Accipit endromidem; si dixeris, aestuo, sudat.

38. Animadvertant, beware. For the mood, H. 558, VI.; A. 70,
 I.; A. & S. 273, 2; B. 1208; G. 331. 2. Nemo non, every one. 66
4. Nec facillime. A case of litotes, i. e. the emphatic assertion of a thing by denying its opposite. 5. Etiam adversando saepe assentetur. II. 519, 3, 1; A. 63, II.; A. & S. 264, 8, (2); B.
 1253; G. 427. On the sentiment L. quotes Plutarch's words:
 Some persons, by mingling freedom of expression like a sharpish sauce with flattery, take away from flattery its nauseating insi-pidity; by their boldness and babbling over their cups, striving to make their yielding in matters of business and their assent appear the way of those who are overpowered by superior wisdom.
6. Det manus, sc. as a sign of surrender, like a vanquished soldier or gladiator. 7. Illus sit, sc. by the flattery. Plus, sc. than the flatterer. 10. Ut me hodie, Br., and O.; Tu me hodie, Halm, Lr.; Hodie me, (with ut in Epiclero prefixed,) St., N.
11. Versaris. See Lex. sub voce, I. B, 2. Illuseris. The reading of Br., and Lr. For the form, H. 248, I. 2; A. & S. 171, 3; B.
 352; G. p. 80, Rem. 3, and p. 81, in fin. Halm and O. have eluseris; most of the MSS., ut jusseris; St. and N., emunxeris.
 The verses are from a comedy by Caccilius Statius, called Epi-

Page

66 clarus or the Heiress. For the metre see p. 13, line 31, note. 15. De hac—posse, i. e. such as is attainable by men, not the ideal wisdom of the Stoics. Cf. p. 41, line 2 et seqq., and p. 48, line 9 et seqq. 16. Ad leves—oratio. Cf. p. 59, line 14 et seqq. 17. Illa prima, sc. the sentiment nisi in bonis amicitiam esse non posse, p. 40, line 36 et seq. Cf. also p. 56, line 22. 18. Aliquando. See Lex. sub voce, 2, f.

Chap. XXVII. 19. Virtus, virtus. O. reads Virtus. The Roman notion of virtus was the energy of devotion to one's country, and country itself was the highest moral idea. St. 21. Convenientia rerum, an agreement in (all) things. Cf. p. 41, line 33, omnium rerum consensio. 25. Sive, sive, i. e. call it which you please. With sive—sive (by which, however, only nouns and adverbs, and not verbs, can be connected with this signification), it is left undecided which member is the right one, as a thing of no importance, so far as the purport of the sentence is concerned. M. 436, Obs. Cf. p. 25, line 21, note. Utrumque, i. e. amor and amicitia. 26. Amando; amare. The gerund (which has only the oblique cases) is used to express the meaning of the present infinitive active (that is, the absolute meaning of the verb), when the infinitive ought to stand in some particular case (not the nominative). M. 413. 27. Diligere quem ames. For the difference between the two verbs, see p. 53, line 18, diligendi, note. Indigentia. For the meaning, see p. 44, line 24, note; for the construction, H. 420; A. & S. 257, Rem. 7; A. 54, X.; B. 972; G. 203. 28. Nulla utilitate quaesita. Cf. De Nat. Deor. I. 44, 122: Quam (amicitiam) si ad fructum nostrum referemus, non ad illius commoda, quem diligimus, non erit ista amicitia, sed mercatura quaedam utilitatum suarum. Quae tamen, etc. For the sentiment, cf. p. p. 46, line 16. 31. L. Paulum. See p. 10, line 36, note; C. Galum, p. 22, line 11, note; P. Scipionem Nasicam, a son-in-law of the elder Africanus, p. 22, line 23, Scipionis, note. 32. Ti. Sempronium Gracchum, also a son-in-law of the elder Africanus, and father of the Gracchi. He was tribune of the people B. C. 187; praetor B. C. 181, distinguished for his generalship in Hispania Citerior, and his wise and able administration of that province; consul B. C. 177 and 163; censor B. C. 169; and was as amiable a man in his private and family life as he was great in his public career. 34. Scipionem. See Introduction. Furium, sc. Philum, see p. 39, line 24, note; Rupilius, Mummium, p. 57, line 21, note;

36. Tiberonis, p. 47, line 27, note. 1. Rutilli Rufi, a military 67 tribune under Scipio in the Numantine war, consul 105 B. C.
While legatus in Asia in 95 B. C., he repressed the extortions of the publicani with so much honesty and firmness that in revenge they secured his banishment in 92 B. C., on a false charge.
Though recalled by Sulla, he refused to return, and died at Smyrna. A. Verginii, a fellow-pupil of Rutilius in jurisprudence under P. Mucius Scaevola, pontifex maximus. Nothing further is known of him. 3. Alia [ex alia] aetas. So Br., from a conjecture of Orelli. Lr. reads e nostra ut alia aetas. St. and O., following the MSS., read alia aetas = a generation different from our own, one to which we are not adapted. 4. Aetas. See p. 8, line 20, note.
5. E carceribus ad calcem. See p. 34, line 2, note. 7. Res hu- manae. Cf. p. 40, line 34. 8. Diligamus. See p. 13, line 23, quae — prosint, note. 10. Mihi, etc. Cf. p. 43, line 2 et seq. 14. In manibus habui denotes immediate contact. N. 16. Animo aut spe suscipiet, undertake or venture to hope for. N. 17. Imagi- nem. See Lex. sub voce, II. A. 23. Numquam — ne — quidem.
On the force of this double negative, see p. 8, line 16, note. 24.
Senserim, a restrictive clause. H. 501, I. 3; A. & S. 264, 3; G.
422; M. 364, Obs. 2. 25. Una domus, etc. See Introduction, p.
126. 28. Cognoscendi atque discendi. According to St. a case of hendiadys, like cognitione doctrinaque (p. 62, line 8) — scien- tific or theoretical knowledge. N. calls cognoscendi the general term and discendi the special term, increasing our knowledge and our learning. 30. Recordatio et memoria together give the idea of living recollection; hendiadys. N. For the strict difference of meaning between them, see p. 32, line 20, note. 35.
Aetas ipsa, even my age. 1. Haec — dicerem. Cf. the conclusion 68 of the De Senectute, p. 34, line 38 et seqq., and note. 2. Ita locetis, place so high in your esteem.

THE END.

CHASE & STUART'S CLASSICAL SERIES.

EDITED BY

THOMAS CHASE, A.M., GEORGE STUART, A.M.,
PROFESSOR OF CLASSICAL LITERATURE, & PROFESSOR OF THE LATIN LANGUAGE, Haverford College, Central High School,
Penna. Philada.

References to

HARKNESS'S LATIN GRAMMAR,
ANDREWS & STODDARD'S LATIN GRAMMAR, BULLIONS & MORRIS'S LATIN GRAMMAR,
AND
ALLEN'S MANUAL LATIN GRAMMAR.

THE publication of this edition of the Classics was suggested by the constantly increasing demand by teachers for an edition which, by judicious notes, would give to the student the assistance really necessary to render his study profitable, furnishing explanations of passages difficult of interpretation, of peculiarities of Syntax, &c., and yet would require him to make faithful use of his Grammar and Dictionary.

It is believed that this Classical Series needs only to be known to insure its very general use. The publishers claim for it peculiar merit, and beg leave to call attention to the following important particulars:

The purity of the text.
The clearness and conciseness of the notes, and their adaptation to the wants of Students.
The beauty of the type and paper.
The handsome style of binding.
The convenience of the shape and size.
The low price at which the volumes are sold.
The preparation of the whole Series is the original work of American Scholars.

The text is not a mere reprint, but is based upon a careful and painstaking comparison of all the most improved editions, with constant reference to the authority of the best manuscripts.
No pains have been spared to make the notes accurate, clear, and helpful to the learner. Points of geography, history, mythology, and antiquities are explained in accordance with the views of the best German scholars.

We desire also to direct the attention of teachers to the advantages to be gained by the use of these books over those which give only "as much Latin as it is necessary to read in order to enter college." It is intended that the Series shall comprise complete editions of the classical authors usually read in our schools, and that the combined price of the several preparatory volumes of the Series shall not exceed the price of the incomplete works referred to. Teachers preparing students for college can thus have the privilege of selecting such portions of the different authors as they may desire the student to read, or as the particular college for which the student is fitting may require, with the advantage to the scholar of possessing the remaining portions of each author to read and refer to as time may permit or inclination dictate. The different authors, moreover, will be bound separately, in neat books, easy and convenient to handle, instead of being bound together in cumbersome volumes. These certainly are advantages which the practical teacher will appreciate.

The generous welcome given to these books, proves very conclusively that they are well adapted to the wants of the classroom. Already they have been adopted in every State in the Union, and the publishers have the proud satisfaction of stating that they are at this time the standard text-books in more than

One Thousand Schools,

and the number is daily increasing. Among these are many of the largest and most important classical institutions in the country.

The publishers desire to acknowledge their indebtedness to the teachers of Latin throughout the country who are using these books, for the high position that has been accorded to them. Grateful for the very flattering welcome they have received, we pledge ourselves that the subsequent volumes shall in all respects equal those already issued, and that the entire Series shall be

In Scholarship	Inferior to None.
In Appearance	The Most Attractive.
In Binding	The Most Durable.
In Price	The Most Reasonable.

To those teachers who do not use them we suggest the consideration of two facts :

1. Large and permanent success follows only real merit.
2. Such success has been attained by these books.

And we are confident that if you will inquire into the merit which has insured this success, you will reach the same conclusion that hundreds of other teachers have done, and find that they are well worthy of the commendation bestowed upon them.

The Series, when complete, will consist of

CÆSAR'S COMMENTARIES.

FIRST SIX BOOKS OF VIRGIL'S ÆNEID,

with Lexicon, Notes, &c.

VIRGIL'S ÆNEID.

CICERO'S SELECT ORATIONS.

HORACE'S ODES, SATIRES, AND EPISTLES.

SALLUST'S CATILINE AND JUGURTHINE WAR.

CICERO DE SENECTUTE, et DE AMICITIA.

VIRGIL'S ECLOGUES AND GEORGICS.

LIVY.

The Cæsar's Commentaries of the Series has just been revised, and the present edition contains the following important improvements :

The Lexicon now contains every word found in the text.

The quantity of every doubtful penult is carefully marked.

An improved and considerably enlarged body of Notes.

A Geographical Index.

An Index of Proper Names.

The following books of the Series are now ready. Due notice will be given of the publication of the remaining volumes.

CÆSAR'S COMMENTARIES on the Gallic War. With Explanatory Notes, a Vocabulary, Geographical Index, Map of Gaul, Plan of the Bridge, &c. By Prof. GEORGE STUART. Price by mail, post-paid, $1.25.

FIRST SIX BOOKS OF VIRGIL'S ÆNEID. With Explanatory Notes, Vocabulary, Remarks on Classical Versification, Index of Proper Names, &c. By Prof. THOMAS CHASE. Price by mail, post-paid, $1.25.

VIRGIL'S ÆNEID. Containing the Twelve Books of the Æneid, but without a Vocabulary. With Explanatory Notes, Metrical Index, Remarks on Classical Versification, Index of Proper Names, &c. By Prof. THOMAS CHASE. Price by mail, post-paid, $1.50.

CICERO'S SELECT ORATIONS. With Explanatory Notes, Vocabulary, Life of Cicero, List of Consuls during his Life, Plan of the Roman Forum and its Surroundings, &c. By Prof. GEORGE STUART. Price by mail, post-paid, $1.50.

HORACE'S ODES, SATIRES, AND EPISTLES. With Explanatory Notes, Metrical Key, Index of Proper Names, &c. By Prof. THOMAS CHASE. Price by mail, post-paid, $1.50.

SALLUST'S CATILINE AND JUGURTHINE WAR. With Explanatory Notes, Lexicon, &c. By Prof. GEORGE STUART. Price by mail, post-paid, $1.25.

CICERO DE SENECTUTE ET DE AMICITIA.

With Explanatory Notes, &c. By E. P. CROWELL, Professor of Latin, and H. B. RICHARDSON, Instructor in Latin in Amherst College. Price by mail, post-paid, $1.25.

We believe that a careful examination of these books will prove that

As Classical Text-books

They have no Superiors.

COMPOSITION AND RHETORIC. A Text-Book for Schools, Academies, and Colleges. By

• JOHN S. HART, LL. D., Principal of the New Jersey State Normal School. Price by mail, post-paid, $1.50.

Dr. Hart has been engaged for at least one-third of a century in the practical duties of the school-room, and for years past has made a speciality of the subject of which the present volume treats. He thus brings to his work a full knowledge of the wants of both teacher and scholar in this important branch of education, and he has spared no pains to make the book eminently practical and adapted to use in the class-room. The peculiar features of the book are apparent, and, we believe, combine all the elements of a popular and successful text-book. The author's own style of composition, so remarkable for its rhetorical excellence, gives to his work the advantage of being on every page a model of what it teaches.

The typographical arrangement is such as to please the eye, and, at the same time, enable the teacher to assign for memoriter exercises, only the more important rules, definitions, etc., leaving the argumentative and descriptive portions to be either committed to memory, studied in some more general way, or used as a reading or class exercise, as the teacher may deem most expedient.

